Our productive, goal-orientated society has put tremendous pressure on the individual to succeed. This produces anxiety and tension, which leads to high blood pressure, which leads to heart attack...to ashes, to dust. The incredible pressure of society has also created a rapidly rising number of psychological problems and when the pressure becomes too great, reliance on drugs and alcohol and even suicide. These three releases, pressure outlets if you will, are dramatically on the increase. And of course our love of the TV has created a void of communication in our lives which has caused frustration, depression an the gradual dissolution of the family. There are mor family problems, such as teenage runaways, chil abuse and divorce, now more than ever before a communication breaks down and the pressures o society on each family member mount.

There are many other problems associated wit our way of life, too numerous to mention. But, t prevent our society from slipping into that drear nation of robots, similar to the anthill, we must b aware of the situation at hand. We must be able t look at ourselves and society, analyze our problem and their causes, and most importantly, work t remedy our maladies. We, as a class, must go out and confront this problem. To remedy it, we must strive for moderation in life — once again the Golden Mean.

We cannot abandon technology and revert to a world of chaos. Instead, we must learn to control technology and production for our own benefit. We must control technology and not let it control us. We should be human beings first, producers a distant second.

But, as producers, we must also maintain our sense of pride and personal importance. As people, we must realize that there is much more to life than that which is man-made. Many of the best things in life are indeed free and naturally enriching. And if we do not lose sight of the necessity of moderation to bring about happiness, we will truly all be very happy in life. Thank you very much.

Summer carillon recitals on the common

Saint Stephen's Church will hold carillon recitals on Cohasset Common every Sunday afternoon this summer from 4 to 5 p.m.

The series which is free to the public, will run 14 weeks from June 20 to September 19.

Carol Jickling Lens will be the "carillonneur" for the opening recital June 20. Ms. Lens is associate carillonneur at St. John the Divine Church in Houston. She is a noted performer throughout the United States and Europe. The program on June 20 will include Beethoven's "Ode to Joy," French and English folksongs, "Amazing Grace" and eight other numbers.

ST. STEPHEN'S CARILLON

The 51-bell carillon of St. Stephen's Church is one of over one hundred fifty such instruments in North America. Housed in the tower of the Church it is one of the fine carillons of the world, and has contributed much to the furtherance of an art that dates back to the 15th century. It is the gift of Mrs. Jane W. Bancroft, in memory of her mother, Mrs. Jessie M. Barron, for many years a member of St. Stephen's Parish.

The bells were cast at Croydon, England, by the firm of Gillett and Johnston. At the time of their installation in 1924 they were twenty-three in number. An addition of twenty more bells came in 1925, and eight larger bells were added to the lower register in 1928.

Carillons range in size from twenty-three bells, to the seventy-four bells of Riverside Church, New York City, whose largest bell weighs more than twenty tons. The variation in the St. Stephen's Memorial Carillon is from the smallest bell weighing twelve pounds to the largest (called the "bourdon") which weighs 11,760 pounds. The total weight of the bells is 64,084 pounds.

A regular series of summer recitals were instituted in 1924 when Kamiel Lefevere was called carillonneur. Those concerts were made possible by the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, and later through an endowment instituted by Mr. and Mrs. William Cox and Mrs. A. Werk Cook.

A carillon is played from a clavier which is arranged like a large piano keyboard, except that small round oak levers spaced two inches apart take the place of ivory keys. The carillonneur presses or strikes the levers with his fingers or the side of his hand to play the smaller bells and presses pedal levers with his feet for the bass notes.

The bells do not move, but are struck by the clappers which are connected to the keys by a simple lever system. Since all the action is mechanical, the player can make the sound loud or soft at will, emphasizing particular notes or melodies.

Carillon bells are tuned in order to produce concordant harmony in a chromatic scale. Each bell-note, when struck, produces five tones: (1) the fundamental, which is the note itself; (2) the hum note, which is an octave below the fundamental or strike note; (3) the nominal, which is an octave above the fundamental; (4) a minor third; and (5) a fifth above the fundamental. The charm and quality of bell music is due to the presence of this combination of tones, giving the carillon its richness and beauty of sound.

SUMMER FILM SERIES

Unfortunately, for the first time in five years the Recreation Department will not be able to conduct the 8-week summer film series. The loss of this program is due to the unavailability of films from the Boston Public Library. Last year the BPL stopped lending most of their feature length films to communities in the library systems. Films that are available are quite old and usually short. Last summer we experimented showing these films and found that the films did not hold the attention of the viewing audience, hence, many discipline problems arose due to lack of interest in the older, black and white films.

The Recreation Department has never had budget money for movies and the program, in previous years, was an effort between the BPL, Cohasset Public Library and the Recreation Department. We hope the situation will change in the future.

SPECIAL EVENT

From time to time special events such as kite flying contest or sand castle contest will be conducted. You should watch local news media regarding these programs and events.

FALL-WINTER ACTIVITIES

Recreation Department fall program registrations will be held during the month of September. Most programs will begin during the first week of October. We plan to offer about 20 fall programs for ages 5 through seniors. Most programs will have a minimal registration fee and registration must be done at th office.

During the late summer the department plans to publish a new brochure depicting services, programs, and activities offered by the Cohasset Recreation Department. All programs are filled on a first-come-first enrolled basis. Non-residents will be signed up on a space available basis for an extra $1 fee charge. Registration notices will be in all local news media and given out in school during the first week of September.

Further information regarding all programs and activities may be obtained by calling the Recreation Office at 383-6791.

Clams and mussels are harvested at low tide, whether five in the morning, or twilight. First a trip to town hall for a permit to dig clams, then off to the mudflats. On a weekday you often have only the gulls for company on the flats, screeching and flapping their wings in protest of your invasion of their roost. Little foot-high geysers shooting up through slimy mud help to locate just the right spot to harvest clams. Most of us remember that both clams and mussels should be alive, which means the shells should be firmly sealed. They will open easily once they're cooked. Few can resist steamed clams, dipped in butter, but for an appetizer, cherrystone clams can be served as

BAKED AND STUFFED CLAMS

Remove clam from shells. Fill scrubbed shells with a mixture of ground clams, minced bacon, shallots, green pepper and parsley moistened with white wine. Top with bread crumbs. Broil briefly.

Like the gulls who eight months out of the year swoop and glide over deserted beaches, we find summer sands lure sun worshippers from near and far. Now it's the city that loses it appeal as friends and relatives recall it's been a while since they've paid us a visit — just about eight months to be exact. A beach permit, a spare bedroom and a reserve shelf stocked with food are requisites for a summer on the South Shore. It doesn't hurt to have a casserole in the freezer, either, when a sunny June weekend beckons. Rice, tossed salad and rolls to serve four would go nicely with Ellen Gudgeon's

SCALLOPED SCALLOPS

1/4 c. butter
1/2 c. bread crumbs
3/4 c. cracker crumbs
1/2 c. milk
Salt and pepper

Like money in the bank, one feels well prepared when a tasty appetizer is stashed away in the freezer. Marge Trout's friend, Martha Johnson, shared this recipe with her which can be prepared and frozen when you have a spare minute.

CHEESE BALLS

1 stick butter or margerine
1 c. flour
1 c. rice krispies
1 c. shredded sharp cheese

Shape into balls and freeze. Bake for approx. 15 min. at 350 degrees to serve hot.

Tree Farm dream becomes reality for Cohasset firefighter

By Mike Berger

Tom Finegan, a 27-year old Cohasset firefighter, has reached a life-long dream — to own a tree farm.

Money, said Tom, will not lure him away from his dream — not even a developer's offer of double the land's worth.

Tom and his wife Joyce bought 23 acres of woodland in the west end of Scituate a year ago. The property abuts Scituate conservation land, and in acquiring it, the young couple outbid the conservation commission.

Firefighting comes first to Tom and for Joyce, working for the federal government takes up most of her week.

They spend evenings and weekends clearing the field. They are hoping for a bumper crop in a few years of Christmas trees, blueberry and apple trees, tomatoes, cauliflower, beans, peas, potatoes and lettuce.

Interviewed in the fields he had rototilled, Tom wearing a large brown cowboy hat said money cannot buy the sights and sounds of the woods.

He hates the thought of condominiums or housing developments filling up open space.

"I can't see condo's here. I'm very much interested in conservation and preserving wildlife. When my neighbors heard that I wanted to build the farm, they were tickled pink. They don't want a shopping center or condo's here. I agree with them. The land should stay green."

The only housing Tom will want is his own log cabin in a few years.

The Finegans were recently offered $35,000 for their property although much of the land is wet. They bought the land for $16,500.

Tom said a developer was willing to pay him $35,000 in cold cash right then and there. Joyce and Tom refused. "Maybe if the offer was $100,000 I might have listened but I flatly said no," laughed Tom.

Tom was born in Fairfield, Conn., and Joyce is a Cohasset native. Tom grew up near a large farm tract and always wanted to "own and work on a piece of land."

"In fact, when I get more money, I'd like to buy a lot more land. I'm very excited about the potential of this. The best part is to be alone all day, although Sunday is a little noisy because there's a hunting club near here."

Joyce, interviewed at her office said, "I feel great about our farm. It's exciting that we are building something for the future."

The Finegan's don't have any children but are investing in the future. "We want our children to have a chance to enjoy nature. Maybe we'll have a 4-H club someday.

On his pickup truck is a slogan for National Arbor Day — "Say Trees and Smile."

Legally, the burning season is from January to March but for agricultural purposes, he is able to burn year round. He thanked Scituate Fire Chief Walter Steward for checking the rules.

Tom is renovating an old gas tank as a water pumper. He hopes 100 gallons per hour will be flowing soon. A year ago, 40 of his jugs were vandalized and the windshield was broken on his four-wheel pickup. He is also building two gate chain fences to protect his property.

GYPSY MOTHS

"I can only do so much. I'm ground spraying what I can. But 23 acres, I can't really combat. I'm told to expect that this year will be worse than last year. I tell you, last year looked like winter in the summer," said Tom.

He pointed to the bark of a tree where the egg masses are hidden. "They're there. Sometimes last year all you could hear was the munching."

NATURE FINDS

Tom is beginning an historical archives collecion. He has found horseshoes, silver spoons and artifacts from 100 years ago when cattle were raised.

His property is rich in natural wildlife such as ruffled grouse, wood duck, foxes, racoons, rabbits, snow-shoed hare and hawks.

"I love our farm because we can get away from the city. It's a lot of hard work but we're young and strong," she said.

A year ago, the Finegans bought the property which was solid woodland. Old stone road fences line the property which was once used to raise cattle and cornfields. Five acres have been cleared and 200 seedlings have been planted.

Tom and Joyce expect firewood will produce the only income from the farm for several years. The big payoff will come eight to 10 years down the road when the blue spruces and scotch pines mature. The first major crop (five years later) will be 99 blueberry bushes.

Tom has worked with the Plymouth County Extension Service and Conservation District to determine what plants will grow best on his rocky land.

For example, he found a plot of soil which is acidic and wet five to six feet underground; suitable to grow blueberries. He plans to begin growing apple orchards next year.

"I test the soils myself," said Tom. "Anything else I send to the Coop Extension Service."

Tom figures only five of his 23 acres are plantable. The rest of the land is too rocky. Fifteen acres will be used for wood cutting and to grow Christmas trees. He expects to plant as many as 400 blue spruce trees.

Since buying the woodland, Tom has sold 50 cords of wood. He was told the land had a woodcutting potential of 10 cords per acre.

"If I didn't restore the trees, I wouldn't cut them at all. Really, what I am cutting now pays for the restoration. But I don't want to strip the land."

Tom is "scared to death" of a woodfire and is worried about vandals. He asked the Mariner not to print the exact location of his tree farm. Gypsy moths aren't number one on his fan list either.

"I'm terrified of what a fire could do. That's why I'm clearing away as much brush as possible." Tom prefers to burn in the winter to limit the fire hazard.

During the interview and walk through the fields, Tom smiled a lot although his dog Brenda kept barking. "Even Brenda, my dog, wouldn't miss a day here."

Mariner athlete of the week

Karen Murphy

Meet co-captain Karen Murphy, whose winning streak has played a key role in Cohasset's advancement to the quarter finals of the Eastern Mass. South Sectional tennis tourney.

Murphy, a senior, holds a two-year winning streak. During the past two years, she has suffered three setbacks from injuries but has still managed to whip the opposition.

Last year Murphy showed up on the tennis courts and removed her sling to play with a cast on her left arm. It was a moped accident and she didn't let the cast delay the start of her tennis season. Coach Peggy Lynch said Karen couldn't toss the ball over her head and had to serve underhanded to opponents.

"Karen shouldn't have been playing," said Lynch, "but she wanted to play so badly...the only way was to play doubles." So she learned how to serve underhanded and played primarily at the baseline.

Even this year, Murphy still cannot fully extend her left arm when tossing the tennis ball for a serve. Lynch describes Karen as a remarkable athlete with "a terrific fighting spirit."

The serving adjustment barely hindered Murphy's game as she and her second doubles partner defeated all South Shore League opponents last year. Diane Mullen and Murphy were named to the All-Scholastic tennis squad for their dominating tennis play in the SSL last year.

This year Murphy played both first doubles and third singles for Cohasset. She teamed up with Joy Pratt for seven wins in first doubles. In singles she also posted seven victories for the league season.

In the first round of tourney action last week Murphy ruined her opponent's 16-game unbeaten streak. Murphy fought to a 3-6, 6-2, 6-1 Skipper victory in third singles.

A few weeks ago Murphy won a crucial match versus Duxbury which boosted the Skippers into a first place tie with the Dragons. Cohasset slipped to second place during the final week of league play when Hanover edged past the Skippers 3-2.

Lynch described Karen as a "gutsy" tennis player. She disciplines herself to play "a smart, intelligent and courageous game," said Lynch.

"She's worth more than one player on a team because she gives so much," Lynch said. "Karen has been a strong factor in developing a great team spirit."

But most of all, "She has been there when we've needed her," said Lynch. "She handles the pressure beautifully."

Murphy graduated from CHS on Sunday. She was awarded the Boosters Club Trophy recently, for which her teammates voted her the honor. She plans to attend Providence College next fall.

McNabbb leads Skippers league

The Cohasset boys' track team placed in eight events at the South Shore League meet.

Chris McNabb had the best finish for the Skippers, capturing second place in the two-mile race. He also placed seventh in State Class C competition at Ashland. He shaved nine seconds off the school record enroute to a 9:51 finish.

David Rice won fourth place in the 440 event. He also ran on the 440 relay team which came in fifth among ten SSL teams. Other relayers for Cohasset were Dan Bowen, Pat Leonard and Perry Harris.

In the triple jump, Harris leapt to a sixth place finish. Pole vaulter Paul Riley clinched sixth place in his event.

Mike Ellis was sixth in the mile and Steve Bowen posted a fourth place finish in the discus event. Joel Linsley was superior in the high hurdles and finished sixth.

At the league meet, Cohasset scored 24 points. Duxbury won that league meet. The Skipper trackmen finished the season with a 3-6 record.

Tennis squad ousted

The boys' tennis team was eliminated from the Eastern Mass. tournament, last week, by Dennis-Yarmouth. The Skippers were defeated by DY, 4-1, in the first round of tourney action.

The first doubles team of Paul Riley and John Colocousis won their match for Cohasset. They triumphed the first and third sets by 6-3 scores. The Skipper pair lost the second set, 6-1.

The third singles match featuring Cohasset's Rob Tis stretched to three sets but his opponent won. His third singles opponent, John Stetkis won the first set 6-4 and Tis won the second set by that same score. The third set belonged to the DY player, 6-2.

In first singles Mike Brady lost 6-1, 6-2. Second singles player, Shannon Collins was defeated 6-3, 6-1. The second doubles team of Brian Ramsay and Bill Davenport lost, 6-2, 6-1.

The Skipper team placed second in the South Shore league with a 12-2 record. Including tourney play the boys finished, 12-4 overall.

Softball girls advance in tourney

The drizzle and down pouring rains did not dampen Cohasset's offensive punch in the opening game of the softball tournament last Friday.

Cohasset, the South Shore League Champions, defeated Provincetown, 24-9, in the first round of the Division II South Sectional softball tourney. The Skippers took command of the game in the second inning, scoring ten times for the 12-2 lead.

Cohasset coach Bill Fallon said, "I was very pleased with the offensive game." Defensively, the girls didn't look their sharpest, said Fallon of his team which committed seven errors.

"They were a little nervous at the beginning," and their concentration was lacking, said Fallon. "But it's hard to keep your concentration when you have such a big lead."

Fallon said the game versus Provincetown was the best game "offensively" of the year for Cohasset. Even the balls caught by P-town fielders were hard hits from Cohasset batters, Fallon reasoned. All nine Skipper starters registered at least two hits each. "Everybody contributed to the win," he said.

The Skippers' superior bunting and baserunning accounted for many runs and stolen bases for Cohasset.

Pitcher Liz Russell walked eight batters and allowed six hits. Fallon said it was not one of Liz's better performances. He attributed the rainy conditions and slippery rubber on the mound as pitching hinderances.

Senior captain Karen Froio hit a three-run homer over the right field fence. She played "exceptionally well for us both offensively and defensively," said Fallon. Karen played at shortstop and collected five RBI's including a triple and homer for the afternoon.

Disignated hitter Laurie Sandblom crossed home plate four times for the Skippers. She smashed a double and contributed three hits toward the win.

First baseman Madeline Roy scored three times for Cohasset and collected two RBI's. Right fielder Sarah Froio knocked home two runs. She belted a triple over the left fielder's head early in the game.

Laura Hines, who plays second base, had three RBI's and four hits for the day including a double. Catcher Gia Barresi had two hits, two RBI's and a homerun. Staci Thompson, the center fielder, scored three times for Cohasset. She has batted .500 with two hits.

Fallon was surprised that the Provincetown squad was as weak as they were. In the SSL, he estimated that P-town would have finished in the middle of the league standings. "Our strong league competition will help us along the way," Fallon said. "We've played against some very good teams." Duxbury and Rockland are tourney participants in the SSL.

Cohasset was scheduled to play Bristol-Plymouth (18-3) at home on Monday. The game has been rescheduled for this afternoon (Wednesday) at 3:15 p.m.

Cohasset is 19-1 overall. The girls need one more win to surpass the school record of 19 wins in a single season. The victory over Provincetown on Friday, tied the girls with the hockey team's record of 19 wins which was set this past winter.

Girls' track squad clinches 3rd place

Track season came to a close last week as the girls' squad captured third place in the South Shore League. Under the direction of Cohasset Coach Clare Brady, the Skipper squad finished with a 6-3 record.

Duxbury won the league title and Norwell wound up in second place. Cohasset was actually tied for third place with Hull. The Skippers might have finished better but they were missing some key people for various meets.

The absences weren't due to injuries but were attributed to illness, said Brady. The Skipper squad will lose four seniors to graduation. "We're hoping for big things next year," Brady said. Graduating trackwomen are: Tina Birmann, Mary Jo Mahoney, Bridget Farren and Marcy Brown.

In the South Shore League meet Cohasset placed in five events. Birmann placed second in both the 100 and long jump events.

Farren was sixth in the mile with a 5:53 time. Sarah Seavey won fifth place in the javelin event. Her throw at the league meet surpassed her previous best throw by 12 feet.

Both relay teams placed for Cohasset. The 440 relayers raced to third place. Members of the 440 relay team were: Birmann, Ann Marie Lagrotteria, Karen Ekberg and Mary Ellen Maurer.

The mile relay foursome sprinted to fifth place. Mile relayers for Cohasset were: Vicki Spooner, Staci Stobart, Sarah Trask and Mahoney.

Trina Moore placed seventh in the shot put. She missed sixth place by a half-inch. Ekberg was seventh in the discus. Stobart ran the 440 and placed seventh also.

At the State Class C meet in Ashland, Moore advanced to the semifinals in the 100 event. Moore, a sprinter, competed outdoors in the pouring rain. Ekberg and the 440 relay team were other Cohasset participants who qualified for the State's.

'Cosmo' finalist runs first here

By Lois Martin

So far as we're concerned of course, with all due respect to the young fellow from BC, our man should have been #1. I even asked him if, just between us and knowing it would go no further, he didn't share that opinion.

But Scott Emlong was far too savvy a man to fall for that old line, especially when he was in an office where women didn't believe they were too old to titter and giggle.

You see, Scott's been featured in the June issue of Cosmopolitan magazine. That publication is not known for its molasses cookie recipes, nor its reasonably priced stitchery hobbyist kits for the woman who wants to make better use of nap times.

PATCHES

Oh, no, no, no.

He has a Master's Degree in exercise physiology and has credits toward a doctorate. He says mental and physical fitness go hand in hand. So I tell you, Scott Emlong's in magnificent mental condition. His mind looks marvelous.

He was born and raised in St. Joseph, Michigan. And the woman who bore him and raised him, his mother Peg, still hasn't had a personal conversation with the son who showed up in Cosmopolitan magazine as a choice centerfold person.

Scott says his mother heard about it at a store. And he hasn't had a chance to chat with her about it yet.

(Dear Peg, what will these kids think of next! But never you mind. Because your boy is well-mannered, kind, respectful, and by the by, a good looking critter if ever we saw one.)

I invited Scott to visit the Mariner. And it's not easy to be the local hometown answer to Cosmopolitan magazine. If that big publication asks a person to take off clothing, we as a tasteful family weekly, must ask him to put those clothes back on, in spite of primitive impetuousness. But we are free to compromise, of course, where an unbuttoned shirt is concerned.

Scott says he has a great deal of respect for women. He loves their company. Among those whom he admires are Jane Fonda, Katherine Hepburn, Sophia Loren for beauty and Ann-Margaret, talent. And he thinks Mae West is terrific. In history Joan of Arc comes to mind as a topnotch woman.

Friend Cindi Hardee, note the word "friend" is used (I can see a question forming on your little lips), submitted his photo and a letter saying why he should be recognized as the best male undresser in the nation.

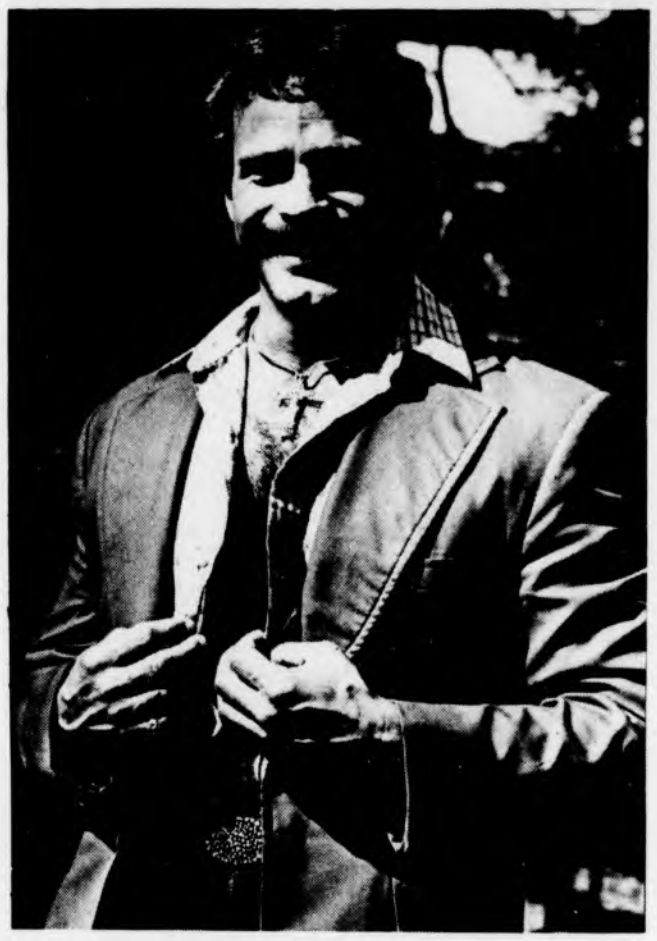
Out of 7000 entries, the Sheridan Drive (Police alert for blockades in that area should be initiated) resident was selected as a finalist/runner up.

And those of us who invested in Cosmo (and those who have been renting the magazine at a high rate of income), believe nobody could 'run up' the page (224) like Scott Emlong. He's wearing, in the photo, short little jeans with a zipper that, darn it, must not work right.

Scott says his photo was not submitted against his will. He has been "honored, flattered" to be part of the contest, and more so, as a winner.

Scott Emlong would be a tough man to untan. Indeed, as a physical fitness instructor, cognizant of what makes a body beautiful, he is professionally gorgeous. And that's that.

He's 37, moustached, fit as the devil. And best, really best, Scott has a rollicking (I never said frolicking) sense of humor. He simply doesn't take himself too seriously. But he does take for himself the fun that's inherent in the contest.



What matters though was that during his brief stay at the Mariner, my office was flooded by women who apparently had countless errands and business reasons for being there. Add to the one who rushed in as if her skirt was afire, the two high school girls who 'stopped by' as well as the others I'd alerted to his arrival in case they wanted to add their expertise in judging male centerfold material.

Fortunately Scott Emlong has a sense of humor. He posed patiently (with lots of clothing on, jeans, shirt, jacket, cowboy boots, cross/necklace) and courteously lept to his feet to greet every woman within a 10 miles radius of the Mariner office.

So here he's #1, the male centerfold of the Mariner, undisputed in the hometown newspaper. Our publisher, David Cutler peered out the window as Scott was folding his marvelous being into his little white sports car. So women think he's sexy, David said philosophically. His comment met silence.

Because his staff was very busy...putting hair up like Katherine Hepburn's, imitating Jane Fonda's voice, speaking with an Italian accent, dancing like Ann Margaret. And there was one woman in a blond wig who kept pursing her lips in front of the mirror and speaking in Mae West's well known nasal tones.

For my part, I went back to work like a martyr in history, wearing a coat of mail with a pleased smile on my face, like Joan of Arc.

Ainslie directive prompts complaints & petitions

The much heralded "Ainslie issue" prompted considerable flak in Town Hall last week.

The aftershock of a Selectman directive that Police Chief John DeBassio use Lawrence Ainslie — nephew of Selectman Henry Ainslie — on special details has produced these developments.

— Criticism from Chief DeBassio and the threat of resignation when his contract expires next year.

— The resignation of Civil Defense Director Lester Hiltz who, in noting the directive to DeBassio, expressed displeasure over "favoritism and nepotism in government."

— Sharp criticism from the Cohasset Police Association and the Police Chief Selection Committee. Both groups accused selectmen of interference in the day to day operations of the police department.

— Petitions from two separate groups condemning the directive and asking Selectmen to let DeBassio run the police department.

— Written letters of complaint from two private citizens.

— A letter from Selectman Mary Jane McArthur suggesting that Selectmen act as policy makers and leave the administration of the police department to the chief. (Mrs. McArthur did not vote on the Ainslie directive, having missed the meeting because of a broken foot.)

After reading the letters of complaint into the minutes last week, Selectmen noted that they had received some telephone calls that were "pro and con" on the issue.

They also received a lengthy ruling from Town Counsel Blake Thaxter supporting the Board's right to issue the directive.

"I think the community is misreading our actions," said Selectman Henry Ainslie. "We didn't hire anyone. We just said that an individual is entitled to fair and equal assignment. We're just trying to do what the law says."

"Chief DeBassio," said Ainslie, "has no right to interfere with our appointing authority."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he was behind the Chief 100 percent, noting that he had made the motion to appoint DeBassio in the first place.

Laugelle also pointed out that Lawrence Ainslie had been made a permanent intermittent two years ago. "The only thing that can be done now is to have a hearing to try and fire him."

In his letter to Selectmen, Town Counsel Thaxter wrote that Chief DeBassio must comply with the directive that young Ainslie be given work on special details.

"The vote taken by the board only instructed the Chief to comply with what is already a statutory obligation, to wit, provide civil service employees an equal opportunity for work," wrote Thaxter.

"In my opinion in general, the Board of Selectmen do not have control of jurisdiction over private detail assignments," the letter stated.

"Notwithstanding this, in this specific instance, due to the specific facts, I am of the opinion that the Board did have the right to rule on the actions taken by the Chief relative to Officer Ainslie for two reasons.

"First, he specifically requested the Board to instruct him as to whether or not to use the services of Officer Ainslie. By doing so, he relinquished any exclusive right he may have had to act under deligation of authority from the Board.

"Secondly, notwithstanding any right, authority or position taken by either the Board or the Chief, Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 31, Section 34, clearly sets forth the obligations to provide civil service employees equal opportunities for work."

Chief DeBassio has not yet assigned young Ainslie to any special details and Friday said he would not do so until he had further discussed Thaxter's opinion with Selectmen.

"We're all adults," said the Chief, "I think it can be worked out without anyone getting a bloody nose."

Seagull problem may 'grow' away

Water Superintendent Ben Curley says the influx of seagulls at Lily Pond seems to have leveled off.

An official from the U.S. Fish and Wild Life Service inspected the pond area recently and found that the gulls over Lily Pond were young. When the young seagulls mature enough they might join their parents on islands off the coast.

Meanwhile, Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos has requested clarification from the water department on past and future testing at the pond. She asked for both a coliform and fecal analysis.

There's no proof yet that the gulls are the reason for elevated bacteria levels in Lily Pond, though it is suspected seagulls may be the cause. The problem with seagulls' droppings in the pond was first brought to the health board's attention by the water department and commissioners last month.

Cohasset Heights Ltd. landfill has been cited by water commissioners as possibly being directly related to the increase in seagulls at the pond because of the recent acceptance of garbage at the dump.

The Board of Health on Monday briefly mentioned a couple of ways to frighten off seagulls from the pond area. Someone could fire blanks from a gun every fifteen minutes during the daytime when the dump is open. Or a dog could be placed on the rock or in a small boat near the rock to scare gulls away from their resting spot — the rock.

In the latest of complaints, Robert Roth, general manager of Norfolk Conveyor, wrote to the health board regarding seagull damage to his roof. In the letter Roth stated that during recent months seagulls have pecked holes in the roof of his building.

Rum, the Newfoundland, is something of a medical marvel

By Donna Cogliano

There's a new celebrity in town and though he won't appear at the Music Circus this season, he does rate front page notice.

Meet Rum, a 10-month-old Newfoundland puppy who weighs over 100 pounds and is still growing.

Newfoundlands are best known for rescues in the water. But at the age of 10 months, Rum has been the one rescued from water twice. He has also made an important contribution to medical science.

Rum has been under the care of three specialists since he became the pet of the Williams family of 38 Elm Court. In March, he underwent surgery to correct his heart murmur (aortic stenosis) At Massachusetts General Hospital.

Though the operation was unsuccessful, Rum is considered a hero for allowing a team of doctors to attempt a new procedure which they had hoped to use on two young girls who had heart disorders.

Rum's master, Todd Williams, said the specialists "had two young girls they wanted to do the operation on. If it had been a success on Rum, it would have helped these girls. It was sort of a setback."

Dr. Bradley Moses of the South Shore Veterinary Associates, Inc., said Rum was born with a heart problem. "One of the normal outflows of the heart is narrowed," he said. "This condition makes the heart work harder to pump blood through the aortic valve.

An alternative technique available for Rum was open heart surgery which Moses considers extremely risky and expensive. A catheterization procedure wa performed on Rum, called "Angioplasty."

The cost of the operation was paid for under a federal grant.

The Angioplasty procedure consisted of inserting a tube through one of Rum's legs and up to the defective valve The operation attempted to pass a balloon thro the valve and dialate it.

Though ctors were unable to solve Rum's problem, Moses said the testing and continued monitoring on Rum has been a learning experience for the specialists. The other doctors working with Rum were Dr. James Ross, a veterinary cardiologist and Dr. Richard Ligerthson, a pediatrics cardiologist at Mass. General Hospital.

Rum has a severely enlarged heart and his life expectancy is less than normal. Each week Rum is alive is a blessing, and that's the way the Williams' look at his problem, said Moses.

The Williams family first learned of Ruim's heart

Health Board nixes condo variance

The Board of Health Monday denied a variance sought by Frederick Thayer for his proposed cluster development at 100 Pond Street.

Thayer had asked that only two percolation tests be required in the reserve area of the development's sewage treatment facility, instead of three. The board denied the request by a vote of 2-1 with member Dr. Michael Bliss opposed.

A third percolation test was attempted at the reserve area on May 3 and was halted. In order to complete testing, the area would have to be "de-watered."

A de-watering attempt would include considerable digging of that reserve area where two tests were already completed. To date, test results show that sand and gravel on the site is highly permeable. In addition to the two percolation tests some 10 observation holes were dug.

Thayer had requested the variance because he felt an additional percolation test would harm the environment.

Health Board member Marilyn Sweeney initiated the motion for denial of the variance on the basis that there would not be adverse environmental affects. "This is a project that will have enormous impact on the town. It is the first cluster development for the town," Sweeney said.

Health Board Chairman Barbara Kern said, "We have to be sure in our minds that it can't hurt anyone in the town...and it's even for you (Mr. Thayer's) own protection."

Thayer was visibly disappointed in the board's action to deny the variance. "I am jeopardizing a $6 million project," he said.

"The problem is that the place has been totally excavated. I'm not sure another test can be done. I can't get enough depth to lower the water table below the bottom of the perc hole," said Thayer.

After the board's vote was taken, Thayer said, "I feel totally defeated."

Bliss didn't think it was necessary to complete a third percolation test. He said there was sufficient data from the first two percolation tests.

At a health board meeting two weeks ago, abutters voted 4-3 in favor of granting a variance. One abutter abstained from the vote.

Dramatic Club chooses for its new season

The Cohasset Dramatic Club, looking forward to its 62nd year of continuing activity, has chosen its fall and winter Town Hall productions for the coming 1982-83 season.

Scheduled as the Club's fall show is playwright A.R. Gurney's social commentary "Scenes From American Life," to be directed by Ellen Kelly.

The winter production will see Judy Holmes directing J.B. Priestly's "Dangerous Journey," and the Club's 1983 spring show, a comedy, will be announced within the next few weeks.

At its recent annual meeting the Dramatic Club elected new members to its Board of Directors.

They are: Phyllis Donovan, Julia Wood Jordan, David Wadsworth and Charles Wheelwright. Club officers for the coming year will be: Betty Miessner, President; David Wadsworth, Vice President; Charles Wheelwright, Treasurer and Eleanor Whitney, Secretary.

The Cohasset Club's recent entry to the Brandeis Drama Festival, held at Spingold Theater in Waltham, saw the local Club competing for honors against other amateur dramatic groups in the New England area.

A strong cast from Cohasset presented one scene from the Club's last fall production of Alan Ayckbourne's play "Table Manners." Lee Dunne of the "Table Manners" cast received nomination as Best Supporting Actress for her performance.

Cohasset cast members were: Andrea and Davis Dasori, Sarah Delima, Lee Dunne, Harry Heineman and Derek Holmes. Members of the Cohasset production crew included Scott Ketcham, Alice Duffy and Arthur Paquette.

Cohasset is first choice for new Art Center home

By Patricia Desmond

South Shore Art Center, holding $100,000 in its figurative pocket, is looking for new quarters that can grow with the growing group of artists.

The search for the minute is concentrating on Cohasset properties, Cohasset being the first choice of the members responding to a recent survey by the center.

The new building will probably be built to specifications of the board of advisors and directors. But existing buildings are not being discounted.

Hingham is the number two choice. Scituate is number three, according to the survey. There were 273 replies out of 800 members.

The center has already launched a massive fund-raising project to accompany the search for a new home. The goal is to raise $400,000 more.

Linda Summers, gallery coordinator for the center, explained that whatever happens the new facility will need room for expansion.

She guessed the minimum size they would look at would be an acre of land. It is likely the site would need something closer to three to five acres.

Many of the center's top artists are being exhibited right now at the Federal Reserve Bank in Boston in a display called the "Intuitive Eye."

The exhibit continues to July 9.

The strength of the exhibit is the starting point for the building campaign.

According to Margaret Dillon, center director, "Many people didn't realize how good our artists are until they saw the display on the walls of the Federal Reserve. The bank has one of the best exhibit areas in New England."

The walls of the little red building on Ripley Road have low ceilings and far from elegant.

Last week Ubaldo DiBenedetto accepted a $50,000 check from South Shore Playhouse Associates, the people behind the South Shore Music Circus. That grant — which we told you about last month — meant that the center was eligible to receive $50,000 more in a challenge grant. The challenge came last September from the since deceased Jessie Cox.

The people working on the project are a mixture of artists and people who support the arts.

At a time when public money for art is becoming scarce, the people of the center hope to fill a need, supporting the endeavors of local artists, teaching art courses and encouraging people to see and hear the arts.

"We don't want to move out of Cohasset," one of the members said, talking about the project.

The hope is someone will come along and offer the center a suitable property.

The board of directors includes: Ubaldo DiBenedetto, President, of Cohasset; Sheldon Ripley, Vice President, of Cohasset; Peter Chapman, Treasurer, of Cohasset; Anita Franks, Recording Secretary, of Plymouth; and Janet Tooker, Advisor of N. Scituate.

Also, Mary Good of Randolph; Rowland Williams of Cohasset; Valerie Rever of Cohasset; David Walsh of Scituate, and Paul Baccari of Quincy.

Weekend bus service gone; won't return

By Mike Berger

There are no active plans to revive the weekend bus sevice from Cohasset to Boston, the chief operations officer of the Plymouth & Brockton Bus Lines, said Tuesday.

Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham were hit by the P & B decision which cut back two trips from the three communities on Saturday and on Sunday.

The P & B bus left Greenbush of Scituate at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Saturday and continued to Scituate Harbor, North Scituate, Cohasset Common, up Rte. 228 through Hingham and to Boston.

Lack of ridership led to the decision, said Robert Hultgren, P & B chief operations officer. The decision was effective Memorial Day, and new schedules were released May 21.

State Rep. Philip Johnston, D-Marshfield, and state Sen. Allan McKinnon, D-Weymuth, met with Transportation Secretary James Carlin Monday to discuss the cutback as well as plans to continue the bus service from Marshfield to the Braintree MBTA station and construction work on Rte. 3.

Johnston said he has been aware of the cutback for two weeks and has complained "bitterly" to P & B and Department of Public Utility officials.

"This is typical of the P & B's attitude of "the public be damned. I have long said that the P & B has been insensitive to our needs," said Johnston.

Ainslie directive prompts petitions & complaints

As a permanent intermittent, Lawrence Ainslie is in line to eventually become a full-time member of the police department and that is something Chief DeBassio does not wish to see happen.

Such an appointment, wrote DeBassio"...is not in the best interest of the Department or the citizens of the community.

"The (work detail)vote not only effectively lowers the future standards and morale of existing Police Department personnel, but reflects a lack of confidence in my professional judgment and abilities."

DeBassio's position has received strong support from the Cohasset Police Association which unanimously opposed the Selectmen directive, terming it "political interference."

And Cohasset Atty. John Ridge, who has represented members of the association, is leading one of two petition drives urging selectmen to allow DeBassio to run the Police Department. The Ridge petition which may include up to 500 signatures, was scheduled to be delivered to Selectmen this week. Last week the Board received a similar petition signed by 31 residents.

Two other letters supporting Chief DeBassio were received from David Chittim of Linden Drive and Evelyn and Lloyd of Old Pasture Road.

Reconsider

The 'fleet,'' armed with the Selectmen's order that Lawrence Ainslie shall receive his fair share of paid details, has set sail.

The ''islands,'' with a united police force under the command of ''General'' DeBassio swears defiance.

The world waits as ''General Haig'' McArthur attempts to mediate. If mediation fails she will have to take sides--and her position is clear, she will back the chief.

Shall Cohasset go to ''war?'' And in the same year the Sox are bound for the Series?

We hope not, for ''war'' in this case will produce no winners, only casualties of some good people.

Chief John DeBassio will be a casualty if he decides to resign, as he has threatened to do. The town of Cohasset will be a distinct casualty if the Chief resigns, as of course will the police department.

Lawrence Ainslie could be a casualty if Chief DeBassio is forced to provide every detail of the background check that led to the decision not to use him as a permanent intermittent officer.

Selectmen Laugelle and Henry Ainslie will be casualties if they continue on a course that obviously has the overwhelming disapproval of the town they were elected to serve.

Selectman Ainslie will be a particular casualty if the impression that he has used his office to help out a family member is not swiftly corrected.

There is still time to avoid ''war,'' time for the Selectmen to reconsider their action of two weeks ago. We urge them to do that for their own good, and more importantly, for the good of the town.

The only alternative is for all parties to run and hire a gun, we mean a lawyer. Then everyone shoots, we mean litigate. Then a couple of years down the road some Superior Court Judge decides the legal merits of the case---and everybody loses. Above all Cohasset loses.

For the Mariner Cohasset comes first. We are not without sympathy for Lawrence Ainslie. But Chief DeBassio's mandate to professionalize the police department must come before Ainslie's desire for paid details.

The calls and letters (see this page and the next) we have received indicate the town is firmly in agreement with us. We must not forget that when the position of Chief of Police was under Civil Service the selectmen promised the town that there would be no interference. Now the word of the selectmen is being put to the test.

The ball is in their court. We really don't believe they are ''puddin's'' or ''fakes,'' as they may have inferred from our comments last week. We think they are public servants who took an ill-considered action, one that they must now reconsider.....

For the good of Cohasset.

Observations...

Remember when we'd look out the window and say, ''We really need this...'' and that foolish old expression...''Welcome as rain.''

The Ainslie issue...

From Selectman Mary Jane McArthur

[Selectman Mary Jane McArthur last week wrote the following letter on the Ainslie police issue. Ed.]

I was unable to be present at the regular meeting of the Board on Wednesday, June 2, at which time a vote was taken regarding Police Department policy. However, during the past week I have received many phone calls on this matter. Therefore, I feel obligated to respond to this issue by letter.

Two years ago when the Board of Selectmen proposed taking the position of Chief of Police out of Civil Service, one of the concerns of those opposed to the idea was the fear that politics would enter into the administration of the Police Department. At that time the Board assured the Town this would not happen. The role of the Board of Selectmen would be to set policy and the administration of the Department on a daily basis would be left to the Chief of Police.

As it is the policy of the Board of Selectmen to appoint permanent full-time officers from the permanent intermittent ranks, a few months ago the Board established a policy that all applicants, including the current permanent intermittent officers, would be required to be certified before their appointment to any police duties. This certification would include a backgroung investigation, a medical examination and a psychological evaluation. This process helps to ensure that the Town of Cohasset will be getting the best possible qualified candidates for appointment to the Police Department.

In my judgment, a task as important as the selection of police personnel should be approached positively. The quality of personnel selected for the police department determines the character of police performance and ultimately the quality of police leadership. When a department fails to function properly, the cause is often found to be its low entrance standards or improper selection method. The benefits of a positive selection policy are seen in a lower rate of personnel turnover, fewer policy are seen in a lower rate of personnel turnover, fewer discipline problems, higher morale, and better community relations.

The Board of Selectmen also has established a policy that special work details are offered first to full-time officers, then to permanent intermittent officers and, lastly, to auxiliary patrolmen. After exhausting this list, the Chief can go outside the community for personnel for special details.

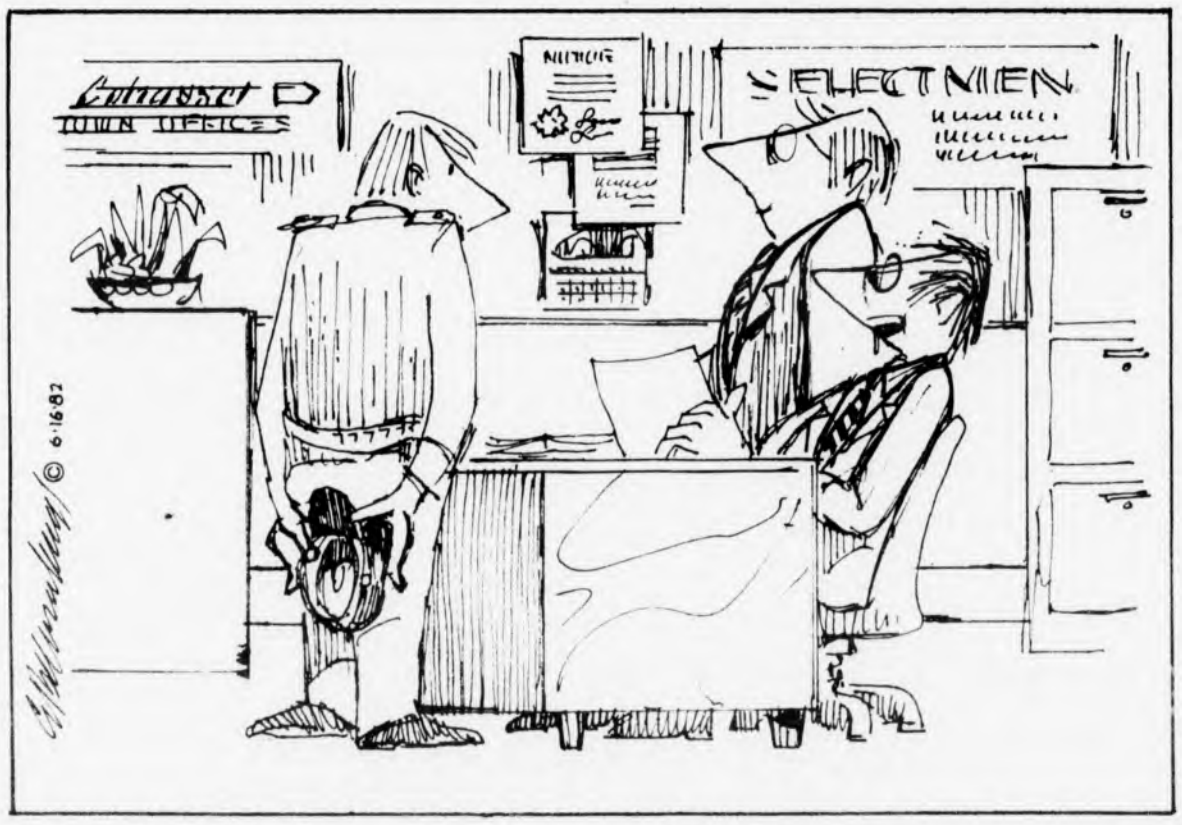
I do not believe that this policy on special work detail should require the Chief to assign work to any individual who, in his judgment, is not qualified for the position or whose assignment would not be in the best interest of the community. If the current policy requires that the Chief do otherwise, then, in my opinion, the Board of Selectmen should take a good hard look at all personnel policies established for the Cohasset Police Department.

The Board of Selectmen are policy makers and should act in that role. The administration of the Department is the role of the Chief. It is his responsibility to carry out the day-to-day operation of the Department in a professional manner without interference from the Board of Selectmen.

From Police Chief John DeBassio

[The following is a copy of a letter sent to the Selectmen from Police Chief John De Bassio.]

The recent vote of Selectmen Ainslie and Laugelle, effectively ordering me to utilize the services of Permanent Intermittent Lawrence David Ainslie, Jr. is hereby acknowledged, and as agreed, will be implemented upon receipt of Town Counsels decision which demonstrates in writing the statutory authority relied upon for issuing the order. Pending his legal decision, I have directed his attention to the Revised By-Laws of the Town of Cohasset, Page 23, Section 3 (Police Chief), Item 1, as being relevant to that process.



The fact that the vote was taken at all, over my objections; without prior notice of the agenda article; in the absence of Selectwoman Mary Jane McArthur; in spite of background information which raises serious questions relative to his character, integrity, credibility and fitness to serve, does remain a political reality. Notwithstanding the absence of these amenities, the vote represents a clear and present conflict in terms of my administration of the Police Department and legal authority to control its day to day operation.

Since my appointment as Chief of the Cohasset Police Department was predicated, at least in part, on a committment from the Board of Selectmen of their clear intent to reorganize, refurbish and professionalize the Police Department, this most recent action represents a major change in policy and attitude.

Among the priorities established by the Selection Committee and the Board of Selectmen was the [turn to page 9]

NEWS ITEM — Cohasset's respected police chief threatens resignation over selectmen's order that the selectmen chairman's nephew be used on details and special events. Police union objects, calling it 'political interference.'

intended development of an appropriate recruit selection process, and I have attempted to implement those procedures during the last (22) months. I was also assured of having an intricate role in the selection process, since the quality of police selection ultimately determines the quality of police services, and I, not the Selectmen, am responsible for the officers' efficiency and effectiveness in office.

It need not be pointed out that the officer in question is the nephew of the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen and that the issue of Conflict of Interest in this particular case must be resolved on the basis of its individual legal propriety. Nor do I intend to dignify claims of prejudice and/or biased treatment which are unfounded and have no basis of fact. However, should the candidate decide to initiate civil action as he has threatened to do, I would be glad to make his record and background information available to any neutral magistrate, and am confident that it will dispel such ludicrous and unfounded political claims.

Since the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen has chosen to adopt the new media as the forum for communicating Town business as it relates to this issue, and expounded on his political interest and responsibilities, it is appropriate that they be put into perspective. Most criminal justice administrators would agree, as I do, that elected public officials do have a vested political interest in police affairs, but there is a very fine line which separates general political participation which is intended to foster quality Law Enforcement, and political interference which is intended to influence one man's assignment, promotion or appointment, over the objections of the Chief of Police.

The vote to order the utilization of this officer also clearly implies a future intent to appoint the officer to a permanent full-time position within the Cohasset Police Department, and represents a decision that, in my opinion, is not in the best interest of the Department or the citizens of the community. The vote not only effectively lowers the future standards and morale of existing Police Department personnel, but reflects a lack of confidence in my professional judgment and abilities.

Should the vote prevail, it would be a clear indication that the majority of the Board of Selectmen intend to modify the terms and conditions of my employment and extend their activities into the day to day operations of the Police Department. Since I have no intentions of participating in any ongoing adversary relationship with the Board of Selectmen and I consider political control of day to day police operations unexceptable in terms of achieving meaningful reorganization of the department, it is essential that our respective roles be defined.

In the absence of a clear administrative mandate and the adoption of suitable priorities and goals for the operation of the Police Department, I would not be prepared to participate in any future negotiations and would effectively terminate my employment as Chief of the Cohasset Police Department at the end of my current contract which expires September 1, 1983.

The Ainslie issue

From the Police Chief Selection Committee

[The following is a copy of a letter sent to the Selectmen from the Police Chief Selection Committee. Ed.]

To: Board of Selectmen:

This letter comes to you from the five persons who labored nearly two years on the Police Chief Selection Committee appointed by the town to fill the vacancy left by the former Police Chief's retirement.

We are unanimous in our distressed concern at the recently reported decision directing Police Chief DeBassio to act contrary to his own best judgment in the hiring of an Intermittent Police Officer. Issues of conflict of interest aside, this decision on your part surely reflects a direct contravention of the assurance the Board of Selectmen gave this community at the time of the vote to remove the position of Police Chief from Civil Service. Since Mr. Ainslie was a member of the Board at that time, he recalls the distinction made between "setting policy" (as the work of the Selectmen) and "department administration" (as the clear responsibility of the Police Chief.)

The real issue at stake here is of far greater importance than the employment of any one person. The real issue is whether the Selectmen intend to interfere in the administration of a Police Department which has just begun to become as good as our community deserves.

It is our belief that you have seriously misread the desires and intentions of the community if you believe Cohasset wants a Police Department managed by the Selectmen's day to day decisions on hiring and firing. We are further persuaded that our community clearly intends for our Police Department to be as fully professional (both in its leadership and in the carrying out of its duties) as any city department. To expect anything less simply because ours is a small town is to insult the community, the police department, and the qualified professional whom you have chosen to lead it.

As members of a committee which used public hearings and other means of listening to Cohasset's concerns for its Police Department, we are unanimous in deploring any decision which detracts (as we believe this one does) from the administrative authority of the Police Chief. The excellent work which the Board of Selectmen and Chief DeBassio have done in laying the groundwork for an improving department must not be undercut by such a decision.

From David Chittim

To: Board of Selectmen:

This is directed to those who voted this week on the use of Lawrence Ainslie in the Police Department. I have several comments to make regarding the two articles appearing in the Patriot Ledger.

First, I believe that in hiring Chief DeBassio, the Town is buying his expert knowledge and background and that wherever possible you and we should heed his expert counsel. I also point out that his background consists not only of time spent, as you stated, in a "big city" police force, but also of formal education in law enforcement at college and elsewhere. I don't believe that you should disregard this in favor of political or personal considerations.

Secondly, Cohasset unfortunately, has had some recent experiences with several police officers who created public disturbances of one sort or another and who had alcohol problems. This all gave the town unwanted notoriety. The psychological testing is designed to help in avoiding the appointment of such unfit persons to a sensitive entity such as our police force. Given our past recent history in this regard, I do not want to see it repeated in the future.

Thirdly, I am disturbed at the insensitivity of a member in voting on the issue involving a nephew. If the district attorney's office said that this is legal, then it should be pointed out that there is a clear distinction to be made between legality on the one hand and propriety and ethics on the other. I am head of a town department also, and I could not or would not vote on any issue involving my family no matter what the relationship.

Lastly, I feel badly that there was an overtone of an adversarial relationship between you and the Chief. We have had enough of that during the old regime! We have now a fine chief who has excellent credentials, who is doing a good job and who deserves to be heeded on most issues.

My suggestion is that you reconsider your vote on Lawrence Ainslie on June 9th and that you reaffirm in a positive way your support of the Chief .

From Evelyn & Lloyd Prescott

[The following is a copy of a letter sent to the Selectmen from Evelyn and Lloyd Prescott. Ed.]

To: Board of Selectmen:

The two of us are upset with your interference in the Cohasset Police Department affairs, regarding Lawrence D. Ainslie Jr. as a reserve patrolman.

In our opinion we have one of the finest if not the finest of Police Chiefs in the Commonwealth in John DeBassio. It is also our opinion that he has a much better insight into the capabilities of a man doing police work than do the selectmen.

When the Chief of Police position was removed from Civil Service it was our understanding that he would be the one who would run the department.

We feel that the Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset could certainly put thier talents to better use. We voted for each of you! We trust you will not interfere with decisions and appointments within the Cohasset Police Department.

From Lester Hiltz

[The following is a copy of a letter sent to the Selectmen from Lester Hiltz. Ed.]

To: Board of Selectmen:

I am submitting this notice of resignation as Director of Cohasset Civil Defense. I would like to be relieved as soon as possible but I will continue to serve until such time as a replacement can be appointed. In that regard, I highly recommend that the Board seriously consider appointing Mr. Ubaldo DiBenedetto, who is presently serving as the Deputy Director and Communications Officer. I will, of course, assist in the transition of the responsibility and training of the person you select.

After serious consideration of recent actions by the Board of Selectmen and my strong personal convictions about favoritism and nepotism in government, I am compelled to resign.

I am very grateful for the opportunity and privilege of being able to serve my community in such a responsible position. I hope that my actions on civil defense matters over the past ten years proved that I am worthy of the confidence and trust that the appointing authority place in me. In addition, I hope the townspeople will readily understand the necessity of my decision.

King pushes for tougher drunk driving bill

To the Editor:

On April 12th, I wrote urging you to support House Bill 5976, which establishes clear and graded penalties for people caught driving under the influence of alcohol. In considering this bill, the Joint Committee on Criminal Justice did not include a mandatory sentencing rule for repeat offenders convicted of drunk driving. Governor King feels that without this rule the committee bill falls far short of the kind of legislation the people of Massachusetts need and deserve.

Governor King proposes that the legislature insert into the drunk driving bill a non-suspendable jail term of 14 days for second offenders, as well as a mandatory one-year license loss and a requirement to attend a specialized treatment program. Proposed penalties for third and subsequent offenders are even greater. The proposal will eliminate continuances without a finding and truly establish clear and graded penalties.

The Governor's proposed penalties are drawn from a report issued by his Task Force on Alcohol Abuse and Highway Safety. The task force labored extensively throughout the state for a solution to the problem of drunk driving and ultimately recommended mandatory sentencing for repeated drunk driving offenses.

The public demands and is entitled to safety on the roads; Governor King maintains that the only way to assure this right is through mandatory jail sentencing.

William Fitzgerald

William Joseph Fitzgerald, a former Boston fire department commissioner, and an officer in investment and realty firms, died June 8 at the Deaconess Hospital, Boston. He was 64.

Raised in South Boston and a graduate of Boston English High School, he received a law degree at Northeastern University after attending the law school nights while working as a low clerk. He passed the Massachusetts bar in 1942.

Rum is something of a medical marvel...

disorder on New Years Eve. Mrs. Joan Williams said a local veterinarian told her, "Rum was the worst case she had ever heard and that we could expect to find him dead at any time."

One specialist predicted in January that Rum had between two and five months to live. Six months have passed and "So far he (Rum) is fooling them...saying, ha ha, I'm still here," said Joan.

Rum not only fools the doctors but he gives Oscar performances for the Williams family as well, from time to time he plays dead when he's told to do something he doesn't want to.

For example when he's told to go in his pen, he'll plop right down and play dead, said Joan. "You have to figure out a way to fool him," she said, because at his weight you can't budge him.

Rum takes medication which has helped delay his eventual death. "He is supposed to be confined to his pen," said Todd. "But we don't like to confine him...that would be cruel. He knows that he has to go in his pen at night," said Joan.

Except for a few fainting spells when Rum gets too active, "he doesn't seem to be in any discomfort and you wouldn't know that he was suffering," said Joan.

The day before the operation the Wiliams family said their good-byes to Rum since there was only a 50-50 chance of survivial. "We were happy to get him back," said Todd.

Todd brought Rum home when the pup was just six weeks old. "We had a choice of ten pups in the litter and we had to pick the one with the heart murmur," said Joan.

Rum is a friendly, smart dog, and has won the love of his neighbors on Elm Court. "He is so well-mannered and good-natured...He's a celebrity in the neighborhood," said Todd.

One new neighbor met Rum when she left the sliding door open and he wandered into her home. She thought he was a bear and screamed.

Ten month-old "Rum" plants a kiss on Keith Williams, 6, while Kim Williams, 14, looks on.

When describing Rum, family members say he is remarkably smart, happy and clumsy. Todd said, "He just sits there and watches the world go by." "He just sits there and looks charming," added Joan.

Rum's favorite time of year is the winter; he loves the snow and the deeper it is the better. For Christmas last year, he received a sled which he has been unable to use because it would be too exhausting for his heart.

While snow is his favorite, Rum seems to dislike rain. Joan said, last week, Rum sat in his pen and looked up toward the raining sky wondering, "When will this rain stop?"

The Williams family is prepared for Rum's inevitable early death. Todd plans to replace Rum with another Newfoundland dog. "You just couldn't come home every day and look at his empty pen.

New PSO organizes, elects officers

The Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO) this week announces its board of officers for the 1982-83 school year.

The officers are: Nancy Sandell, President; Edward Atkinson, vice president; Marie McCarthy, secretary; John Conroy, treasurer; Patricia Baird and Martha Equi are school representatives for the Osgood School, Maria Plante and Karin Bartow for Deer Hill, Mary Hartwell and Joan Shockman for the junior high, and Millie Mitman and James Leonard for the high school.

Committee chairmen are Laura Doherty, arts enrichment; Roy Fitzsimmons, fund-raising; Jane Ellis, METCO host families; Susan McNamara, PSO activities; Regina Schultz, publicity; Taffy Nothnagle, special needs; and Patricia Ellinger, volunteers.

The PSO thanks those parents who took the time to vote and return their ballots and those individuals who volunteered to serve on a committee. A total of 59 responses were received, with 47 voting the slate presented by the nominating committee, seven voting a partial slate, and five ballots with write-in candididates.

Write-in candididates will be contacted and it is hoped that they will serve the organization in some capacity next year.

The PSO will be planning its fall meeting over the summer and will be looking forward to seeing parents and teachers then.

Committee chairmen and school representatives would appreciate hearing from parents, now, who wish to work with them.

METCO picnic Sunday

The school picnic, sponsored by the METCO-Host Families scheduled for last Sunday, has been postponed to Sunday, June 20, shine or rain, from 2 to 5 p.m.

It will take place behind the high school, or inside if poor weather prevails.

Families should bring a picnic lunch; drinks, ice cream and grills will be provided.

All Cohasset families, friends and school staff are invited to this function.

Swim Center open

The Cohasset Swim Center will open Saturday, June 19. There will be an open house that day and Sunday, June 20.

On Sunday at 5 there will be a wine and cheese party for adults only. If you haven't received a brochure and application form, they will be available at the pool.

Sci Center outdoor classes

Four days in an outdoor classroom are offered by the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell to be spent on Appledore Island, largest of the nine Isles of Shoals off the coasts of Maine and New Hampshire.

The island, with three miles of rugged, granite coastline, is a Registered Historic Site and State of Maine Critical Natural Area, both as a heron rookery and rocky intertidal and subtidal locality. A colony of harbor seals breeds there; whales, porpoises and dolphins visit annually; more than 125 species of pelagic and inland birds use the island as a migratory resting spot.

Plans are underway for second celebrity auction

The Cohasset Historical Society's second gigantic Celebrity Auction will be held on Saturday, August 7 at the historic Cohasset Town Hall.

This fund-raising event follows the highly successful auction held two summers ago. Invitations for donations of interesting auction items have been sent out to hundreds of celebrities in many parts of the United States and Canada, representing diverse fields of endeavor, including sports, entertainment, politics, science, theater, the fine arts, and literature.

To date, more than 250 individual items have been received from the great and near-great of these diverse worlds.

For instance: Vice President George Bush has sent a pair of cuff links with the Vice Presidential Seal; the U.S. Olympic Committee has donated a 1984 Olympic wool cap, and Olympic key ring and a 1984 Olympic tote bag. Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has sent an Official autographed baseball; actress Dyan Cannon an autographed photo and a brown outfit worn by her; Mitzi Gaynor contributed a genuine "Mitzi Pillow", and the entrancing "superstar" Miss Piggy generously has donated an autographed glove, courtesy of Frank Oz, her puppeteer.

The New England Patriots and several other professional football teams have sent team autographed footballs; the New York Cosmos soccer team an autographed soccer ball.

From former Astronaut Frank Borman comes a medallion made from metal of the lunar orbiter Apollo 8. Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada sent an autographed picture; and hockey superstar Wayne Gretzky another of himself.

The Montreal Canadians have sent hockey sticks, pucks, hats and banners (we are thinking of sponsoring an entire hockey team next year), and the Atlanta Hawks a real pair of autographed basketball shoes, size 15.

Several U.S. Senators and Representatives have contributed a unique selection of Congressional ashtrays, coasters, pictures, and books on historical aspects of WashingtonD.C. Included (to name a few) are:Sen. Paul Laxalt, Sen. William Cohen, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, Rep. Margaret Heckler, and Rep. Brian Donnelly. The world of Classical music is represented by pianist Rosalind Tureck's gift of a phonograph record of herself playing music of J.S. Bach.

Among authors, John Updike has contributed one of his recent novels, Joanna Barnes of Hingham has sent one of her most recent books, and historical author Dumas Malone has given a two volume set of his writings about President Thomas Jefferson. Several publishing companies have sent selections of their recent publications, and a fine selection of typical books will be available at the Auction.

The South Shore Music Circus, following up its generous contribution of giant-sized posters of theatrical performers for the previous Auction, has sent 20 more of these unique posters picturing artists who have appeared at the Music Circus in the past two years. Additionally, we should note that fine selection of vocal and instrumental L.P. records has been contributed by such performers as Neal Sedaka, Bobby Vinton, Patsey Montana and a host of others.

The list of contributors to the Historical Society's Auction is literally too long to report in full, and new items are still arriving. For the Celebrity Auction there will be a guest auctioneer to be chosen by the Auction Committee and announced soon.

The Society's Auction Committee consists of John Campbell, Eleanor Cooney, Drexel Gibson, and John Mullett, assisted by Society Curator David Wadsworth.

Celebrity Auctions are a fund raising event which have become increasingly popular in the past few years, and this summer's Historical Society version promises to be one of the most exciting events of Cohasset's busy summer season.

Be sure to make plans to attend and participate; you might find the items presented to be just what you always wanted, and certainly the price will be right.

'Some have more freedom than others'

By Lois Martin

Ok. So what if they don't pass it. What does that mean?

For the most part I'm a realist. And from that perspective it looks like the Equal Rights Amendment won't gather enough support by the end of the month to gain its legal place.

The ERA says simply that equal rights can't be denied or abridged, compromised, because of one's sex. That is the law intends to affirm or reaffirm, depending on what position you've held, that a person cannot be refused the same pay for the same work, for example, merely because he's a man...

But you and I know that hasn't been the reason behind the ERA. It became a proposal because women believed their rights had been abridged and denied.

Perhaps the majority of people think there was never a legal need for the ERA. Certainly it's on the record in America that all men are created equal. Some just felt that the fact that women were equal to men needed saying.

Well, I'm saying it here. And I've said it without the ERA being law. And I'll continue to say it whether or not,the bloomin' thing passes or fails. Equality is not dependent on the law to exist, to be fact.

That has never meant, for common sense thinkers, that the two sexes were the same, only that they should be treated with equal opportunity, respect and recognition. Nothing out of orbit about that. Puts no one out of a job. Doesn't put a nursing mother on the front lines. Won't sentence a husband to the dishes forever and it won't guarantee he's in line for the next promotion.

Frankly the law has been on more than one book for far longer than 200 years. The old Golden Rule, you know, isn't far from the ERA, if one were to subtract political or emotional complications from the amendment.

Well, at the end of June Phyllis can go home and finally put her apron back on. She's had to spend these ERA years out telling women how they shouldn't leave home. She hasn't had a minute's rest.

Nor has she given any. Phyllis Shlafley has ticked me off more than any other woman/person (ERA) I can think of within recent years.

She has seemed to me the ultimate in contratemps and hypocrisy. I dislike threats anyway. And she made of the call for affirmation of fairness to all people a base, nearly hideous study in fear. The same woman who said women must stay home and be protected by men has been on as many talk shows, flown more miles and matched the verbal lineage of most politicians within the same time frame.

I never saw in the ERA my own equality. I can only find that in myself. You cannot give me my freedom here in America. I shall not ask you for it. I'm taking it and you shall do the same. The responsibility in taking it is that my liberty shall never be at the expense of yours.

Funny though how some have run scared. They felt a loss of freedom when they feared others would get more.

But I've supported the ERA. If it would be helpful in bringing about respect and dignity and opportunity for all people (men and women) I shall endorse it. But then I also endorse responsibility with guns and those laws are on the books but that hasn't exactly made everyone careful with weapons, has it?

Same with freedom. We don't legally want that denied or abridged in America even without the ERA. But it is a clear fact that some have more freedom than others.

It could pass, though, surprising us all. And if it does, not to panic either. I put my stock in the high school juniors I know, those young women and men who expect equal achievement from each other. I've seen them chin to chin, arm in arm and side by side. Seems to me they are equal. And even better, they are still magnificently different. And that's why I never feared the ERA. Being treated fairly never interfered with the opposite sexes treating one another special.

So ERA or not, the matter of freedom is still personal in America, and must be preserved at that level.

Boating tips

Your boat is more than just a car that floats. It's also a life support system protecting you from a hostile environment — the ocean. If your boat develops a mechanical failure, you can get into serious trouble very quickly, and you can't walk to a nearby service station. Proper boat maintenance goes a long way towards insuring your safety, but there are times when, despite your best maintenance efforts, something goes wrong. In these cases, your very survival may depend on your ability to repair the problem. Become familiar with the mechanical systems of your boat. You don't have to be a mechanic. Most problems are simple, obvious and easily fixed. Manufacturers often provide troubleshooting manuals which are a great help in making on the spot repairs.

For further information, call 383-0088, weekdays, from 9-1 p.m.

Summer reading program

"Dungeons and Dragons, Castles and Keeps" will keep Cohasset students reading through the summer at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

This year's Summer Reading program features a friendly Dragon-in-Residence. A participant who reads 10 books will choose a riddle stone from the Dragon's mouth to be exchanged for a riddle at the children's room desk. The 12-foot Castle and Dragon are the creative donations of library volunteer, Liz Glasfeld.

Riddle-solving as a family project is encouraged. When the riddle is answered, the reader's name will be placed on a Reading Ladder which will scale the Castle walls to the Wizard's Keep.

Those participants who read 20 books and solve two riddles will be awarded a paperback book of their choice. These books are a special collection purchased for the program by the Friends of the Library. Summer Reading Certificates will be presented in the schools in the fall.

The focus of the program is to keep young people reading through the summer months: reading for pleasure, for information, to expand their reading background, and to keep sharpened their reading skills.

Both Marilyn Pope and Jo Ann Mitchell will be available to assist children with their reading selections and with school reading lists which are available at the children's room desk.

Reading cards to record the titles read at each participant's own reading level may be picked up at the library and must be endorsed by a parent. The cards will be displayed in the schools in the fall.

Give your children a headstart on the coming school year with "Dungeons and Dragons, Castles and Keeps."

The program began June 14 and continues through Sept. 10.

CHS girls eliminated in tennis tourney

The Cohasset girls' tennis squad was eliminated from the semifinals of the Division II South Sectional tournament last week.Bishop Stang, the defending champions, defeated the Skippers, 3-2, in Sandwich.

It was a contest which almost tipped in Cohasset's favor. However, only the doubles teams came up winning for the Skippers while the singles matches came very, very close to victories.

Now that the season is over, Cohasset tennis coach Peggy Lynch can take a much deserved rest. Instead of worrying about future tournament opposition she can battle bronchitis which she has suffered from during the last part of the season. The hectic tourney schedule is over for Cohasset and hopefully Lynch will make a full recovery soon.

Against Bishop Stang last week, Cohasset's first doubles team of Joy Pratt and Krissie Ralff won their match after losing a tiebreaking first set, 6-7 (6-8), 6-4, 6-4. In second doubles, the Skippers' dynamite sisterly duo of the Elaine and Diane Mullen defeated their opponents, 6-0, 6-3.

Senior co-captain Sue Dalrymple withstood two hours of long rallies in first singles. In the first set, four games went into deuce decisions. Dalrymple lost the match 6-0, 6-1.

Second singles player Mia Graham was defeated 7-5, 6-4 by Stang's Lisa Demakis, who is a NELTA ranked player.

Senior co-captain Karen Murphy fought for three and one-half hours in the third singles matchup. Murphy captured the first set win in a tiebreaker (7-5). She was losing the tiebreaker 3-1 and still managed to grab the set victory. Murphy's opponent, Elise Bilodeau won the second and third sets, 6-3. Bilodeau was the first opponent to defeat Karen in two years.

Graham, Murphy and Pratt were recently named to the South Shore League all-star team. Juniors Graham and Pratt were also elected co-captains for the next year's CHS squad.

The Skippers finished second in the league. Enroute to the semi-finals of the tournament, Cohasset defeated King Philip, 3-2, and Dartmouth, 4-1.

Skippers softball squad eliminated from tourney

By Donna Cogliano

Tears swelled in the eyes of Cohasset softball players at the close of last week's quarterfinal softball game with Bristol Plymouth. The 12-10 loss to Bristol Plymouth marked a sudden end to a glamorous 1982 season.

The Skippers were accustomed to winning. They hadn't lost a game since early April. They were the softball champions of the South Shore League and the first CHS softball team to win a title since the 1950's. They had collected 19 wins.

The softball girls were aiming for win number 20 which would have set a school record for the most wins in one season. After five innings versus Bristol Plymouth the Skippers held a 10-5 lead. Cohasset left the bases loaded that inning, and BP came to bat but didn't score that innings.

It was in the sixth inning where Bristol Plymouth scored seven runs, thus shattering Cohasset's dreams of advancing to the finals of Division II tourney play. "We played terrible defense," said Cohasset Coach Bill Fallon. The Skippers committed four errors in the sixth inning and six for the day.

"I thought we were a much better team. And if we played them five times we'd probably beat them four times," Fallon said. Because Cohasset was the visiting team, they had only the top of the seventh inning to play catch up. Cohasset didn't score in the seventh and the game was decided without BP needing to bat in that last inning.

Cohasset totaled 13 hits for the day and six errors for the day. BP posted 15 hits and one error.

"If we had lost to a better team, the girls wouldn't have been so upset," Fallon said. Plus, seven girls were seniors on the team and it was their last chance to prove what a strong team they were, he said. The seven starting seniors for Cohasset were: Stacy Thompson, who hit two doubles versus BP; Karen Froio, two hits; Laurie Sandblom, two triples to left-center field; pitcher Liz Russell who walked six batters; Sarah Froio, scored twice; Laura Hines at second base and Madeline Roy, the first baseman.

Other participants for Cohasset throughout the year were: left fielder Janet DiGirolamo, catcher Gia Barresi, third baseman Carla Lucas, outfielder Nancy Kunt, a junior, and infielders Kim Whittet and Kristin Wilkin.

"Overall I thought we had a tremendous season and everyone on the team worked hard. It was a shame to finish the way we did...and the way we performed wasn't indicative of the team we were. I thought we had a better ball club than we showed," said Fallon.

He said, "I was proud of everyone. They did everything that I asked them to...they all played so hard."

The softball team finished the season with a 19-1 record.

Softball quarter final action in Eastern Mass. tourney

TOURNEY LOSS — Cohasset softball players stand dejected having just lost to Bristol Plymouth in the quarterfinals.

Laura Hines puts the tag on a Bristol Plymouth runner at second base and stops her from advancing.

Senior Laurie Sandblom tries to hold back the tears after her team lost 12-10.

Captain Karen Froio reflects on the season after being eliminated from the tourney. Someone once said, "the only bad part about being a good sport is that you have to lose to prove it."

And now comes that very special Sunday set aside each June — Father's Day. Certainly he would never think to remind us — father's seldom ask anything for themselves, but we can all guess how disappointed he'd be if we forgot. Though newspaper ads urge us to remember him with a new tie, a sporty shirt, or fragrant shaving lotion, he probably could care less, for material things mean little compared to a visit, a hug, or perhaps a meal composed of what you know are his favorite foods. To make his day memorable, why not serve Renee Plummer's

MUSHROOM STUFFED CHICKEN

1/2 lb. mushrooms, chopped fine
1/2 tsp. salt, 1/4 tsp. pepper
3/4 c. butter or oleo, divided
1½ c. bread crumbs, divided
1/4 tsp. nutmeg
4 large chicken breasts, skinned, boned and halved approx. 3 lb.
1 c. heavy cream

In large skillet saute mushrooms, salt and pepper in 1/2 c. butter until butter is absorbed and mushrooms are dark. Remove from heat. Stir in 3/4 c. crumbs and nutmeg. Divide this stuffing evenly among each breast half. Fold chicken over stuffing. Place seam side down in 8" baking dish. Melt remaining butter. Brush on chicken and sprinkle with remaining crumbs. Pour cream around chicken. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 40 min., or until fork tender. Serve with pan gravy. Makes four servings.

While merchants keep urging us to get Dad a gift that would require a bank loan to finance, the fact is, few presents can match the mouthwatering memory of those that disappear with a delectable swallow or two. How about Jay Anthony's

APPLE PIE FIT FOR A KING

6 large tart apples, pared, cored and quartered
1 c. sugar
1/2 tsp. grated lemon rind
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
1/4 tsp. nutmeg
Butter
Pastry for two-crust pie

Slice apples thinly into pastry lined 9 or 10" pie plate, blending the sugar as you go along. Grate lemon rind over apples, sprinkle with cinnamon and nutmeg and dot with butter. Cover with top crust. Bake for 10 min. in 400 degree oven, then lower to 350 degrees and bake for another 50 to 60 min. When finished, immediately brush top crust with melted butter. Serve hot or cold.

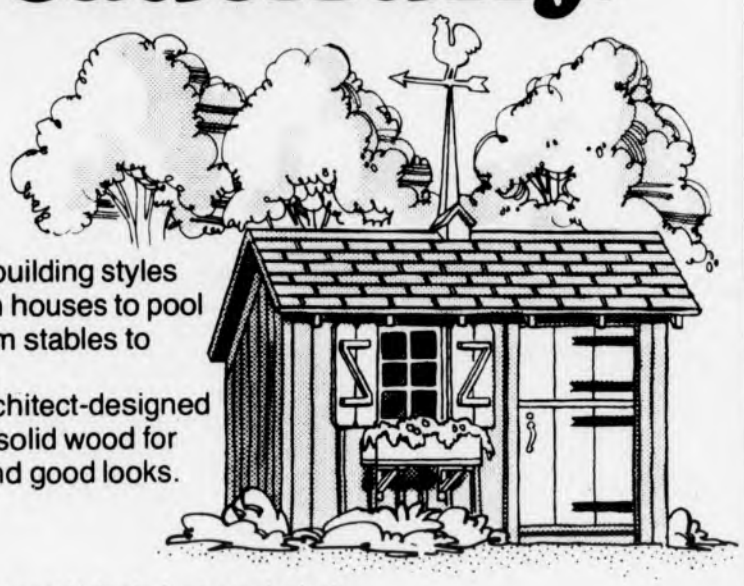
Pampering Dad on Father's Day could very well include a leisurely breakfast. Make sure it doesn't even faintly resemble one reported in the London Times in 1863 by Sir William Howard Russell who wrote that the typical Yankee's day began with a breakfast of "black tea and toast, eggs, fresh spring shad, wild pigeons, pigs' feet, two robins on toast and oysters." Ah well, perhaps the Times correspondent might think us a little strange, cooking over an open fire, braving mosquitoes and gypsy moths for an outdoor cookout, a typical Sunday scene on Father's Day. If you're asked to bring a dish, this one is sure to be a hit. Like a good joke, this recipe has been passed around in Marshfield since Ginny Gili got it at Scituate's Gourmet Decorator Guild and passed it on to Barbara Warren and is called



BEET SALAD

6 to 7" copper mold will serve approx. eight
1 can cubed beets
2 T tarragon wine vinegar
1 pkg. lemon jello, 3 oz.
1/2 tsp. salt
2 T chopped onion
2 T horseradish
3/4 c. diced celery

Drain beets and save juice. Add water to beet juice and vinegar to make 1½ c. Boil this liquor and stir in jello, salt, onion and horseradish. Put in refrigerator and when partly set, add beets and celery. Serve with sour cream and mayonnaise.

Cohasset represented at Garden Day Promenade

Members and friends of the Cohasset Historical Society attended the 1982 bi-annual "Garden Day Promenade" held at Boston Public Garden last Saturday.

The Cohasset group had been honored by a request from Promenade directors asking for its participation in the Swan Boat tableaux of floats representing various aspects of Victorian life in Boston.

The Cohasset entry, viewed by thousands, was a portrayal of a typical Victorian Wedding. The tableaux on the Public Garden Pond saw a number of entries presented by various area organizations. In addition to the Cohasset Society's float, the Bostonian Society, celebrating its centennial year, entered one in which the costumes had been borrowed from the Cohasset Historical Society's extensive Gown Collection.

Cohasset's Victorian Wedding float featured the following cast: the Bride was played by Joy Pratt; the Groom by Diarmuid O'Connell; Bridesmaid by Mia Graham; Attendants by Pamela Parker and Sarah Parker; the Mother of the Bride was Mrs. Frederick L. Parker; Grandmother was Mrs. Carl Tuthill; and the Minister was portrayed by Frederick L. Parker; all of Cohasset.

The Public Garden Promenade, held every other year, is an event sponsored by the Friends of the Public Garden and by other Boston community organizations.

The tableaux themselves, each lasting for some 20 minutes, are presented aboard the famous Public Garden swanboats as the boats slowly circle about the small pond in the center of the Garden itself. Promenade judges selected Cohasset's entry as among the prize-winning floats, according to Helen Hannon of the Promenade Committee. Cohasset participants were outfitted in appropriate Victorian costumes carefully chosen from the local Society's collection of Gcwns and Costumes.

Recently, some of these same authentic clothes have been worn in a fashion show held at St. Francis Cabrini's Fashion Show in Scituate and by members of the Cohasset Dramatic Club in their Spring production of the play "Strange Bedfellows" at Cohasset Town Hall.

Last Saturday, while many Cohasseters were viewing the media event at Cohasset Common, the Tokwn's Historical Society was entertaining thousands of spectators at Boston's Public Garden. "Dressing up and promenading through the Garden was a very popular pastime during the 19th Century.

The atmosphere then, as it is during Promenade, was very festive, "like a summer festival," notes the Promenade Committee. Spectators and Cohasset Historical Society participants alike enjoyed the gala activities at the 1982 Victorian Promenade.

Selectman Ainslie balks at press coverage

Ainslie issue pow wow Thursday

Selectmen and Police Chief John DeBassio are scheduled to meet tomorrow night, (Thursday) at Town Hall to discuss use of permanent intermittent Police Officer Lawrence Ainslie.

Three weeks ago, Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie, Jr. and Selectmen Rocco Laugelle told the chief he must use permanent intermittent patrolman Ainslie for special work details on an equal basis. Lawrence Ainslie is the selectman's nephew.

DeBassio challenged the board's decision and asked for an opinion from town counsel. In a two-page letter to selectmen, Town Counsel Blake Thaxter backed the board's action.

Wednesday's regularly scheduled selectman's meeting will be recessed after opening bids. The meeting will resume Thursday at 8 p.m. The meeting was changed to Thursday to allow Laugelle to attend the Norfolk County meeting of selectmen on Wednesday evening.

Selectmen seemed anxious to meet with DeBassio this week but gave no indication that they would change their decision.

"I think a lot of things will be cleared up once we sit down with the Chief," said Laugelle.

"I feel that by next week...we'll resolve this into simple issues," noted Selectman Ainslie.

Ainslie told a group of 30 residents at last week's meeting that he would send a personal letter to the Chief. He would not reveal the contents because he wanted DeBassio to receive the letter before reading about it in the newspapers.

Ainslie, several times last week, expressed disapproval of recent press coverage on the selectmen's action.

"I feel this whole thing has been blown out of proportion," he said, adding the press has refused to understand the issue or what took place.

"Anything that I've told the press has been distorted," he said. Ainslie is planning to release a statement which includes facts which would clarify the issue. He wouldn't talk about that information at the meeting saying, "I don't think we shold talk about it now, we are only giving more ammunition for the papers to throw around and keep the fires burning."

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur attended the Wednesday meeting with a cast on her left leg which extended from her foot to the knee area. She presented the board with a petition of more than 450 signatures.

The petitioners supported DeBassio saying, "We are against political interference by selectmen... taking away the operations and decision making that can only be made by a qualified excellent Chief."

McArthur, who was absent from the board's vote three weeks ago, disapproved of her fellow members' action. "I believe that the chief is more

Compromise sought on saving Cedar dump

As the Mariner went to press Tuesday, town and state officials were meeting to negotiate a compromise to keep the dump open.

So far the state hasn't taken a hard line on the dump despite violations which continued for five years.

The latest problem concerns the lack of money, voted by town meeting, to pay for engineering plans worked out in early spring by town and state officials.

After the second round of bidding the town still doesn't have enough money to pay the costs of expanding and capping the town dump at Cedar Street.

Inside...

CHS track coach Charles Davis calls it a career after 21 years...page 12

April town meeting voters appropriated $240,000 for the Cedar Street landfill project. The lowest bid received in the second round of bidding on June 7 was $39,000 more than what was budgeted for. The lowest bid was $278,994 and came from Sylvester Ray Inc. of Marshfield. And only one other company bid on the project.

Recent rains have added to concerns for Health Board officials. The board met in special workshop session on Monday to discuss the dump problem. Selectmen have asked the Dump Study Committee to assist the Health Board in researching the dump situation.

Capping the dump calls for placement of a layer of silt sand over the existing trash heap to prevent continued contamination of Rattlesnake Run.

Beach stickers now at the police station

Residents may obtain stickers from noon to 4 p.m. weekdays and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on weekends at the police station.

Stickers cost $10 per residence and $2 for each additional sticker. Police Chief John DeBassio urges residents to clean their car window first and wipe it dry before applying the sticker.

In order to use the town's disposal area starting July 1, vehicles will be required to display a sticker.

The first sticker in any given family costs $10. All other family vehicles may be stickered at a cost of $2. There is no limit to the number of stickers which may be issued for vehicles in a particular family.

Once the fee is paid, replacements are free. Stickers should be affixed to the rear window except for convertibles where the sticker should be placed on the side window.

Persons owning land, in the absence of a dwelling are not eligible for a sticker. Stickers will only be issued to family members living in the household, not outside town.

Temporary 14-day permits will be available for house guests. Guest permits cost $2 and are renewable after 14 days. Motel and hotel guests are also eligible for temporary permits.

Cohasset's week...

Voter registration

Residents must register to vote by Aug. 17 to vote in the State Primaries Sept. 14.

Residents may register weekdays at the Town Clerk's office in Town Hall, between 8:30 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Special hours for registration have been scheduled as follows: Tuesday, Aug 3, 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.; Saturday, Aug 14, noon to 8 p.m.; and Tuesday, Aug 17, 9 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Japanese students

Placement of Interstudy's Japanese exchange students is well underway. Margot Cheel, group representative reports that half the host families neded have already signed on.

While the educational and cultural programs runs Aug. 3-25, families wishing to host are asked to let Mrs. Cheel know by June 30. This insures time for the students in Japan to know they have a home and to receive word from their host family.

New families are welcome! Telephone Margot Cheel at 383-6845.

Phony signature bill

State Reps. Thomas Brownell (D-Quincy) and Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) report that legislation they sponsored to penalize persons for forging signatures on petitions to elected officials has advanced out of the Criminal Justice Committee and is now on the House Calendar.

The legislation was filed in response to a bogus petition drive to solicit Rep. Brownell's support for casino gambling. Upon investigation, it was found that 25 percent of the petitions were forgeries of Rep. Brownell's constituent names.

Reps. Brownell and Murray are sponsoring the legislation to correct a loophole in the law; no penalty presently exists under the Massachusetts General Laws for petition forgery, although it is a common law violation.

Their argument rests on Article XIV of the Massachusetts Constitution which grants citizens the right to petition legislators to redress grievances and instruct on a course of action. The effect of a false writing would be to prejudice constituents' constitutional rights since the writings preempt and/or nullify their rights to instruct.

School contracts

The school committee approved purchase of 239 supply items for $13,181. All but seven items were awarded to the low bidder.

School, Office and Art supplies were awarded to the following five companies: Crimson Paper of Newton, J.L. Hammett Co. of Braintree, Kenson Sales of Wollaston, Mainco of Canton and New England School Supply in Springfield.

qualified than the board...I don't think the board has full expertise in making decisions," said McArthur.

Ainslie said the vote taken three weeks ago was to tell the chief to follow the civil service rules regarding permanent intermittent officer Lawrence Ainslie.

McArthur said the background and psychological evaluations, "haven't been fully explored," by the board. She said the board did not understand that a person doesn't pass or flunk an a psychological examination. The tests are just an instrument to point out the type of person you are dealing with, said McArthur.

Laugelle said one alternative is to have a hearing to terminate Ainslie's assignment as a permanent intermittent police officer. Laugelle asked those at the meeting, "Do we have any charges to bring against...Officer Ainslie's credibility? If anyone does then we can have a hearing to fire him."

Last week the advisory board sent a letter to selectmen opposing the board's recent action. At the Advisory Board's meeting, member Jim Lagrotteria said, "There isn't anyone in town not talking about this." He said there hasn't been so much talk in town since the high school football team was undefeated.

"But the real issue here is the disunity between the police chief and selectmen," said Lagrotteria. A policy has not been established which clarifies the roles of selectmen and the Chief, he said. "I feel strongly that they (selectmen) are treading in places where they don't belong. I don't know how the selectmen are going to save face."

Advisor Stephen Bartow said, "I think we are in danger of losing what has turned out to be a good police chief."

One police officer told selectmen that the department had improved substantially from 2 years ago. "We've been to more schools in the last two years than in the past 15 years," he said.

Besides the petition, selectmen received six letters last week supporting the Chief.

Since the vote on the Ainslie issue, selectmen have started to tape record discussions at their meetings.

Compromise sought on the dump...

Back in 1977 the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) told the town capping was necessary. Meanwhile the town has been in violation of state law. In 1980, the Attorney General's office was in the process of getting a court order against the town.

The problem is that rain trickling through the trash becomes polluted and then seeps into the water feeding that stream.

Fred DeFeo of Flynn Engineering was to meet with state officials to see if the town can change its closure plan to use clay instead of silt sand. Clay is the less expensive material. State officials from DEQE are concerned that the clay would allow leachate to seep from the dump into nearby land.

The town must fine a solution for the dump problem or else it will continue to operate the landfill site in violation of their plan with DEQE.

Though Health Board members have expressed concern that the dump might be forced to close in a matter of weeks, no definitive time frame has been decided.

Dump stickers

The Board of Health reminds residents that stickers are necessary to gain entrance to the landfill.

After July 1, 1982, no one will gain entrance to the Cedar Street Landfill without a beach/utilities sticker. This will be stringently enforced.

School committee briefs...

ACTIVITY AIDES

Four activity aides were appointed to serve in the elementary schools. There are still activity aide vacancies at the Osgood School.

Aides appointed on Monday were: Shirley Prendergast at Osgood and Elizabeth Longo, Margaret Hernan and Mary Muncey at the Deer Hill School.

MAINSTREAM PERSONNEL

The school committee approved the appointments of Florence Ely, a specialist, and Mary Benbow as an occupational therapist. The board's vote, taken on Monday, was unanimous, 5-0.

COMPUTER PURCHASE APPROVED

The school committee approved the purchase of ten micro-computers from Radio Shack. Besides the hardware, software and various supplies will be bought for next fall.

Four of the new micro-computers will be installed into the elementary schools while six micro's will be assigned to the junior/senior high school.

The board approved the computer proposal which costs $19,252. Purchase of the hardware amounts to $17,025 while supplies total, $1,555 and software, $49.

Included in the bid award is purchase of $1,023 of equipment which would provide administrative functions for scheduling, report cards and attendance keeping.

EXTRA COMPENSATION APPOINTMENTS

Nine positions were approved by the school committee on Monday for extra compensation assignments. Clare Brady was named to three coaching positions — assistant track, junior varsity field hockey and eighth grade girls' basketball. Thomas Burnell was appointed varsity hockey and baseball coach for the Skippers.

Other extra compensation appointments which were approved included: Dennis Walsh, senior class advisor; Clark Chatterton, athletic director and Jim Franey, varsity golf.

BUS DRIVERS' POOL

On Monday the school committee assigned 11 bus drivers to next year's pool. The full-time, part-time and substitute drivers include: Paul Brown, Janet Figeiredo, Mary Goff, Larraine Lesher, Thomas Ray, Charlotte Skidmore, George Card, John Foster, Harry Langton, Bonnie Palm and John Scarry.

SOFTBALL TEAM RECOGNIZED

Members of the school committee praised this year's girls' softball team for their successful season. The school committee was equally pleased with the performance of Cohasset Coach Bill Fallon.

Instead of yelling at a player for making an error, Fallon would say, "We'll get them next inning," said School Committee member Dick Conley. It was exciting to watch the girls' softball team and they had a fantastic year, said Conley. "They were a well-disciplined team and a credit to themselves," Conley said.

The school committee congratulated four varsity teams that qualified for tournament action. The girls' softball squad advanced to the quarterfinals of the tourney as did the boys' tennis team. The golf team qualified for the final of the South Sectionals and the girls' tennis squad was eliminated from the tourney in the semi-final round of action.

INSTRUCTIONAL AIDES

Instructional aides were conditionally appointed by the school committee on Monday. The appointments are contingent on receipt of federal and state funding.

The following 13 instructional aides were named: Alison Ayer, Ruth Muir, Carol Wallace, Nancy Gilmore, Deanne Noiseux, Susan Sadler, Nancy Scopa, Lorene Miller, June Simeone, Marion Atkinson, Helen Mulhern, Clare Brady and Janet Willis.

PREVENTION OF SCHOOL FAILURE

The school committee approved a grant on Monday for early prevention of school failure. The Title IV-C grant amounts to $2,340 for the 1982-83 school year.

The grant enables the Cohasset school system to provide early intervention training for the kindergarten and special needs staff.

The cooperative grant represents an effort between the Cohasset Public Schools and the nursery schools to provide early screening and recommendation of developmental learning disabilities.

The choice of color in a kitchen is important. Consider the amount of time spent in this popular part of the house and its affect on your feelings. Limitless color choices were not always a part of kitchen decoration. Sixty years ago, a kitchen was almost always painted in a shade of white so as to reflect light and suggest cleanliness. The blue of "Agate Ware" (dark blue utensils with white speckles), was considered to be the "kitchen color." Slowly, different colors found their way into the kitchen, including "sandalwood" in the 60's and "avocado" in the 70's. Today, good artificial lighting allows personal preferences to prevail.

The kitchen tends to be the focal point for most families and how you decorate your kitchen will reflect your own sense of security, friendliness and welcomeness. Here at BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE we are pleased to feature Kyanize paints and can mix and match thousands of different shades and hues. Top in Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs & Fri 8-8:30, Sat 7-5 to 763 Country Way in N. Scituate or phone 545-3624. We can keep a record of your blend and match it exactly if additional quantities are required.

DECORATING TIP: Improved kitchen lighting also eliminates the need for white ceilings.

Appointment to the group, based on individual leadership achievements and overall office performance, is awarded to only 25 managers from a total of 320 in Hutton's branch office system. This is Cameron's second year in the club.

Cameron joined Hutton in 1969 as an account executive in the Boston office and became an assistant vice president and regional tax shelter director two years later. He became manager of the Chestnut Hill office in 1978, a vice president of the firm in 1979, and this year became manager of the Boston office.

Cameron graduated from Boston University where he earned a bachelor's degree in mathematics.

He is a member of the board of directors of the South Shore Playhouse Associates.

He and his wife have two sons.

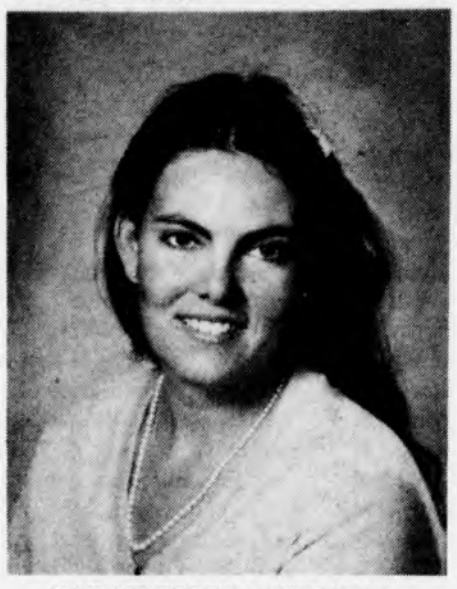
The daughter of Russell and Carol Sandblom of 18 Rustic Drive, Jodi played first baseman, scored seven runs and batted in two. She committed just four errors in 12 games.



Bates placed second in the Maine intercollegiate softball tournament and finished the season at 10-4.

☐Midshipman 3/c Charles R. Stockbridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stockbridge of 368 Beechwood St. recently made the Dean's List at Maine Maritime Academy. He is presently on the Academy Training Ship, "State of Maine," which is on a two month cruise across the Atlantic visiting the ports of Lisbon, Portugal and Barcelona, Spain.

SARAH-ELLEN ATKINSON

☐Sarah-Ellen Atkinson was recently awarded a Bachelor of Science degree in nursing from Saint Anselm College in New Hampshire.

While attending Saint Anselm, Atkinson was elected to the 1982 edition of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Atkinson is planning a career in nursing at one of the Boston area hospitals. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Atkinson of 59 Highland Ave.

☐A group of talented teen-age students of piano teacher Priscilla Daniels performed brilliantly in a musicale at her home recently.

Included in the program were: Jean Baley who played Solfegetto by Bach and Poem by Fibich, Peggy Maynard who played Six Variations by Beethoven and March of the Dwarves by Grieg, Vickie Spooner who played Waltzing Doll by Poldini and Tarantella by Pieczonka.

A special surprise was provided by third grader Sarah Deveney who delighted everyone with her performance of Sabre Dance, Gypsy Camp Fire, The Tapdancer and Spinning Song.

Mrs. Daniels will be playing at the newly renovated Hugo's Restaurant and also at the Whitton House this summer. She is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music and has been teaching piano in Cohasset for several years.

☐Jennifer Grisdale was back in town this past weekend to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Grisdale of South Main Street and also her horse.

She's certainly enthusiastic about her new job as a technical writer and is enjoying living in Winchester, although she says she still hasn't figured out where the town dump is. Jennifer, at one time wrote for the Cohasset Mariner.

☐For anyone who may have wondered whether the Deer Hill School was hosting a special meeting of the United Nations, the event actually was the Olympic Games in which each of the sixth grade classes chose a country to represent.

Members of Mr. Shultz's class researched the gods and goddesses of Greek mythology and Japan and Scotland were other countries picked for that special day. After marching around the school in their costumes, students participated in the traditional games.

June is the best month at school

By Karin Bartow

June is the month for open house at school. Plays, musicals, skits and project displays abound. The year's growth presents itself in the guise of reward-like activities.

Original picture books by two fifth grade classes, Mrs. Magoun's and Mrs. McDonald's, were performed for the first grade classes of the Osgood School last week by the authors and illustrators in the Deer Hill Library.

The first graders gathered around five groups of students dressed in costumes, on stilts, inside puppet theatres, barnyards and under rain clouds to hear their stories. Best of all, the younger students brought the books back to the Osgood School where they will become part of their grade library.

Joann Magoun explained that the fifth graders had been "working (on the books) gradually for two months, and continuously for the last two weeks." They wrote four or five drafts, designed the shape of the pages, illustrations, layout and colored the final copy with pens. The teachers laminated each page and cover and painstakingly bound the books with rings. The students then planned how they would "read" their story to the first graders (costumes, props, practice), and when it was all over, they gave their projects away.

The books give advice, answers, happy endings, riddles, things to think about. But in the real "giving" they shared their learning.

In a book dedicated to Anthony Bernardo (a fellow fifth grader presently in Italy), kids may learn "What Little Boys Like," according to two fifth grade boys: "Teddy bears, pizza, candy, spaghetti, bikes, Atari and little girls!"

Two friendly monsters rescue a town besieged by mean soldiers who ban candy (think of it!) In a "teddy" counting book, teddy bears fall off a wall one by one until there's only "one teddy bear sitting with a frown because all the rest are down on the ground." In another, teddy (at the carnival), readers can do a maze at the end of the story, or design a pizza page (teddy's favorite food).

A loveable little raindrop faces the world in "Your Time Has Come, Harriet." She worries about pushing off from her cloud-home to travel the way of all raindrops. She finds that the world is "not cold and unfriendly, just hard for a little raindrop to get along in." And as her grandfather told her, she eventually evaporates from a lake and goes home again.

Zany alphabets by soup, food, fish and all manner of animal, challenge little readers. There's "a" for exhausted alligator, "i" for lazy iguana, "j" for floating jelly fish (with buck teeth) to "s" for dilly-dallying snail; "c" for caterpillar soup (it is delicious), "k" for kangaroo leg (you wouldn't like it — it's gross), and "v" for violet pudding; and "b" for blue, the saddest fish, "f" for flying fish that soars (in a superfish suit) and "x" for x-ray fish who can see his bones.

"When you go to the circus, there are many acts going on all at once." Why? One book explains that when a circus performed their acts one by one, they took all day and consequently lost their audience. So, they cut the show to two hours and packed the tent.

From a riddle book: "What gets harder to catch the faster you run? (Answer: htaerb ruoy). "What gets black and brown and sits in a basket? (Answer: annanab a).

One first grader remarked that he thought the fifth graders were "crazy." He meant funny, wacky, fun, of course. Most were wide-eyed and smiling at all the fun in the library last week.

Water bill dies

We are pleased to note that Secretary of Environmental affairs John Bewick has decided against filing legislation he had drafted that would have created a 34-community water district in Southeastern Massachusetts.

The proposed district was primarily an attempt to remedy Brockton's long-standing water shortage. It would have done so at the possible expense of surrounding towns, including Cohasset, towns which have done a far better job of planning for the future than Brockton.

The good Secretary apparently got religion when his proposal opened the watergates to a flood of outrage in approximately 33 out of the 34 communities that would have been drafted into the district, all preceding puns intended.

As we say we are pleased with his reversal. We are always glad to welcome a public official into the land of the enlightened, and more importantly, Mr. Bewick's proposal as written posed grave risks to the rights of the communities that would have been in the district, as well as to the pocketbooks of the citizens of the communities.

Mr. Bewick's decision leaves the regional water problem unaddressed. The secretary has rightly pointed out that Brockton is not the only community in this, the fastest-growing part of Massachusetts, that can expect to run short of water in the next quarter century. We look forward to joining a continuing discussion of the problem, remembering that while it ought to be resolved in the next five years, it is not so urgent that it needs to be settled before the next rainfall.

A real danger, we believe, is that the water district proposal will resurface irresponsibly in the waning hours of some legislative session, for such is the time when powerful legislators are want to slip their mischief past the public interest. Remember the Halloween payraise?

We therefore exhort our own legislators to be on the alert when this year's prorogation party gets underway. They will hear from us in full wrath if any water districts slip by when they aren't looking.

Register for bike race

The Third Annual Nantasket Beach Bike Race will be held on Sunday morning of Labor Day weekend, Sept. 5.

This will be a 25 kilometer (15.5 miles) tour through the towns of Hingham and Hull. The route is both challenging and picturesque, and bikers will ride on excellent pavement, over hills and along the shore. In this jogging era a bicycle race provides one with a new experience.

Entry forms may be obtained at the Cohasset Cycle Sports, 113 Ripley Road. The entry fee is $5 and limited to the first 750 entrees. The race begins promptly at 9 a.m. on September 5. The parking lot behind the giant roller coaster at Paragon Park has been designated as the start-finish line.

Trophies will be awarded to the first three finishers and all finishers will be eligible for additional prizes and gifts. This year's race will also include a 35 and over Veterans Class. Beautifully designed all-cotton T-shirts, with an exciting new bike logo will be available for $5 each.

A pre-race safety inspection, conducted by race sponsor Cohasset Cycle Sports, will be required. Helmets are also strongly recommended for safety.

Your collectibles of the future

By Claire McDonough

Collectibles are a hot item these days. Depression glass for example, Madison Avenue's answer to the economic plight of people who couldn't afford to go to the movies and buy dishes, is selling at a price that makes you wish your ancestors had had the foresight to be poorer. So are old Howdy Doody glasses, chamber pots, coke bottles and some long-dead Viking's discarded sweat socks.

Newspaper and magazine articles advise the canny yard sales and junk shop enthusiasts of treasures that may lurk among the trash. Collectors will pay big bucks for objects that the intuitive socked away while their neighbors were tossing them out and buying new stuff. And some of the biggest profits are realized on old magazines and newspapers printed on days that were later found to be historic.

What I'd like to know is how did they know? What made some investment conscious Germans save their newspapers the day Herr and Frau Schickelgruber had a baby boy they named Adolph? Did they know that the infant would grow up and change his name to Hitler and their descendents could live comfortable lives from the sale of the newspaper?

And how about little Adolph's nemesis to be, Franklin? The Roosevelts were more socially prominent than the Schickelgrubers, but could Americans of the day realize that he would be the father of the New Deal and fireside chats?

Some of the most valuable periodicals contain the early contributions of writers who later became famous. Collectors will kill for a garden club story by Jimmy Breslin or a wedding covered by Ernest Hemmingway. It makes sense now, but at that time, how did people know?

Even more intriguing is the thought that when I recycle this week's Globe, there may, among the want ads, be an item that, properly preserved, could send all my grandchildren to college. But how do I know what to save and what to chuck? Must I choose between a life buried under mountains of newspapers and one spent lamenting the fact that I have not saved a literary genius' initial effort?

More alarming still, what if no one is saving my initial efforts? Well, we can't take that chance, can we? I am, therefore, providing a list of Mariner issues that I feel can only increase in value over the passing years, not only because they contain articles written by me, but because the subjects dealt with are so profound.

January 15, 1981, p. l: Stirring saga of people fighting over Skipper McDonough's video game.

May 27, 1982, p. 7: Jim and Kate Logar did not have a baby this week.

April 1, 1982: Poignant account of the laryngitis that kept Ann Murphy in bed over St. Patrick's Day.

December 17, 1981, p. 6: Documentary dealing with the Great Peanut Butter Famine. Human interest and pathos provided by Kevin.

May 27, 1982, p. 8: Claire McDonough admits problem recognizing faces. Calls husband Dragon.

That's just a preliminary list, you understand. You have to do some research on your own, but it could be the basis for a neat little portfolio.

You don't think so? Well, look, could I interest you in some old sweat socks.

NEWS ITEM — Cohasset: Continued seagull droppings prompt contamination test of Lily Pond, the town's water supply. Town agencies dealing with problem's solution deluged with solutions. Fire blank cartridges every 15 minutes (too expensive). Hire dogs (new droppings problem).

"...All very nice...but do you think we can get them to use it...?"

More comments on the Ainslie police issue

From Joseph McLean

To Henry Ainslie:

Even though I am not an Attorney, I feel that I must reply to the June 9 opinion from Town Counsel, J. Blake Thaxter, Jr. on the issue of Lawrence Ainslie.

Mr. Thaxter addresses two questions:

1. Must the Chief comply with the recent vote taken by the Selectmen instructing the Chief to utilize the services of Lawrence Ainslie.

2. Does the Board of Selectmen have control over the Chief of Police to instruct him on the utilization of Private Detail assignments.

Mr. Thaxter answers the 2nd question on Page 2, Paragraph 8 of his letter by saying "The Board of Selectmen do not have control or jurisdiction over Private Detail assignments."

He then goes on in the very next paragraph in an attempt to justify the action by the Board of Selectmen and he gives two reasons:

1. He says that Chief DeBassio specifically requested the Board to instruct him as to whether or not to use the services of Officer Ainslie. By doing so, he relinquished any exclusive rights he may have had to act under delegation of authority from the Board.

2. He cites Massachusetts General Law, Chapter 31, Section 34, that clearly sets forth the obligations to provide Civil Service employees equal opportunities for work.

Let's address Number 1 first. Mr. Thaxter makes reference to the Town By-Laws, Article 4, Section 3, C (i) which sets forth the powers to be delegated to the Police Chief, one of which is the responsibility for assigning all Police Officers their respective duties. He then goes on to say the Chief specifically requested the Board to instruct him as to whether or not to use the services of Officer Ainslie and by doing so, he relinquished any exclusive rights he may have had to act under delegation of authority from the Board. First of all, this exclusive right did not come from the Board, it came from the Town By-Laws and the Board of Selectmen have no authority to supercede this exclusive right. Only a majority of the Town voters can do this. Furthermore, Chief DeBassio did not initially request the Board to instruct him as to whether or not to use the services of Officer Ainslie. He used his exclusive right to deny Lawrence Ainslie to Private Details. It was only after the Board took issue with the Chief that the Chief asked for a specific ruling. I do not feel that this specific request, at that time, negates the authority given to him under the Town By-Laws.

As to the second reason: Mr. Thaxter states that Massachusetts General Law, Chapter 31, Section 34 clearly sets forth the obligation to provide Civil Service employees equal opportunities for work. He goes on to say that one of the paragraphs states "each appointing authority employing persons as permanent employees in less than full-time Civil Service positions shall, insofar as possible, provide such person equal opportunity to work. Therefore, he feels that the Chief must comply with the recent vote instructing him to utilize the services of Officer Ainslie.

First, I agree with Chapter 31 Section 34, which states that the appointing authority shall provide such persons equal opportunity for work. But, Mr. Thaxter leads you to believe that this appointing authority is the Chief. Actually, if you would read and digest this section it makes reference to the appointing authority and the administrator, who in this case would be the Chief. Therefore, the appointing authority is not the Chief, but the Board of Selectmen, and Chapter 34, Section 31 would not apply to the Chief of Police.

Therefore, it is my opinion that Chief DeBassio acted completely within his authority and that this matter should be left totally within his discretion.

Joseph R. McLean

P.S. I did not appreciate the Board of Selectmen "tabling" this issue at 9:55 p.m., especially when many Town voters were present, to get onto other important matters. It seems to me this issue is most important, as evidenced by the voter turnout, and should not have been brushed aside.

Copies of the following letters were sent to Selectmen and Executive Secretary Arthur Clark. Ed.

From Robert Gibbons

To Selectmen:

I find it hard to understand your apparent intent to frustrate Chief DeBassio's restoration of the Police Department to competence and professionalism. It's not too long ago that this department was a laughing stock under its former administration.

You hired a pro, let him do his job without political interference.

Robert E. Gibbons

From A.J. Antoine, Jr.

To Selectmen:

As a former police officer and constable for the Town of Cohasset, I would like to give my support to Chief DeBassio in regard to Lawrence Ainslie.

In my opinion, when you defy a civil process and show no regard for that law, how can you enforce criminal law?

A.J.Antoine, Jr.

From the Glasfelds

Dear Henry Ainslie:

We have been dismayed by newspaper reports that Chief DeBassio might resign. Though we have not met him, we wholeheartedly support his endeavors to strengthen our police force, badly shaken by events of the past years.

We neither understand nor take sides on the controversy surrounding the Chief's right not to employ your nephew, but we urge that regardless of the merits of this issue the Chief be given the authority he seeks to continue his efforts.

Our single greatest concern related to local police activity is the protection of our children from drunken drivers. Chief DeBassio has had the courasge to take steps needed to reduce that problem, and we very much hope that he is given the opportunity to continue their implementation.

We would be grateful for any accommodation the Board could reach to retain the services and enhance the authority of Chief DeBassio.

Rolf Glasfeld
Elizabeth Glasfeld

From Frederic Wood, Jr.

Gentlemen:

I have been following the unfortunate series of incidents concerning our Chief of Police, John A. DeBassio, in the newspapers.

I have been a resident and businessman in the Town of Cohasset for many, many years and I am appalled to think that we would even consider putting the Chief in such an uncompromising position in regard to hiring practices.

Chief DeBassio has brought a level of professionalism to our Police Department which we can all be very proud of. I urge the Selectmen to give him full range in making decisions concerning his department and not put him in a position where he feels that he must resign.

I believe that his judgment concerning Lawrence D. Ainslie, Jr. or any other individual is all that is necessary in reaching a decision. I wish to have it understood by all that I have no personal knowledge of or animosity toward Lawrence. However, it is my belief that we can find additional part-time police help before we could ever hope to replace the Chief of Police with his outstanding background and qualifications.

Frederic H. Wood, Jr.

From Mary Hagerty

To Arthur Clark:

I am writing to you since I hope you can convince the selectmen that we should stand behind our Chief of Police on the issue involving Lawrence Ainslie.

I am certain that Chief DeBassio has made a careful and fair appraisal of this young man's background and abilities, and if he has decided that he does not qualify, we should all support the Chief.

Mary Hagerty

Cohasset's best, Dom Campedelli, bound for B.C. hockey

By Donna Cogliano

Boston College bound Dom Campedelli of Cohasset was recently picked in the seventh round of the National Hockey League draft. He was chosen by the Toronto Maple Leafs as the 129th pick in the NHL draft.

During the next four years, Toronto will have control of Campedelli, and if they make him an offer, Campedelli could turn professional. If after four years, Toronto doesn't make Campedelli an offer he would become a free agent and could be approached by any NHL team.

But for now, Campedelli is headed for Boston College on a full four-year scholarship. He will focus on competing in one of the strongest college hockey regions in the nation — ECAC Division I hockey. He plans to study in the liberal arts program.

The 18 year-old defenseman said he would like to play professional hockey some day, "If I'm good enough. I'd like to play for the Maple Leafs." Campedelli considers his passing skills the best part of his game while he hopes to improve his skating.

Campedelli graduated from Cohasset High School this year. He was a four-time member of the South Shore all-star team during his high school career and was named the Skippers' best defenseman for two years. He was also named the most valuable player on this year's Cohasset squad which won the SSL championship and advanced to the state tourney.

Being picked in the NHL draft has brought instant stardom and fame to this local teenager. Through it all, Campedelli has remained quiet and humble. When asked what number he was picked in the draft, he wasn't sure. He only knew that Toronto picked him in the seventh round. He's not the type of young fellow who boasts about his accomplishments. He's one who acknowledges his accomplishments with a nod of the head when questioned.

CHS Athletic Director Clark Chatterton called Campedelli "one of the finest hockey athletes that I've seen in this area, without a doubt."

Campedelli started playing hockey at the age of eight in the Hull Youth Hockey Association. He later joined the Scituate Youth Hockey program.

Competing in the state tournament this year was the highlight of Campedelli's hockey years at CHS. Campedelli says that most of all, he'll miss the bus rides and fooling around with teammates while traveling to high school games.

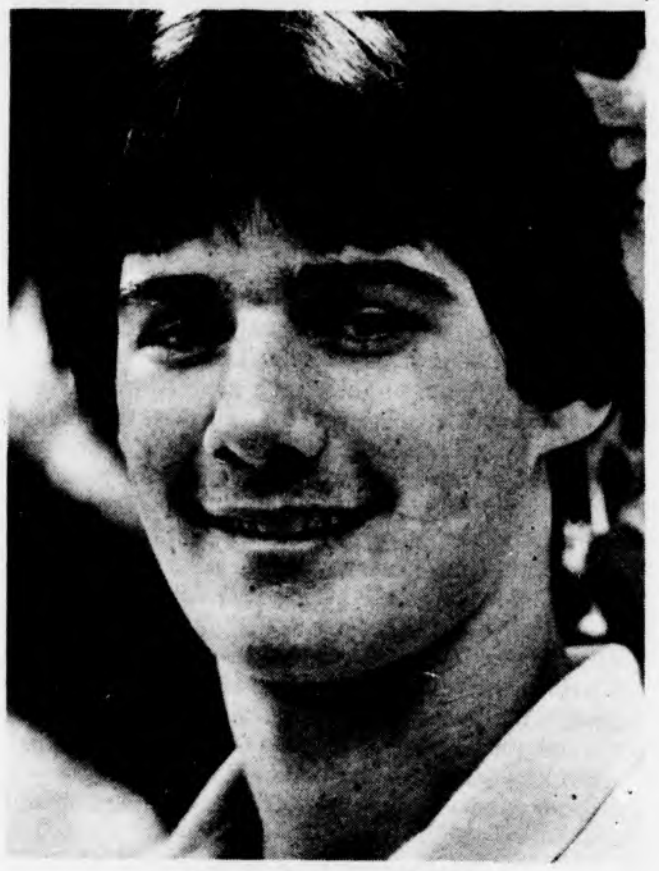
This week he is enroute to Colorado Springs to try out for the Junior Olympic Team. He was one of 35 young hockey players in the nation invited to attend the tryouts. Last year, he tried out for the team but didn't make it.

The soft-spoken 1982 CHS graduate seems shy — not the same young man who skates up a storm on the rink. And anyone who attended a Skipper ice hockey game this year can attest to the fact that Campedelli can drill a puck on net. His fierce slapshot is one of the parts of the game that puts him in a class above his high school teammates and opponents.

He has a pro hockey future

Campedelli is currently playing hockey for a league in Danvers and for the Hingham Pro-Am League. His games are scheduled for Monday and Wednesday evenings.

While Campedelli feels most comfortable on defense, he feels most uncomfortable when breaking in new equipment or when playing in a uniform that his mother has just washed.



Dom recognizes his mother Noreen as one of his best fans but he'd rather wear his comfortable, grubby uniform than a stiff, newly washed one. Noreen Campedelli hardly ever misses one of Dom's hockey games. Last year she traveled to Colorado Springs with her son.

Campedelli said he idolizes Rick Middleton of the Boston Bruins. And before Middleton, he was a faithful watcher of Bruins' great, Bobby Orr.

Besides playing hockey, Campedelli plans to keep in shape this summer with some swimming and bicycle riding. The 6'1, 190-pound Campedelli has a bike route which he travels to Hull and back. Besides hockey, Campedelli enjoys fixing cars.

While most college students are working one or two jobs this summer to pay tuition costs, Campedelli's work will begin during hockey season. In a sense, hockey is Campedelli's job which will support him through four years of education at Boston College.

He plans to do some work this summer for his father's business of industrial cleaning. He also has to help his family repair their sinking swimming pool before going for a dip.

CHS track coach Charles Davis calls it a career

By Donna Cogliano

After 21 years of coaching and six South Shore League Championship Titles, Cohasset High School Track Coach Charles Davis is taking a breather.

His chief reason for retiring from coaching duties is to enable him to spend more time with his family. He also plans to further his education. Davis, his wife Marie and three children live on Idylwilde Circle, Marshfield.

Davis will continue to teach and serve as Math Department Chairman at the Cohasset High. He stated his reason for retiring from coaching as, "To give me time to see my own children participate in athletic events and to broaden my knowledge in the area of computers."

As Head Spring Track Coach, Davis and his Skipper Track squads won league titles in 1963-65, 1968, 1970 and 1977. Between 1963-66, Cohasset built up a streak of 35 wins.

Davis established a winning tradition in track for CHS. After 21 spring seasons his career record stands at 108-70-1. He started the first cross country team at CHS and coached it for eight years.

As track coach Davis provides the participants with a training program. "I expect them to follow through and grow as an individual...which I think is the biggest asset of track...despite how well a team does, he can have his own personal growth by performing better," said Davis," In track, Davis says an athlete's best competition is himself.

Many would agree that track is one of the toughest sports to coach. "Of all the sports to coach, I think it is the most difficult because of the fact that there are 17 different events. A coach is an active participant in each track meet as opposed to a baseball coach, where they more or less sit on the bench and supervise or make strategy changes."

"Track is an individual sport...and you get the non-conformist out for track...you get the independent boy or girl — that's a free thinker," Davis said. Davis was an outstanding track participant at Abington High School. He is a graduate of Boston University.

Back in the 1960's Cohasset had one of the best track facilities in the league. Today Cohasset has one of the worst track facilities, said Davis. Many high schools in the South Shore League have the all-weather tracks. Because of the drainage problem, Davis said, the Skipper track squad had to conduct their pre-season training on the roads, "which is a significant disadvantage."

Other teams like Middleboro, Duxbury and Norwell were able to train on their all-weather tracks during the early Spring. To update the Cohasset track program, Davis suggested two possibilities — that a field house be built at Milliken Field to store track equipment or to construct a completely new athletic field complex.

Cohasset High School Athletic Director Clark Chatterton said, "I've really appreciated Charlie and it was great working with him. He always had great rapport with the kids and always had large turnouts. The kids respected him."

Even though track equipment had to be lugged out to the field each day and it was a bit of an uphill climb to Milliken Field, Davis dealt with the inconvenience for 21 years. "He's always been flexible," said Chatterton, while some people might not have adapted to the situation.

Though this year's track team finished with an 3-6 record, Davis was quick to point out that Cohasset still holds three league records. The Skippers have recorded best finishes in the 440, high jump and triple jump.

Davis is looking forward to the extra time he will have with his wife Marie and children. He will plan to attend the track meets of his daughter Kim, 16, and son Brian, 14. His son Glen, age 11, plays football and baseball.

Though Davis is officially retiring as track coach, he has offered to help out at the beginning of track season next year at Cohasset High School. Besides dropping a few helpful hints to Cohasset students, Davis is bound to offer some advice to his own children also.

Little League is in its final week

Little League is in its final week of the season with three teams, the Giants, Dodgers and Yankees vying for the first place position for the second half of the season.

The winner plays the first half champs, the Cubs, for the overall Cohasset Little League championships for the 1982 season. A best two out of three games series will determine the winner. These games should be played within the next two weeks.

Following the playoffs the National Little League Tournament begins with all star team participating. Cohasset will play the winner of the Norwell, Middleboro competition.

Cohaset has approximately 280 boys and girls between the ages of 7 and 15 in the baseball program. The Cohasset Youth Athletic Association is a non profit organization which relies on parents and friends such as South Shore Music Circus, Cohasset Police Association, The GeorgeMealy Post and many others, for its support and smooth operation.

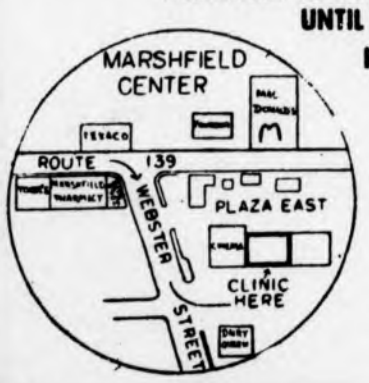
The league also consists of a Farm League for boys and girls 7 to 8; a Minor League for boys and girls 9 to 12; and a Little League for kids 10 to 12.

CHS baseball team looks for better times

The Cohasset High School varsity baseball team completed the season with a 5-12 record.

Cohasset coach Tom Burnell said, "I was disappointed in the record but I think we have a good group of kids coming back next year...so we should improve substantially."

Leading hitters for the Skippers this year were senior Joe Becker, Rich Evans, Jack Maloney and Bob Meers.



The varsity squad will lose eight players to graduation. Seniors on this year's team were: Tom Stanford, catcher; Bob Donahue, outfield; Kevin Dooley, a pitcher and second baseman; Torin Sweeney, center field; Andy Songer, a pitcher and second baseman; Dana Infusino, a pitcher and outfielder; Paul Buckley, first base and Becker.

A highlight of the spring 1982 season for Cohasset was the 5-4 win over Duxbury. Meers, Infusino and Meers contributed offensively to that win.

A Greek Taverna to celebrate the 4th

BY J. A. MARSHALL

July Fourth is fast approaching, and all of us are planning ways to celebrate this special Independence Day.

Be sure to include on the calendar of festivities attending the Taverna sponsored by the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church (Pope Memorial), 817 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

Delicious Greek foods abound — dolmades, loukoumades, kataifi, baklava, ravani, other pastries, and of course, lamb, and much, much more.

To help work off some calories of these marvelous dishes, there will be lessons given in Greek dancing throughout both days to music provided by Zorba Ensemble.

To add to the festivities this year, there will be special red, white, and blue balloons let go around the South Shore area, each carrying its own ticket which will entitle the individual who finds it to one free dinner at the Taverna.

Watch for low flying balloons this Third and Fourth of July, and win a mouthwatering treat. Also new and special this year are Taverna T-Shirts for all ages to be sold at our Taverna Boutique.

It will definitely be a delightful way to celebrate Independence Day in Cohasset. So come join your friends on Saturday, July 3, from 11 to 7 and Sunday, July 4, from noon to 7.

Chairmen for this summertime event are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pierce of Cohasset and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sofis of Hingham. They are aided by members of our community from Hull, Weymouth, Duxbury, Hingham, Scituate, and Cohasset.

Come one, come all -- "Eat, Drink, Be Merry — Greek Taverna!"

Neil Chayet to speak to Cohasset GOP

Neil Chayet will be the guest speaker at the June meeting of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee.

Chayet widely known through his daily nationally syndicated radio program on CBS entitled "Looking at the Law" and his publications. His topic will be "Something's Wrong With the System," and it will provide a wide-ranging thought-provoking address. He will comment on casinos in Hull where he has a summer home.

The Committee welcomes the public to attend this meeting at 8 Tuesday, June 29 at the Legion Hall in Cohasset Harbor.

Purse . . . ecuted

By Lois Martin

Boy, I'd love to know what they keep in those things.

It's the kind of question one shouldn't ask, but, I'd love to say, "'scuse me, Sir, what do you carry in your purse?"

I don't know too many men who have purses. My friends and I laugh about the word 'purse.' Some people say pocketbook.

What do men call them, handbag? grip? satchel?

No, it's got to be a purse. But what the devil's in it? A couple weeks ago I met this man who was, by any standards, gorgeous and he had a purse. I'm not saying, no matter how you tease, who he was. What a dreadful thing it would be should this forum become used as a spot where men and purses were named as affiliates.

PATCHES

Anyway, from what I've seen, most men who carry them like the clutch type of fat, dark leather. They don't have little bows or buckles or elastic things so much.

Some have the over the shoulder kind. Perhaps that's a cross between the briefcase and the purse.

But the new affinity some men have for purses has cast aspersions on the standard briefcase. What have they been lugging in there all these years?

I make it a point not to stare at a man's purse. None of my business. Women don't mind if you look at their purse a lot. We usually have one we lug around for months, loaded down with everything. If I stop typing right this minute and pick up my purse to check its contents, this is some of what I'll find, working from the top down: notebook, copies of insurance forms, catch all container meant for cosmetics, holding instead stamps, one packet of Sweet 'N Low, son's money for deposit, bank book and a ribbon, lipsticks on loose in bottom of purse, one with the cover off, two things of film, one granola cluster, keys that fell off a key chain, approximately 12 pens, including the only one I use, sunglasses and lable from them, a big fat fun ring, gum, loose change that fell out of my wallet.

Well, you get the idea. What I want to know is does a man have that much in his purse too.

I spoke with a woman who has a traditional conservative husband. She told me how he distributes his belongings on his person.

His wallet or his billfold, I'm not sure which you say, is in the back right pocket of his britches. He has a handkerchief to his back right (an option to be sure), up right front is his money clip with actual folding bills, she said, lots of loose change and his car keys. She said in the left front pocket he kept his nail clip. And there's a chance he closets his business cards there if he isn't wearing a jacket.

One can readily see this fellow could use a good purse.

If a jacket is on the man there's a whole new ballgame. Then he's got that inside left pocket in which to stash his charge cards in the long skinny variety billfold if he has one of those, pens, perhaps.

One thing is when you get down to it, men carry a lot more stuff than women. It's all been in those pockets. And it wasn't until a few started to get hurt on their possessions that the brave ones bought a purse and filled 'er up.

Another thing about a man. The difference in what he's carrying depends on where he's going. A woman, she carries everything everywhere all the time, just in case. A man switches pants, therefore, pockets, never mind the jacket and is vulnerable to being without what he needs. On a Saturday, for example, if I asked the person on the other end of the kitchen table to empty his pocket, I'd expect the contents to include a nail, a bolt and certain odds and ends of things I'd not be able to identify.

The same person might have a token to the T on a Wednesday, or even a ticket stub mixed in with change.

Perhaps they'll go back to the time when they had those little coin purses. My grandfather did. It was fat, dark leather, the primitive purse, I guess. One woman said her father used to keep his teeth in his coin purse years ago...an improvement over the pocket anyway.

But what we're learning here is that men need those purses. And I now suspect men without them are far taller than we realize. You take a fellow about 5'11", start filling those pockets with his belongings, add a beeper and one of those measuring things on his belt, put on that big belt buckle, and you've got yourself someone who's 5'4".

It's no surprise to me some men have rebelled and bought purses.

Still they're not common. There's a bit of prejudice against them and there's the knack of using one. Hard to clutch a little purse and direct traffic, for instance, let alone fight a fire or drive a bulldozer. And there are only so many times you can grasp it under your arm or between your knees.

So there's the hardship. Let's hope that Father's Day our crowd didn't get too many purses. I'm sure they'd prefer bigger glove compartments, or pockets anyway.

Angler's corner...

The salt scene is still relatively quiet with local waters producing cod, flounder and small pollock of the pesky variety.

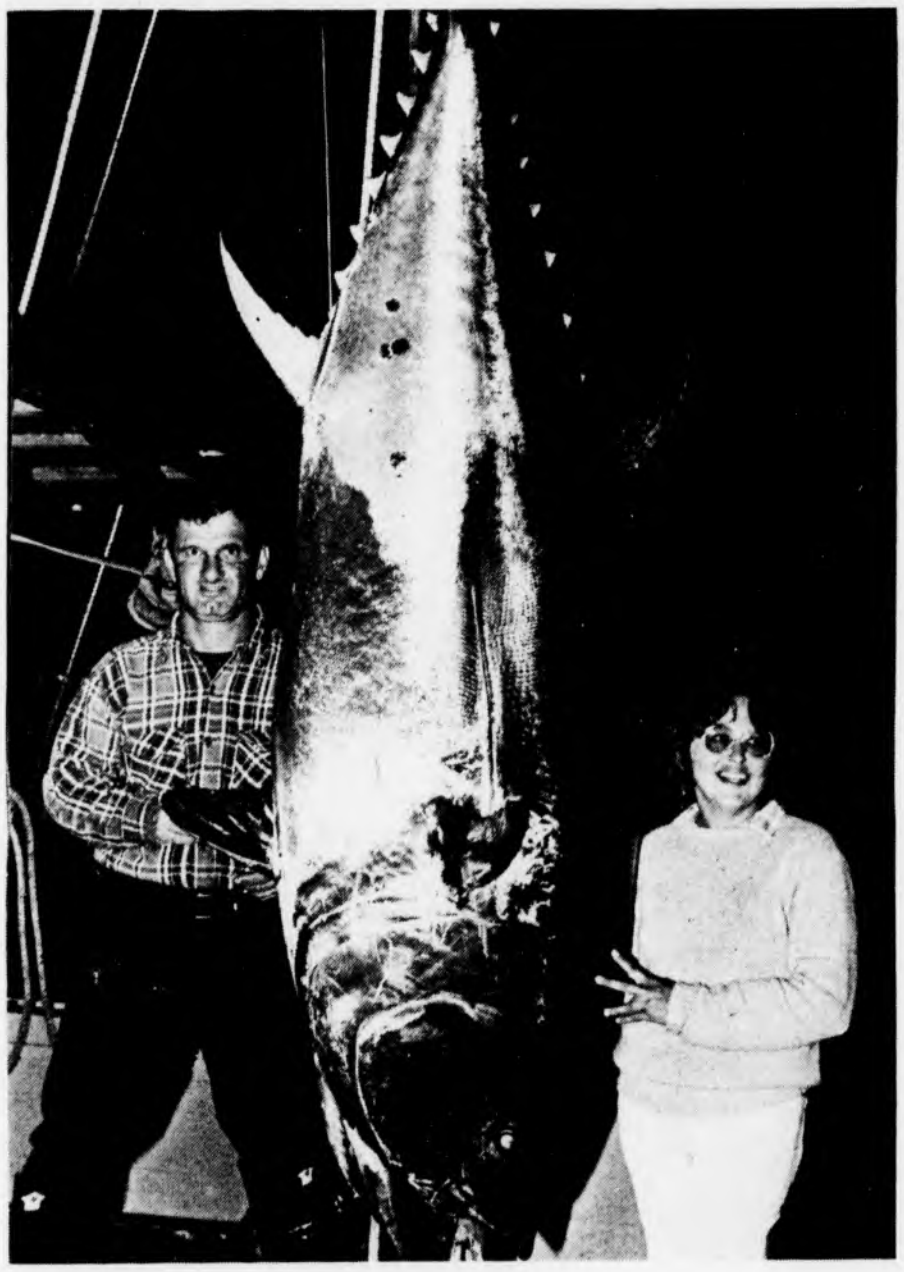
Flounder fishing has been top notch in the Quincy Bay - Hingham Harbor area, the flounder capital of the U.S. Also check Cohasset and Scituate Harbors (from the jetties in Scituate), the North River and Duxbury Bay. Try fishing with worms on the incoming tide. Cod prefer clams but are not fussy eaters and will accept the seaworm.

Stripers are still spotty in local environs. You'll do better on the Cape and around the islands, but should you fish for them locally, try a little livelining with pogies, eels, or herring. Bucktails will also work, we think, from the mouth of the North River.

We thought it still early for bluefish locally, but one of our roving reporters swears he saw a school of blues chasing pogies off Cohasset last week. That means they are here too.

Another striper spot worth a try is the Cape Cod Canal. One modest angler pulled in a 45 pound bass from the Canal last week using live herring; he lost several others as well. If you should fish the Canal, be careful not to get caught on the rocky bottom.

For trout fishermen who missed the early season blitz, take heart and take yourself down to Long Pond in Plymouth. Fish and Wildlife personnel recently restocked the pond with an extra load of trout. We have reports of limit catches from the launching ramp in the early morning. Use bait. Fly rodders are doing well in the evening.



Smallmouth bass are worth a trip to the Cape — home of the best freshwater fishing in eastern Massachusetts — where catches are running up to three and four pounds. One pounders are fun to catch on light tackle and are even more available.

Jacob's Pond in Norwell last week produced a six-pound largemouth along with several others in the two to three-pound class. Aside from small panfish, largemouth bass are the most prolific freshwater fish on the South Shore and can be taken from most any pond. Rubber worms will work well.

The rains have delayed the spawning of sunfish, but be patient, they'll be available soon and are worth the chase on light tackle. Jacob's Pond in Norwell and the Reservoir in Scituate are good bluegill producers.

If you have no fishing license, be sure to get one before trying freshwater anywhere.

Most pollock taken in local waters don't stir the imagination, but this one did. Appropriately called a horse pollock, it weighed more than 30 lbs. and was caught by Dennis Kowal off Provincetown. He was chasing striped bass.

Big Bluefin — This bluefin tuna taken by Don Hebert and his mate Jenny Forsythe last week is the first of the season that we know of. We think it weighed 70 pounds and we know it was harpooned from the "White Lady" out of Green Harbor. Hebert has been catching monsters like this for years.

Graduation at Dutton Nursery School

On June 11, 1982 at St. Luke's Church the four and five year-olds of Dutton Nursery School received their diplomas. As part of the graduation ceremony the children performed poems, songs and a puppet show for parents, relatives and friends. Kristina Arnold, Kerry Flynn, Patrick Reynolds, John Critchley, Laura McGlynn, Holly Fassnacht, Matthew Tarmey, Justin Hoffman, and Carolyn Spensley are the graduates from Dutton moving on to kindergarten. After receiving their caps and diplomas the graduates marched out to "Pomp and Circumstance."

Registrations are now being accepted for the fall session of Dutton Nursery School located at St. Luke's Church, corner of Route 3A and First Parish Road. The school accepts children from Scituate, Norwell and Cohasset. More information is available at 545-9482 weekday mornings or 545-1163 and 545-2770 afternoons.

Coast Guard report for the week

SATURDAY, JUNE 5

7:22 p.m., Scituate Harbormaster reported a 22 foot power boat anchored by New Inlet with engine failure. The Coast Guard 41455 towed the vessel to Simm's Yacht Yard, Scituate.

SUNDAY, JUNE 6

1:00 p.m., Received telephone call from Coast Guard Group Boston that two people were swept off Gun Rocks. Coast Guard Station Point Allerton's 41 foot utility boat was searching the area but would be called back shortly due to seas increasing to more than 6 feet. The Coast Guard Motor Lifeboat 44318 was dispatched to the area to conduct a search parallel to the beach. The Quincy Dive Team arrived and requested that the 44318 temporarily abort the search and to standby to assist the divers if needed. After the divers completed, the 44318 resumed the search until nightfall. Throughout the search the 44318 was unable to approach the beach closer than 30 yards due to the surf and seas that built at times to 12 feet.

MONDAY, JUNE 7

12:20 a.m., Received a call from the Scituate Harbormaster reporting a 26 foot cabin cruiser that had broken its mooring and was stuck under the bridge at Edward Foster Road, requesting assistance. Mobile 2 was dispatched to the scene and the vessel was freed. The Scituate Harbormaster towed the boat to Young's Marina, Scituate.

THURSDAY, JUNE 10

10:29 a.m., Received a call from the Green Harbormaster reporting a 16 foot outboard, with 2 people onboard, off Green Harbor tied to bouy 2, disabled with engine failure. The vessel, owned by Jose Rodrigues, of Stoughton, was towed to Green Harbor by the Coast Guard 41 foot utility boat where the harbormaster relieved the tow.

6:23 p.m., Received a call from Ken Vinal stating the 37 foot sport fisher, Afternoon Delight, was disabled with fuel system failure tied off to the New Inlet Bell Bouy. The vessel, owned by Mr. Harry McKee Jr., of Hingham, was towed to the North River by the CG-41455.

FRIDAY, JUNE 11

1:55 p.m., Received call from Coast Guard Group Boston informing us of a possible boat fire off Plymouth. The CG helicopter 1487 and CG utility boat 41455 were dispatched to the scene. The Plymouth harbormaster stated a Navy helicopter was conducting training and dropping smoke flares.

6:32 p.m., Received call via channel 16 VHF from the vessel Seahawk stating his bilges were full of water, and his batteries were dead requesting Coast Guard assistance. The utility boat 41455 was diverted from training to bouy 8 in Scituate Harbor. The vessel, owned by Mr. Gunnar Anderson, was dewatered by the CG 41 footer.

SATURDAY, JUNE 12

6:34 a.m., Received call from the fishing vessel Tempest reporting a 20 foot white and blue vessel disabled 1/4 mile east of Gurnet Point with 4 people onboard. The vessel, owned by Mr. Mario Rosa, of Providence, RI, was towed to Plymouth Harbor.

10:40 a.m., The Coast Guard 41455 monitored a call from the vessel Capt. John stating a passenger was suffering from a possible epileptic seizure and proceded to their position. The Capt. John reports there is a nurse onboard treating the patient. The Plymouth Harbormaster was enroute to the Capt. John with a doctor. The patient and doctor were transferred to the 41 footer and taken to the town pier in Plymouth where an ambulance was waiting.

10:40 a.m., Received call of a vessel 16-18 feet in length disabled between bouys 2 and 4 in Plymouth. The Coast Guard Auxiliary Vessel Patty Ann was dispatched to tow the vessel to Plymouth Harbor. The disabled vessel was towed by a civilian vessel on its way into Plymouth Harbor and the Auxiliary vessel Patty Ann was recalled.

11:46 a.m., Received a call from a Scituate resident stating an 18 foot boat was capsized 1 mile north of the Scituate gong bouy with 1 person in the water. The Coast Guard 44 foot Motor Lifeboat was dispatched to the scene. The person in the water was picked up by a passing fisherman. The CG 44 footer was unable to right the capsized boat due to the sea condition and the owner arranged for commercial salvage.

7:35 p.m., Received call from the vessel Mariner One, a 25 foot cabin cruiser that was disabled with loss of steering and engine failure off the Gurnett. The vessel, owned by Mr. Lowell Martin of Boston, was towed into Plymouth Harbor.

SUNDAY, JUNE 13

3:07 p.m., Received a call from the Plymouth Harbormaster reporting a 17 foot outboard disabled in the Duxbury Harbor channel. The vessel was towed to Plymouth Harbor by the 41 foot utility boat.

8:15 p.m., Received a call from a 30 foot white sloop stating they were disabled 1/2 mile due east of Minot Light with steering casualty. The CG 44 foot Motor Lifeboat proceded to assist.

9:10 p.m., The CG 44318 was diverted from previous mission to respond to a call of a possible diabetic aboard the sailing vessel Harmony 1/8 mile south of the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club. Upon arrival at the scene the CG 44318's Emergency medical technician found the patient to be conscious and in good condition. The patient was transferred to the 44318 and taken to the yacht club where an ambulance was standing by.

9:20 p.m., Contacted Coast Guard Station Point Allerton to request that they proceed to tow the 30 foot sloop in the vicinity of Minot Light while the 44318 responded to the sailing vessel Harmony.

Looking back: heroics from the Coast Guard

By David Wadsworth, Curator
Cohasset Historical Society

Some thirty years ago, on the stormy winter's night of February 18, 1952, a maritime disaster unique in the annals of New England's seafaring history occured in the wind and wave-tossed waters near Cape Cod.

On that night, at almost the same time, two large and modern ocean going vessels broke apart only a short distance from each other. They were the oil tankers "Pendleton" and "Fort Mercer." Each vessel split in two, with surviving crew members clinging desperately to the sundered bow and stern sections drifting at the mercy of the sea.

Of identical design, the two tankers were veterans of the great World War II fleet of vessels constructed to keep global supply lines open during that conflict. Both were of the design known as T-2 oil tankers, and both suffered the same fate on that stormy night in 1952. The breaking up of "Pendleton" and "Fort Mercer" triggered a massive rescue mission by the U.S. Coast Guard, and to reach the "Pendleton," a 36 foot motor lifeboat set out on a perilous voyage from the Chatham Coast Guard Station.

The lifeboat was called simply CG-36500, and it had a crew of four Coast Guardsmen. Its mission was hazardous, and its safe return uncertain. CG-36500 plunged into the same 60' waves which had broken apart "Pendleton" and "Fort Mercer". The lifesavers' goal was to rescue 33 surviving crewmen aboard the stern section of "Pendleton." Battling mountainous waves and high winds, the small but sturdy lifeboat finally reached the remains of the tanker, though CG-36500 suffered severe damage to its own equipment on the way.

Heroic efforts by the lifeboat's crew succeeded in saving 32 of the 33 crewmen still aboard the tanker's stern. One unfortunate sailor from "Pendleton" slipped into the sea and disappeared during rescue efforts. The trip backto land was equally hazardous, for by then the lifeboat's navigation gear had been swept away by the seas.

But return safely to Chatham it did, and this summer CG-36500 will be visiting Cohasset Harbor, not on a lifesaving mission, but now as a fully restored example of its once-numerous class of motor lifeboats, and as a museum boat dedicated to the profession and art of Lifesaving.

Retired from active service by the U.S. Coast Guard many years ago, the old motor lifeboat rested for a decade or more behind the maintenance shed at the Cape Cod National Shore facilities. Spotted recently by members of the Orleans Historical Society, the boat was acquired by them and has been carefully reconditioned. Its first extended voyage under ownership of the Orleans Society will bring CG-36500 to Cohasset on Saturday, July 3 for a day of public viewing at Lawrence Wharf, Cohasset Harbor.

During that day the boat will be open for public visit; both the Orleans Historical Society and the Cohasset Historical Society cordially invite interested South Shore residents and visitors to see this heroic lifesaving boat during the time it will be tied up at Cohasset Harbor. While the boat journeys to Cohasset it will be manned by a crew provided by the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary.

From Cohasset, CG-36500 will travel to Boston to participate in the 1982 Tall Ships event. The motor lifeboat's stop in Cohasset will provide a chance for everyone to view a living reminder of the tradition of maritime lifesaving.

Be sure to see this unique boat whose finest hour occurred as it battled raging seas to rescue the crew of a sinking vessel more than a quarter century ago.

60 Plus Club meeting

Cohasset Sixty Plus Club members enjoyed their final party of the season Thursday, June 17, at Hugo's Lighthouse.

President Marion Fallon and vice president Bernard Fallon were host and hostess to 114 members.

Lovely low flower arrangements and attractive table settings, plus the specialties of Hugo's, made a most enjoyable party for all.

Guests of honor were the Rev. Roache from St. Anthony's Parish and the Rev. Edward Atkinson of the Unitarian First Parish.

Andrew O'Keefe reports that all the reserved tickets for senior citizens of Cohasset to see the Red Sox ballgame on Saturday, July 17, are all sold out.

Osgood School students get high marks for 'Mad Dragon'

By Tanna Kasperowicz

INSIDE A MAD DRAGON

All red and black with a ferocious dragon on the cover ready to eat you up for an hour or two, I.A.M.D. itself was eaten up in a pretty short time, before this reviewer got a chance to tell you to buy it, try it.

(A few copies haven't been devoured and are available at the Osgood School. After the close of school, a limited second edition will be available at Cards "n" Shards in Cohasset Village.)

I.A.M.D. was written and illustrated by the poets and artists of Osgood School, who write and draw a lot better than I ever remember my peers in elementary school writing or drawing. But in those years you weren't even expected to learn your multiplication tables until fifth grade.

Jacob Powell's picture of "The" Mad Dragon appears on the cover of the booklet, it's scarey/funny. Jacob's the individual who embarrassed his nursery school teachers at the Community Center a few years ago by refusing to color their inferior, mineographed illustrations, much preferring to draw and then color in his own, more detailed renderings. He also has a neat poem in the book about his filthy (and we have seen it) room. "You'll just die" when and if you ever see Jacob's room, Jacob says.

I liked everything. Especially the "Hands" selection where mothers, fathers and children both write some very touching lines.

Someone on the artists in residency committee decided at some point to include some "Big People's Poetry" along with the little people's, and it was a good decision. It added some perspective and dimension to a book filled with all of that and more, but like a tennis match, it forced one to watch more closely. We became very aware of names in this section. The poet and poetesses as people, belonging to one another. It was tender.

In particular I loved a piece called "Chris' Hands." It was unsigned and obviously written by a parent: "Sequoias, Growing/ Reaching, Leaving/ Hard secrets/Rings of Life/I Cut Away Nails/Tears and Dirt/Memories/Strong Trunks/Forever."

M.A. Russell, another parent, asked: "Could I drive you to MacDonald's/with my feet?/When you sing for me shall/I clap with my ears?" Precisely.

First grader Peter Collins supposes his mom's hands could "Maybe do magic/Take a rabbit out of a hat./Hands that can almost/do anything."

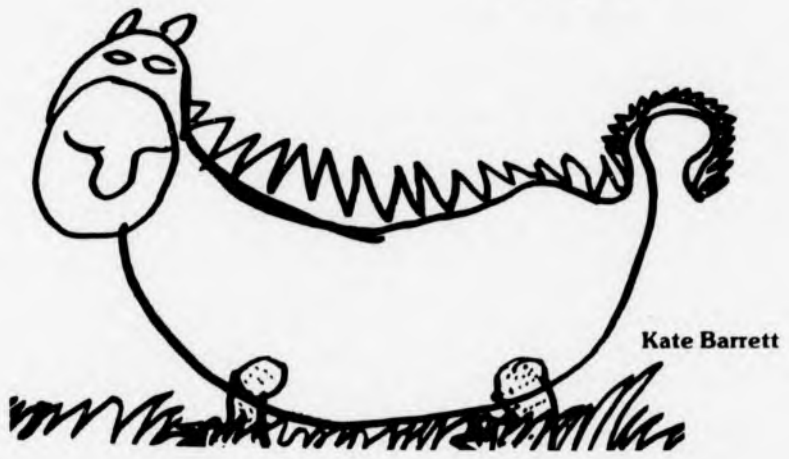
Absolutely one of the funneist poems in the book appears right in the beginning. Entitled "A Little Voice Cried," by Josh Stevenson, grade 3, it goes: "Jon chokes/on/ soap,/Help/Us get it out!/A little voice cried." And because I know a little bit about Josh's family, I can only suppose Jerry might have been the star of this adventure.

Third graders Jennifer Jackson and Melissa Rousseau, wrote of reciprocity, feelings of friendships. Melissa told Jennifer ("Niffy"), Niffy, your freckles are like jimmies, you make me feel like a deer eating leaves off a tree. Your voice sounds like the birds.

Jennifer told Melissa that her name reminded her of daisies, and that her hair was like spaghetti, which is probably a compliment coming from a third grader.

That particular friendship is captured forever Inside a Mad Dragon, where children (K-3 graders) are all still a little mad and wonderful, in that special place before career choices must be made before taxes must be paid, at Osgood School.

More abstractly, and in quite a sophisticated manner, Third Grader Sophie Redfield tells us: "Rice is eated deliciously and friendly in eastern London daily, (while) some of the rotten oranges are eaten by people in America hiding under igloos on earth." She probably pieced that information together from several sources. It was and is a fun poem.



Universal truths are precisely that, universal truths. Why should it be so surprising that Second Grader Anastasia Pierce should have grasped one? "Come see with me/the place I was born,/Where I was crying./My mother looks at me if I was a Stranger./That was where I was born." When it first surprised me, I.A.M.D., I got a big lump in my throat.

More fun, when David Plazeski, third grader, is 85 he will live in the bow of his aircraftcarrier and will be fighting World War Three. How does it feel, David? "I don't feel any different. I still have my freckles and gray hair, I'm very healthy because I have eaten good food."

Jennifer Plante, Third Grade, reports: "Jelly Beans are popular in England, when they're not pink in Nebraska, In France they're eaten like soup, and rolls." Ben Dean put Jennifer's jelly beans into a nice jelly bean jar, after all, jelly beans are a crazy kind of candy, enjoyed by presidents, vagrants, and Mad Dragons.

This reviewer was Inside A Mad Dragon and never wanted to get out.

Most of us always have projects waiting in the wings — a handknit sweater begging for the second sleeve to be finished before junior grows out of it, bookshelves that need winnowing out for an upcoming book sale and, if the weather ever warms up, an hour or two to put the finishing touches on our fading suntan. Tackling the book shelf can end up with a less than rewarding pile of donations when you hate to part with books you might want to reread, children's books you know the grandchildren will enjoy, borrowed ones you're embarrassed to return by now and cookbooks with tempting recipes you just might want to try when you find the time. For instance, the first cookbook I ever had was "Better Homes and Gardens" and it's bespattered and worn, but I can't let another summer pass without making

BLACKBERRY BRANDY

1 qt. fresh blackberries
3/4 c. sugar
3/4 tsp. whole allspice
12 whole cloves
2 c. brandy

In gallon jar, combine blackberries, sugar and spices. Pour in brandy and cover. Invert jar daily till sugar is dissolved, about four days. Place in cool, dark place for at least two months. Strain through cheesecloth before serving. Serve in cordial glasses. Makes about 3½ cups.

Peering through rain-spattered windows at our petunias rotting in the garden, we turn to yet another indoor project. Like the rain, there's seemingly no end of things to be done, as we eye the overflowing magazine bucket. It's more than I can bear to throw out "Yankee," "Gourmet" or a stack of "Old Farmer's Almanac," one of which had a column called "Wife-Savers." Some no-nonsnese household tips advised not buying colored paper products because dyes are pollutants...letting your child suck an ice cube before giving him unpleasant tasting medicine, for the cold dulls the taste buds...washing your garden produce very carefully, because the residues of pesticides are dangerous and even "organically grown" foods are likely to harbor dangerous parasites not found in chemical fertilizers...also, if you can't find your ruler, remember a dollar bill is about six inches long, then estimate accordingly... when you need a disposable cake pan for a picnic or bazaar, line a quart pan with heavy aluminum foil and fold the ends over the sides. Pour in the batter and bake as usual. When cool, lift out by the foil and set on a sturdy piece of cardboard. No clean up mess and no lost pans...the most economical turkey to buy is the largest one your family can use, for the bigger the bird the more meat in proportion to bone. And here is a "Yankee" treasure called

Northeastern's John Zotos honored twice

Prof. John Zotos of Cohasset has been awarded two honors by his professional engineering colleagues and his undergraduate engineering students while completing his 22nd year of full time teaching, research and consulting within Northeastern University Mechanical Engineering Department.

In February, Prof. Zotos won first place at a Forum sponsored by the Massachusetts Society of Professional Engineers. Up against a field of 10 professional engineers and engineering executives, he captured the top award for his talk on "The Engineer as a Citizen." When the award was announced at the annual Engineers' Week Luncheon attended by over 700 professional engineers and engineering students from all over New England, he received a standing ovation from the whole audience.

In May, Prof. Zotos was awarded an engraved plaque from all the undergraduate engineering students within the College of Engineering at N.U. at the annual Tau Beta Pi and Honor Societies' Banquet. The inscription read "The Engineers' Council Presents This Plaque to John Zotos, in recognition of Outstanding Dedication and Devotion to the Professional Development of Engineering Students at Northeastern University." Another standing ovation from all in attendance was given after the presentation.

The Northeastern Alumni Magazine also honored Prof. Zotos in the May/June, 1982 issue with an article entitled "Human Aspects of Technical Problems are Important, Professor Says."

At Cushing Plaza

Fayva Shoe gone, Plaza Pharmacy going

By Patricia Desmond

Business at Cushing Plaza is in a rapid decline this week as the pharmacy and Fayva Shoe Store close up shop.

The Cushing Plaza Pharmacy will continue operation down Route 3A a bit in the building next to KoKo Island Restaurant.

The fountain—a long standing institution in town—won't be moving along with the drugs, ear plugs, cards and cosmetics.

The fountain itself will be auctioned off Monday, July 12.

Fayva Shoe folded on Monday. It's the second discount shoe store to close in Cohasset in the past three months. The Village Shoe recently shut down its shop in the village. Another Village Shoe continues on in Norwell.

Meanwhile the old A&P remains boarded up. The rumor is one of the supermarket chains will be taking over the whole building in the center of the plaza. Earlier reports indicated the bigger chains like Roache Brothers were only interested in moving into the A&P if the space occupied by the pharmacy could be added to the shopping area.

Joe Flynn, who handles the operation of the plaza for the out-of-state owner, could not be reached in time for this week's deadline.

Other companies rumored to be considering the location are: Rizzotto's, Shaw's and Curtis.

The group at the fountain in the pharmacy couldn't help identify the future occupant.

The regulars did agree, however, that the closing of the counter was an awful shame.

Gene Greenblatt, the pharmacist, is planning an Auld Lang Syne party to mourn the passing of the club, as it were.

"Sure we're going to have an orchestra and dancing," he said describing the party.

Greenblatt has been in business at the location for 22 years.

Tuesday when the Mariner stopped by to talk with the regulars, the place was in shambles.

The new location opens July 5. The card racks and some other counters have already been ripped out of the walls and sent along to the new location.

The fountain will continue serving food until

Anger greets search committee's elimination of local firefighters

Two Cohasset firefighters have been eliminated from further consideration for the fire chief's job and that has made a lot of people unhappy.

At selectmen's meeting last week residents and firefighters expressed their disapproval with the fire chief's search and the committee's three final choices. Selectmen didn't have answers to questions from those in attendance. The board also wants to know why and how the committee arrived at their choices.

Selectmen seemed disappointed with the committee's results because the board is required by town meeting vote to choose a fire chief from one of the three finalists.

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie said, "We wouldn't have put Roger (Lincoln) in, (as acting fire chief) if we didn't think he was qualified." Lincoln has been managing the fire department as acting fire chief since the retirement of Charles Riepenbrink in March.

The committee chose the following men as the "three most highly qualified applicants": Victor Cail of Reading, Robert Winston of Duxbury and Martin Dooley of East Hartford, Connecticut.

The search committee received requests for applications from 38 individuals. Twenty applications were submitted to the committee by April 30.

Cohasset's Lincoln and Captain James Gurry were among the eight applicants who were interviewed by the committee.

In a written report to selectmen, the search committee stated, "We would like to assure the Board of Selectmen of our individual and collective sensitivity for due consideration for applications from members of our own Fire Department and other Cohasset residents. Our final recommendations should not be interpreted as adverse to any individual within the department or to the department itself."

Members of the fire chief search committee are: Edward Dillon Jr., Roy Fitzsimmons, Cordelia Foell, Donald Steele and John Larkin Thompson, the chairman.

The report stated that the most difficult challenge for the committee was "to follow the clear mandate of the Town vote which required that we identify for your further action the three most highly qualified applicants."

Residents talked about petitioning for a special Town Meeting to rescind the April 1981 vote, which charges the committee with responsibilities.

Town Counsel Blake Thaxter ruled this week that a town meeting vote could override the previous 1981 mandate. Executive Secretary Arthur Clark

Water Dept. disconnects 14 homes

The water department launched its crackdown on delinquent water bills in earnest last week disconnecting water service to 14 homes.

The response was excellent, said Water Supt. Ben Curley, "We raised quite a bit of money but not what we had anticipated." Water was shut off in some homes overnight while others were without service for two days. Curley said three residences are still without water service and he has not heard from them.

At their last meeting, water commissioners decided service would not be reconnected until at least half the amount of money due was paid. Curley said the commissioners plan to hound delinquent homeowners during the upcoming fiscal 1983 year which begins tomorrow (Thursday.) The commission is planning shutoffs for overdue bills of more than 90 days. Residents will be notified of the commission's stance in their billing.

"It's unfortunate that people don't take this serious," said Curley. Water service in Cohasset is going to be one of those utilities bills that people will have to start paying on time, he added.

Police Chief DeBassio to file charges against Ptl. Ainslie

By Donna Cogliano

Police Chief John DeBassio is expected to file specific charges against Permanent Intermittent patrolman Lawrence Ainslie Jr., this week.

The patrolman's uncle, Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie, Jr. made the announcement last Thursday following an hour-long closed-door meeting of selectmen.

Selectman Ainslie said he would disqualify himself from hearing proceedings. Four weeks ago, DeBassio told selectmen he would not want to use patrolman Ainslie, saying he was unsuitable for a permanent appointment to the police force because of various background checks.

DeBassio said Monday he was preparing four charges against patrolman Ainslie which would be forwarded to selectmen before this week's Wednesday meeting.

He said the four charges included specific references to particular days and situations.

DeBassio initiated the charges himself. If a question should arise DeBassio said he would contact town counsel. "Generally the action is initiated by me," he noted, "and I'm responsible (for the charges)."

Those at last Thursday's executive session were Chief DeBassio, selectmen, Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter, patrolman Ainslie and his attorney, Mark Fitzsimmons.

Emerging after the closed meeting patrolman Ainslie said he had "no comment" for the press. However, Ainslie's attorney, Fitzsimmons, said he was "happy with the proceedings."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle told about 40 citizens in attendance that selectmen aren't required to hold a hearing once DeBassio comes forth with charges. After review of the charges, selectmen could legally turn down DeBassio's request for a hearing, said Thaxter.

Laugelle said it would be up to the board to decide if the charges warranted a hearing.

Thaxter explained the route of proceedings. If selectmen voted to dismiss patrolman Ainslie following a public hearing, Ainslie could appeal the decision to the Civil Service Commission. If the Civil Service Commission sided with selectmen, then patrolman Ainslie has the right to appeal in district court and so on, up through the Massachusetts court system.

With Ainslie disqualified from the hearing procedures, only Selectman Mary Jane McArthur and Laugelle would be eligible to vote. McArthur was absent from the board's controversial vote four weeks ago which reminded DeBassio that patrolman Ainslie should be assigned to special work details on an equal basis.

Selectman Ainslie

Selectman Ainslie read a statement, at last Thursday's meeting, from Town Counsel Thaxter which explained a slight change of opinion in his original response to the selectmen's June 2 vote. His new opinion is based on the actual vote.

After re-examining DeBassio's June 4 letter,

Disposal construction

All disposal works construction permits issued prior to January 15, 1981, must meet completion requirements by Jan. 15, 1984, the Board of Health says. A system that has been inspected, meets all Title V Requirements, and is able to be utilized.

Applicants must notify the Board of Health to verify the extension of the permit. The Board reserves the right to reassess any lot which may have undergone changes since the original permit issuance.

Permits issued after January 15, 1981, that have expired, will require that plans comply with rules and regulations in effect at the time of permit application.

Correction

In this week's Focus on Summer section, the schedule at the Old Colony Tennis Club was incorrectly included on page 8 in the Mariner. The Old Colony Tennis Club in Hingham recently closed down.

Ride-A-Bike award

At the Annual Ride-A-Bike awards dinner in Randolph last week, Jennifer Plante of Cohasset was presented a $100 U.S. Savings Bond from Coca Cola Bottling Co.

On May 2 the Cohasset Teachers Association sponsored the Ride-A-Bike in Cohasset and raised over $2,300 for the Massachusetts Association for Retarded Citizens.

Jennifer 9, the daughter of Pat and Maria Plante of 798 Jerusalem Road, rode 24 miles and collected $253 from sponsors. She will enter 4th grade at Deer Hill School.

Fire stations for sale

Despite recent advertising, selectmen have received no offers for the purchase of the Beechwood or North Cohasset fire stations. Last Wednesday the board met specifically to open bids but none were delivered.

Executive Secretary Arthur Clark said he wasn't expecting any bids since the town had only advertised to sell the buildings, and not the land.

Clark said if the town doesn't sell the Beechwood fire station it might be torn down. The town can't sell the Beechwood land because it is park land.

Clark said the town could offer both the North Cohasset fire station land and building for sale, but that a vote was incorrectly taken at town meeting which called for sale of only the building. This vote could be corrected at a future town meeting and the town could advertise the sale of both the North Cohasset building and property.

Golf club murder trial

Last week a jury of 16 men and women toured the scene of Robert Kemp's murder at the Cohasset Golf Club. Kemp, the club manager and a resident of Pembroke was found dead Nov. 20 in a wooded area near the Golf Club.

Marshfield's William McDermott, 17, went on trial last week for the murder of his boss. He is also charged with robbery of some money from the cash box and jewelry from the victim.

Police Chief John DeBassio and patrolman Brian Cogill attended the jurors' tour at the Golf Club Tuesday. The jury was brought to various rooms in the Club and shown the surrounding grounds.

The cash box in the lounge, the floor drains and freezer in the kitchen were brought to the attention of jurors. They were also taken to view Kemp's office.

Pedestrian struck

On the last day of school, Thursday, an Osgood School second grader was struck by a car as she stepped off the bus to cross Beechwood Street in front of her home.

Seven-year-old Briar Brochu received minor cuts and bruises from the incident. She was taken to her family doctor. The driver of the car was cited for failure to stop for a school bus with red lights flashing and operating to endanger.

The driver of the car was Thomas Lee, 55, of Scituate. He told police that he had stopped for the bus and then started up again.

Dump project readvertised

According to Fred DeFeo of Flynn Engineering, state officials have compromised with town officials concerning use of materials to be used in capping the Cedar Street Landfill.

DeFeo said state officials would allow both clay and silt sand to be used in the town dump's expansion and capping project.

Town Meeting had appropriated $240,000 for the project while the lowest bid received was $278,994. Clay is the less expensive material but up until last week the town was required to use silt sand, the more expensive material.

Because specifications for the project have changed the town will advertise for bids on the project again. This marks the third round of bidding for the landfill project.

Early deadline

The Fourth of July is upon us, at least three days worth this weekend. So in order to be among those celebrating our nation's birthday, the Mariner will have an early deadline.

All advertising or editorial copy should be at the Mariner office by 12 noon Friday, July 2. That's early but it enables your information to be published in next week's paper and our staff to be part of the picnicking, fireworks and hoopla on the Fourth.

Casino gambling update

There are five or six casino bills still languishing in the Legislature's House Ways and Means Committee and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray expects them "to stay there."

Some say that legislation to authorize gambling in Hull and North Adams is being kept on ice in committee for a vote during the final hours of the current session, possibly after the fall elections.

Murray, however, plans to see that such an end-around doesn't happen.

Attorney General Francis Bellotti has joined U.S. Atty. William Weld in a drive to block any kind of legalized casino gambling in Massachusetts. Bellotti doesn't believe the casino bills are dead and has instructed his staff to monitor the progress of such bills.

On a related topic, Rep. Murray was to speak at the State House this week in opposition to the Las Vegas bill.

Thaxter still maintains that, "The board of Selectmen does not have control or jurisdiction over private detail assignments."

Based on an unofficial vote, Thaxter concluded that selectmen had only instructed the Chief to comply with what is already a statutory obligation... to provide civil service employees, an equal opportunity for work.

In Thaxter's June 24 letter, he says the actual vote does not instruct the chief to do anything; it is only a statement of fact. The board's official (actual) vote reads, "that as a permanent intermittent police officer, Lawrence D. Ainslie Jr. is eligible for permanent intermittent detail."

Thaxter further stated in the letter, "The Chief completely misinterpreted the vote; that the Board of Selectmen did not instruct the Chief to do anything; that the Board did not attempt to interfere with the administration and control of the operation of the police department and, therefore, no issue was presented."

Molly Hochkeppel featured in 'No Sex Please'

Molly Hochkeppel of Smith Place, has a featured role in "No Sex Please, We're British," the summer opener for Christo's II Dinner Theatre in Brockton.

"No Sex," which completely believes its name, will run July 7 through 9 and 14 through 17. In England, this bright, bonkers British farce is still running strong after 10 years on the boards. The current production is being directed by George Stevens of Darling Productions, Braintree.

Molly has played Maude Bodley in "Not Now Darling" at Old Colony Theatre and again at Dunphey's Dinner Theatre in Hyannis. She also did Gwendolyn Pigeon in "Odd Couple" at Dunphey's, Julie Cavendish in "Royal Family" for the Bay Players, and most recently Muriel Tate in "Plaza Suite" at Christo's.

In "No Sex," Molly is a meddling mother-in-law who gets caught up in a plot involving newly-weds, naughty pictures and even naughtier movies. All raw material for the kind of lighthearted lunacy the British do so well. The show is preceeded by a full course dinner with a choice of three entrees.

Plaza Pharmacy moving to a new address...

Saturday, July 10. The party is July 9.

Maura McGowan said no jobs would be lost in the move.

"Everyone who works on the counter will be going to the new place," she said.

Besides Maura that includes Nancy Ford, Diane Cook, Laurie Ford and Beth Ann Litchfield.

While she was explaining how things would be, Bonnie Leone of Scituate was busy showing her latest batch of photographs of the drug store's regulars.

"We've got our own photographer here," Saint Rosano said, pointing over at Bonnie.

By now Bonnie has six albums filled with pictures of her friends, the regulars.

Bonnie and her mother, Veronica Cadose, come to the pharmacy every day for lunch.

Where will the regulars go when the place closes.

"Fr. (Phillip) Keohane said we could meet at the rectory," one woman said with a touch of salt.

Fr. Keohane is listed as one of the regulars by the group. But he wasn't there right then.

Saint said he's been sitting at the fountain every day for seven years. "Except when I'm in the hospital."

"It's like a family here," Patty Galligan said. Just about then Bonnie was trying to take of picture of Greenblatt and the mess along the floor and walls.

"Get over here, Gene, or I'll squish you," Bonnie said to the pharmacist who was trying to find a prescription item for a customer.

Someone else said something about how friendly all the people were at the counter.

"We should take the whole counter and move it someplace," one of the regulars said.

Nicholas Manganaro, who used to sit atop the counter in an infant carrier, agreed he too would miss the place.

"It wasn't fair," another regular chimed in, referring to the management of the plaza.

Other regulars include, but are not limited to: Bob Tarantino, Ann Burke, Grace Ennis, Eleanor Coleman, Shirely Keough, Rosemary Ford, Polly Litchfield and Polly Cook.

The counter is almost always full. Small tables are set up for the overflow.

Where will these regulars go to?

"There isn't anyplace like this," one of the women said.

No decision yet on Jackson police promotion

Selectmen have not reached a decision yet on the promotion of Robert Jackson from patrolman to police sergeant. The board met with Jackson and Police Chief DeBassio in executive session last week for nearly a half-hour.

Jackson recently passed the sergeant's examination and was the only Cohasset police officer to do so.

In a recommendation to selectmen, DeBassio stated, "Officer Jackson's service to date has been consistent, efficient and effective. He is committed and motivated to his law enforcement career and offers both education and leadership potential to the Cohasset Police Department."

In November 1980, Jackson received a service commendation for capture of an armed robbery suspect. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia and Northeastern University.

This month he was trained in crime scene management. He has also studied radar, selective enforcement, burglarly reduction and received other training at the Brockton Police Academy.

DeBassio said selectmen "Indicated their willingness to go ahead with the appointment." He said the hold-up was because the board wanted to review a written recommendation which was submitted by DeBassio two weeks ago.

said 200 signatures are required in a petition to call for a special town meeting session.

Meanwhile selectmen are attempting to meet with the search committee to review the selection process. Ainslie said of the search committee, "Their duty is done but I would think that they owe us an explanation." Selectman Rocco Laugelle said that it any one wants to go ahead with getting up a petition they should do so, through selectmen who will be advised by town counsel.

One selectman said, "We purposely wanted to stay out of the (selection) process but we're very much in it now...we're very much limited to three candidates."

Ainslie said, the board would not start to interview candidates until they have met with the fire chief search committee.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur was concerned with starting the interviewing process and then finding out that there is going to be a town meeting. "If people are thinking along those lines, I would like to know soon."

As the Mariner went to press Tuesday, the selectmen's office wasn't aware of any petition circulating for special town meeting.

Selectmen, however, aren't planning to rush into the interview process. "In my opinion we have a capable person in there now...I don't see that it's a panic situation," said Ainslie.

around town

☐Coast Guard Storekeeper 3rd Class Michael MacDonald, son of Joseph and Agnes MacDonald of 49 Ripley Road, has reported for duty at U.S. Coast Guard Yard, Baltimore.

☐Residents and workers at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home received a special treat last week when accordionist Myron Floren of the Lawrence Welk Show stopped in to serenade the old folks.

Activities Director JoAnne Day said Floren went from room to room and visited with every patient. Before leaving Floren promised he'd be back to visit next year.

Floren was in town last week for an appearance at the South Shore Music Circus.

☐Everett Dorr of Scituate recently conducted his final physical education class at Cohasset High School. After 33 years of teaching in Cohasset, his last class consisted of golf instruction to a group of 11th graders.

Despite the rain threatening clouds, students were able to complete two holes of golf. Though last week marked Dorr's official retirement from teaching he welcomed students into his own backyard for golf lessons this summer.

The best part of teaching is the kids, said Dorr. He likes to watch the growth and improvement of students.

Dorr has taught generations of school children in Cohasset. The parents, teachers and children will miss him. But most of all, Dorr told the Mariner that he will miss the kids.

☐Cathleen Collins recently graduated from Thayer Academy in Braintree. She received Last Chapel Awards in Prologue Poetry and Quill and Scroll Creative Writing.

☐Blythe Berents, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Berents was recently honored at Thayer Academy in Braintree. She received an award for "Most improved in Freshman English."

☐Skip Young of Cohasset recently received his Associates degree in Liberal Arts from Massasoit Community College.

He will attend Salem State College this fall.

Douglas, The son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Mitman of Beach Street, will be attending Dartmouth College this Fall, as a business major.

☐With this past weekend the first in a long time with good weather, most residents about town spent their time out of doors.

It was perfect weather for a bike ride — so good, in fact, that we overdid by about eight miles. The Beach, especially on Sunday, was crowded enough to make it seem that Summer finally has arrived. Unfortunately, some of those sun worshipers have now discovered the hard way that the parking by permit only is now in effect.

☐Among the lifeguards at Sandy Beach this year are Patty and Paul Johnson, both expert swimmers and long time members of the Cohasset Swim Team.

☐Speaking of the swim team, training began in earnest this week with Brenda Birmann, Doug Bell and Erin O'Brien in charge of the dedication of the team members and their coaches is impressive especially in view of the fact that practice often starts at the unfriendly hour of 7 a.m. We wish them luck.

☐The sun shone brilliantly on the promotion day exercises for the sixth grade class at the Deer Hill School.

The event was held in the courtyard of the school for the first time and many people were heard to comment favorably on the change.

One high point of the event was the performance of the students. Introductions were made by John Linsley and Kerry Kirkendall, co-winners of the Athletic/Scholastic/Citizenship Award. Flute solos were abley performed by Erin Powell and Joy Turner. Julie Bowdoin, Victoria Kelley and Emily Tague accomplished a very moving poem recitation. Laura Kuhn's original poem "We Continue" provided an impressive representation of the spirit of learning.

And finally, David Shumaker, in a very funny speech, gave us an insight into the many changes he and his classmates have seen in their three years at the Deer Hill School. (For instance, David said, three years ago, we were running away from the girls. Now some of us are running the other way.)

☐Many Cohasset residents attended a recent open house at Kimball's-By-The-Sea Inn where they viewed the many changes and improvements in decoration at the motel, which was recently bought by the Roy family of Cohasset.

Especially impressive, according to one guest, were the Tiffany and the Presidential Suites, both of which cerainly live up to the magnificence of their names.

GOP ELECTION OFFICERS

The following election officers for the Republican Town Committee were approved by selectmen last Thursday:

Warden, Dominic Baccari; Clerk, Mary N. Grassie; and Inspectors Carol Began, Eileen Buckley, Arthur Lehr, Jr., Mary Migliaccio Dusossoit, Margaret Stoughton, Grace Tuckerman, David Knowles, Katherine Lincoln, Betty Pearce, Nancy Sladen, Margaret Chapin, Carol Deal, Eunice Clark, Janet MacLure, Winifred Kuhn, Marjorie Anderson, Margaret Laugelle, Mary M. Grassie, Kathleen Gibbons and Kathleen England.

APPOINTED REGISTRARS

Clarence Grassie was reappointed by selectmen last week to serve on the Board of Registrars for the Republican Town Committee. Burtram Pratt was also appointed to that board and replaces Edward Tower.

TOWN AUDIT

Jim Kearney was named by selectmen last week to audit the town's account. Though the state requires that an audit be done every three years, Cohasset completes one every two years.

KOKO ISLAND REQUEST

An application from Ko-Ko Island Restaurant for a week day entertainment license was taken under advisement by selectmen last week.

The license would permit a piano or guitar player. The board wants to question Police Chief John DeBassio before a vote is taken.

ONWOOD APPOINTED

Selectmen appointed Malcolm Onwood, of 404 Jerusalem Rd., to the Council on Aging.

CLASS II LICENSE

Selectmen narrowed the field of tentant applicants for the Government Island apartment vacancy to 10. Seven applicants were eliminated because they were single, a town employee or related to a town official.

Good and bad news on the Red Line

By Claire McDonough

I have bad news and good news. The bad news is that MBTA Red Line trains have developed an alarming predeliction for opening doors while hurtling through tunnels at twice the speed of sound. The good news is that according to the MBTA Advisory Board one out of every seven trains doesn't show up. The way I figure it, that means my chances of being dashed to my death in a black, rat-ridden subterranean passage have been reduced by 14.28 percent.

Most commuters are distressed when subway trains fail to arrive. Not me. It's the ones that show up that set me a-quiver. I was on the train with the door problem last Monday. Let me tell you, seeing your life pass before your eyes on a Monday morning before you've even made it into Boston is no way to start the week. Particularly if your eminent demise is slated to take place in the "T." I've never actually seen one, but you'll never convince me those tunnels aren't filled with rats. Gray rats and black rats with yellow, beady eyes. They are larger than cats and small dogs, and they all know my name.

"She's coming," they squeak to each other. "Watch the doors. This might be the day."

Almost as distressing as the heightened danger on the "T" is the cavalier fashion in which the press handles it.

Monday night I ran into the house and looked around for the newspaper.

"What was the headline?" I asked. "Was it 'Claire McDonough Cheats Death'?"

"Wait till I finish the crossword puzzle," the Dragon replied. "I think it was something about Tregor."

"Sure," I sniffed. "Never mind the really important things, like the rats are taking over and they've learned how to operate the doors on the "T"."

Skipper made his hands into claws and stalked me. "They've learned to do lots of things," he hissed. "Remember 'Willard'?"

I shuddered.

Breida looked up from her homework. "Have there been any statistics as to how many people who get on the "T" at one station are actually known to emerge at another?"

Larry grinned. "You know how everyone says he's part of the rat race? Well, guess who's winning."

I don't suppose there'd be any point writing to Ann Landers about this.

Ainslie revisited

We were out by the haystack pickin' our teeth with a piece of straw when the mailman arrived with Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter's "Dear Henry" letter to Selectman Chairman Henry Ainslie (see page 9).

We liked to jump out of our overalls!

First of all, (as Thaxter notes in his letter), the unofficial June 2 vote stating that Lawrence Ainslie, "shall be assigned to special details on an equal and impartial basis..." has,in a curious miracle, become an official vote benignly noting that as a permanent intermittent officer Ainslie "is eligible for permanent, intermittent detail."

Swell, we say, that (according to the "correct" vote) the Selectmen have informed the police chief that officer Ainslie is eligible for details — and we wonder why while they were at it they didn't add that he is also eligible to drive, vote, and send in his Publishers' Clearing House Sweepstakes.

And of course we don't suppose that the vote was "corrected" due to the firestorm of protest that the "nonvote" produced. But it do all remind us of the fella who borrowed what appeared to be one of paw's fine horses only to return two days later riding a definite cow.

Though a horse was missing and we counted one too many cows, paw never called the man a liar. "That sure was a curious fella" was all he would say. And there sure is a curious difference between the unofficial vote and the official one!

Now let's get serious. Let's assume the unofficial vote never existed and let's assume all the Selectmen did on June 2 was to vote "that as a permanent, intermittent police officer, Lawrence D. Ainslie, Jr., is eligible for permanent, intermittent detail." Let's look at the conclusions about that vote that Mr. Thaxter draws in his "Dear Henry" letter. Let's examine Mr. Thaxter's own words.

"That (the official) vote does not instruct the Chief to do anything," says Thaxter.

Technically correct, we say — and otherwise false. Why, we wonder, did the Selectmen bother to take a vote on officer Ainslie at all if it was not to make it perfectly clear to Chief DeBassio that they wanted Ainslie to be assigned details. We think the chief interpreted their vote precisely correctly. And we think most of Cohasset knows what that vote meant.

"It is a statement of fact," Mr. Thaxter goes on to say about the vote. "Therefore, the allegations by the Chief that he was instructed to take action by the Board are unfounded."

False, we say. The chief did not allege that he was "instructed." Here is how he began his superb letter to the Selectmen responding to their June vote: "The recent vote of Selectmen Ainslie and Laugelle, effectivly ordering me to utilize the services of Permanent Intermittent Lawrence David Ainslie, Jr., is hereby acknowledged." (Italics ours).

The chief knows the difference between a literal order and an effective one, and he chose his words carefully. Mr. Thaxter doesn't seem to know the difference, and in stating that the Chief stated he was literally instructed to use Ainslie, Mr. Thaxter has not chosen his words very carefully.

Mr. Thaxter continues: "That the chief completely misinterpreted the vote."

Wrong, we say. As we say above, the chief interpreted exactly correctly. If not a direct order, it was direct intimidation and there is simply no other explanation for the vote's very existence. And for Mr. Thaxter to contend otherwise raises the question of whether he is laboring for the town of Cohasset or merely the political hides of two members of the Board of Selectmen.

Mr. Thaxter continues: "That the Board did not attempt to interfere with the administration and control of the operation of the Police Department."

Well, that may be Mr. Thaxter's personal opinion, but we don't think it belongs in his legal opinion. When he states, "They did not attempt" he is going beyond characterizing their actions, he is imputing their intent.

Now we are mighty displeased with the Selectmen in question and we say their action was improper interference. But we do not presume to know their actual intent, and neither should Mr. Thaxter. When he goes beyond rendering his legal opinion of the Selectmen's action and cleanses their intent, he only raises questions about his own intent.

Mr. Thaxter's opinion concludes: "I have read articles, letters and editorials which indicate that politics are interfering with the operation of the Police Department. I have carefully examined the approved minutes of the June 2 meeting and it is my opinion that there is not one scintilla of evidence to indicate any such thing, and those people who are so alleging are misinformed."

"Paw" would have a term for the above, but we will politely call it "fallacious induction." Mr. Thaxter examines the approved (and possibly sanitized) minutes and concludes from them that there is "not one scintilla of evidence" to indicate political interference.

Yup, and paw's hands were clean after he washed them, but you'd be a fool to conclude from that, that he didn't work in a barnyard. There may not be a "scintilla" — which means — "spark" in the minutes, but there's an inferno in Cohasset.

The Lawrence Ainslie case is turning into something of a Cohasset "Scopes Trial," far larger than the individual it began around. It remains important that justice be done to Lawrence Ainslie and that he not be in any way prejudged.

But what concerns us primarily is how Cohasset is run, for how Cohasset is run will largely determine what Cohasset will be. If we start running Cohasset like a bunch of Boston pols our quality of life will follow our deteriorating behavior.

We don't criticize our public officials with joy, we do it with regret, but with determination that we must criticize them when believe they are not acting in Cohasset's best interest.

In such instances we feel we owe our outspokenness to "paw" and to all our ancestors who bequeathed us this beautiful town. Above all, we feel we owe it to our descendents.

Therefore we mean to see the Ainslie issue through until we believe that our public officials have done right by Cohasset.

Letters

Criticizes fire chief search committee

To the Editor:

As a long-time resident and voting citizen of the Town of Cohasset, I must express my outrage at the report of the Fire Chief Search Committee.

This report nominates three men — one from Reading, one from Duxbury and one from E. Harford, Conn. to fill the position of full-time fire chief. Glaringly omitted from this list of nominees is the name of Capt. Roger Lincoln, who has been serving the town as acting Fire Chief since former Chief Piepenbrink's retirement two months ago.

The Search Committee cited as their criteria for selection of nominees — experience, education and training, personal attributes and community participation. I believe that the citizens of Cohasset, and more importantly, Chief Lincoln, are entitled to an explanation of the Committee's decision to by-pass a local applicant who certainly more than fulfills their stated qualifications.

Chief Lincoln is a 12 year veteran of the Department, working his way up to his present rank. He has worked hard and diligently in furthering his education in his chosen field, and, at present, holds an Associates Degree in Fire Science. He has lived in Cohasset all his life and has a first-hand knowledge of the Town, and, more importantly, the town's Fire Department. He is a highly respected, well liked young man, both within the town in general, and more specifically, within his own department. During the time he has served in the capacity of Acting Chief, he has run department with the utmost of efficiency and diplomacy, earning him the respect of all who have had occasion to be in touch with him.

It is my opinion, and that of everyone I have discussed this matter with, that the Committee's action is a deliberate insult to this fine young man. I personally, do not know what Chief Lincoln's response would have been to an offer for this position; but, out of respect for the man's service to the town and his impressive list of qualifications, he should have at least been included in the list of three nominees.

As a footnote to this controversy, it might behoove the citizens of Cohasset to think long and hard the next time we are called upon to vote for any future "search committees." Remember that the Board of Selectmen are bound by the committee's decisions, and you and I have virtually nothing to say about it. At least if these important appointments are left entirely in the hands of the Selectmen, with input from the citizens through open, public hearings, we can all have a say as to who will fill these positions.

In closing, I repeat my demand for a public explanation from the Committee regarding their decision to overlook Chief Lincoln.

Patricia Litchfield

Aboard the school bus kids wave good-bye on the last day of school and smile hello to summer vacation.

The following letters were sent to Selectmen last week. Ed.

A new opinion from Town Counsel Thaxter

I have received from Arthur a copy of the approved minutes of the meeting of June 2, 1982 which differ somewhat from the minutes referred to in my letter to the Board of Selectmen dated June 9, 1982.

Your letter of June 16th requests an answer as to whether or not my opinion would have been different if I had seen the approved vote before I rendered the aforementioned opinion.

I have re-examined the letter of June 4, 1982 from Chief DeBassio to me wherein he requested an opinion as to whether private detail assignments as authorized and distributed by the Chief of Police are properly within the control or jurisdiction of the Board of Selectmen.

My answer to that question is the same, to wit: that the Board of Selectmen does not have control or jurisdiction over private detail assignments.

The Chief further stated in his letter of June 4th "that Selectmen Henry Ainslie and Rocco Laugelle recently voted, over my objections, to utilize the services of Permanent Intermittent Police Officer Lawrence D. Ainslie for special details and such other services as may be consistent with the existing Collective Bargaining Contract."

He further stated "since I am in disagreement with the vote and the necessity to so assign the officer, I have asked that a decision be rendered relative to the Selectmen's authority to issue such an order..." Thus, the question presented by the Chief was whether he had to comply with the vote recently taken by the Board of Selectmen instructing him to utilize the services of Lawrence Ainslie.

The unofficial vote of the Board as presented to me was: "that permanent, intermittent police officer, Lawrence Ainslie, having met all of their requirements for the job, shall be assigned to special details on an equal and impartial basis with other qualified permanent, intermittent personnel."

Based on the language of that vote, it appeared that the statement made by the Chief to the effect he had been instructed by the Board to use officer Ainslie was correct and that an opinion should be rendered relative to this issue.

As you know, I wrote an opinion that the Board only instructed the Chief to comply with what is already a statutory obligation, to wit, provide civil service employees an equal opportunity for work.

The actual vote that was approved stated, "that as a permanent, intermittent police office, Lawrence D. Ainslie, Jr. is eligible for permanent, intermittent detail."

That vote does not instruct the Chief to do anything.

It is a statement of fact.

Therefore, the allegations by the Chief that he was instructed to take action by the Board are unfounded and my opinion would have been different.

My answer would have been as follows: that the Chief completely misinterpreted the vote; that the Board of Selectmen did not instruct the Chief to do anything; that the Board did not attempt to interfere with the administration and control of the operation of the Police Department, and therefore, no issue was presented.

Since this matter has received such widespread publicity, I feel that it is in the best interest of the Town that the correct and accurate facts be understood.

I have read articles, letters and editorials which indicate that politics are interfering with the operation of the Police Department.

I have carefully examined the approved minutes of the June 2nd meeting and it is my opinion there is not one scintella of evidence to indicate any such thing, and those people who are so alleging are misinformed.

J. Blake Thaxter, Jr.

From the Advisors

Because of the public interest in the current discussion between the Board of Selectmen and Police Chief DeBassio, the Advisory Board feels that it is incumbent upon it to state its position.

In 1977 when the change in the statute relative to the Police Chief was instigated by the Selectmen, the Advisory Board was supportive as it was convinced that it would improve the operation of the Department. In general terms, the Selectmen were to set the Department Policies and appoint police officers, including the Chief. The Chief was to assume the administration of the Department and the assignment of the personnel. We assume that the Board with the Chief have formulated a written list of general policies.

During the past year, the Advisory Board received a request for a transfer from the Reserve Fund submitted by the Selectmen, at the request of Chief DeBassio, for $1,000.00 for "physical and psychological exams for four potential candidates for appointment as permanent and/or intermittent police officers." The application stated that because of "newly adopted recruitment standards by the Board of Selectmen, the Town of Cohasset now assumes the cost of certifying the fitness to serve of such candidates with respect to physical condition and psychological evaluation. The procedure is intended to identify and preclude appointment of unsuitable or inappropriate candidates and minimize potential future liabilities which might be incurred by the Town of Cohasset."

Since the Advisory Board approved this transfer, it assumed that this procedure would be followed and recommendations for employment would consider all background information. The final appointment of police officers is under your jurisdiction but we assume it includes recommendations from the Chief.

Our concern is that the present difficulties be resolved as equitably as possible by clearly defining the specific areas of responsibility so that the intent of the Police Department reorganization may be realized.

Jean B. Cotton, Chairman
Advisory Committee

From Gertrude Hooper...

At last we have a Police Chief that runs his department in a sound professional way. Morale is high. He has won the respect of the townspeople.

No one can work well with people with whom one is not congenial. Neither party is happy under such an arrangement and those around sense the lack of compatability.

I strongly believe that the Chief should have a free hand in choosing his officers, as he was promised when he took the job. Let's not go back on our word and lose this excellent man.

This letter is in no way a reflection on your nephew. It is written solely to affirm a principle, and as an endorsement of Chief DeBassio.

Gertrude Hooper
369 Atlantic Avenue

From John Hagerty...

As a businessman in the town, I am keenly concerned about the quality of police protection in Cohasset. Chief DeBassio has done an excellent job since he took his present position in improving the quality of the police department. His selection of staff and his new techniques of law enforcement has made an improvement which has been noticed by myself and several other business people.

I urge you to support the chief in his decision to maintain control over those people who enter the ranks of the Cohasset Police Department.

Strawberry Parfait softball men fall to Marshfield

By Donna Cogliano

The Strawberry Parfait men's softball team bowed to the Marshfield Benchwarmers Sunday, 9-8.

The score see-sawed until the eighth inning when Marshfield exploded for three runs and a 9-5 lead. Strawberry Parfait, a Cohasset based team, could only muster three runs in the top of the ninth inning, which was one-run shy of icing the game.

The Strawberry Parfait squad has a record of 6-2 in the South Shore Civic Softball League. The league was formerly made up exclusively of police and firefighters. Only half of Cohasset's team today includes firefighters and policemen.

Strawberry Parfait has won the past two league championship titles and if they win this year, making it three consecutive titles, they will get to keep the trophy which has each winning team engraved on it.

With four weeks remaining on the schedule, Cohasset will probably qualify for the playoffs. The only team to beat Strawberry Parfait besides Marshfield, was Hingham Police "A" which most Cohasset players described as a fluke.

Cohasset beat Marshfield, 4-2, earlier this season when the two teams met. The Benchwarmers have an 8-1 record. In Sunday's game at Marshfield, Strawberry Parfait faced some familiar opposition against two Cohasset post office workers, Bill O'Connell, the head coach, and Dennis Reardon, both who played in the outfield.

Cohasset's head coach and right fielder David Pomarico, said, "The league is basically a fun league...It's very competitive. You play hard and give it your best shot but there is very little hostility." Players often complement the opposition, he said.

Getting back to Sunday's game, Patrolman Pomarico said, "It's hard talking about it after you've lost, yet it's good for you to lose a game here and there."

The Benchwarmers out-hit Strawberry Parfait, 18-17. What cost Cohasset the game was a few errors in the field. "I would feel more comfortable if they out-played us or out-hit us...but a lesson learned," said Pomarico.

Bo Malnati, the second baseman, is the assistant coach for Cohasset. In the Sunday game he batted .500 with a triple and a double. Left fielder Robert Swain led the offense for Cohasset, smashing two singles and a double.

In the last inning big hitters for Cohasset were Swain, Donny Cahill, Al Rose and Paul Laugelle. Cahill, the short fielder, collected two RBI's for the day and hit a double. Laugelle, the first baseman, had two singles and two RBI's.

Joe Pomarico, who bats fourth and plays short stop, had two singles and scored once. His brother David, the head coach, clubbed a double and single. Billy Protulis protected third base for the Strawberry Parfait team and smacked a double.

Mike "Ned" Nista was the pitcher for Cohasset. Other players for Strawberry Parfait include: Al Rose, Bob Sylvia, Brian Noonan, Kevin O'Brien, Phil Thayer, Jim Gallagher, Danny O'Connell, the catcher, J.O. Murphy in center field, and James Fiori.

Cohasset's next game is scheduled for Sunday, July 11, 10 a.m. at the Beechwood field versus Scituate.

Softball finishes 19-2, with four all-stars

Four members of the Cohasset High School softball squad were named South Shore League all-stars.

Seniors Liz Russell, Stacy Thompson, Karen Froio and junior Gia Barresi were selected to the all-star league squad.

Barresi, a catcher was the top hitter in the league with a .506 average. She had 42 hits for the season including seven homers and 47 RBI's. In 94 times at bat she didn't strike out once. Cohasset Coach Bill Fallon said, "she was the best player I've seen this year, by far."

Thompson, the senior center fielder, had 31 hits and reached base safely more than 70 times. Her on-base average is what kept her in the leadoff batting position. Thompson had a .447 batting average.

Russell, the pitcher for the Skippers, posted an 18-2 record with a 3.09 ERA. From the mound she was an important factor in leading Cohasset to the South Shore League championship this year.

Shortstop Froio captained the Skipper squad and held a .370 batting average. She collected 27 hits and 33 RBI's. Fallon said, "Karen always made the big play and got the big hits. She'll do well in college ball next year."

The softball team finished the season with a 19-2 record. In addition to capturing the league title, the girls advanced to the quarterfinals of the South Sectional Division II tournament.

Eight Skipper tennis players named all-stars

Eight Cohasset High School tennis players were named South Shore League all-stars. Four boys and four girls were honored as all-stars for their superior performances in South Shore League competition this spring.

All-stars on the girls' team were co-captains Sue Dalrymple, and Karen Murphy, Mia Graham and Joy Pratt.

For the boys' team, Shannon Collins, freshman John Colocousis, Paul Riley and Mike Brady were selected all-stars.

Brady, a senior, posted a 7-4 record in first singles competition this year. Collins, a co-captain, played second singles and lost only twice for a 10-2 record.

Riley, a junior, was 8-4 in doubles action and Colocousis was 9-3. Riley and Collins have been elected co-captains for the next year's tennis team.

As American as apple pie is the grand and glorious upcoming Fourth, a time John Quincy Adams felt we should celebrate with "pomp and parade, shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires and illuminations." The second President and his First Lady also thought that it was a good day for a dinner party and his wife, Abigail, planned the menu as an entirely American meal: turtle soup, salmon with egg sauce and apple pandowdy. Meals at their table in Quincy tended to be substantial and hearty, rather than elaborate and elegant, as you can see by this recipe for their favorite dessert called

BLUEBERRY FLUMMERY

4 c. milk
1¼ c. sugar
3/4 c. raw long-grain rice
1 tsp. vanilla extract
4 c. fresh or frozen blueberries
2 c. water
1 T lemon juice
1 c. heavy cream whipped

In the top of a double boiler, over direct heat, bring the milk and 1/4 c. of the sugar to a boil. Stir in the rice, place pan over hot water and cook 45 min., or until rice is very soft. Stir in the vanilla, cool and pour into a bowl. While the rice is cooking, prepare blueberries by washing, picking over and draining, if fresh berries. Combine the water, lemon juice and remaining sugar in a saucepan. Bring to a boil and cook over high heat for 5 min. Add berries and cook only 2 min. Cool, then pour over the rice mixture. Chill. Serve with whipped cream. Serves 6.

Those who have paddled west on the North River have seen huge snapping turtles basking on the sun-warmed rocks, but even though we have our own native supply, not too many holiday tables will serve turtle soup. As traditional as ham at Easter and turkey at Thanksgiving, is salmon and fresh peas on the Fourth. Marie Pittorino of Yankee Seafoods, says last year they ordered a thousand pounds of salmon from the West Coast and sold it all at $3.99 a pound. The fresh sock-eye salmon is packed in ice and flown here, which explains the high cost for the holiday fare. She has no idea what salmon will cost this year, but no matter what, Jackie Powell won't let the Fourth go by without serving poached salmon. It's so rich, she usually plans on three pounds to serve eight and serves it with fresh peas and new boiled potatoes in their jackets, poaching the salmon by placing the fish in water to cover to which 1 T salt and 2 T vinegar have been added. Bring the water to a boil and cook 10 min. per pound. Serve with white sauce to which sliced, hard-boiled eggs have been added.

To celebrate this most American of holidays also calls for a parade of our favorite menus for a full weekend of feting and feasting. How traditional can you get if you serve strawberry shortcake for your holiday dessert? If the weather is favorable, you can pick your own berries at Simon's Farm Stand on Rte. 123 in Scituate and you will have a berry that has a flavor far superior to that of those that are shipped to the markets. Marie tells us that hand-picked berries will cost you 75 cents a pound. Call ahead, take your own container, wear old shoes and clothes because of berry stains and take a hat for protection against the sun. Children under 10 are not allowed, for in their exuberance, all too often they have trampled the plants, Marie tells us. Your ruby red berries need no embellishment — not even sugar, but Janet Christensen's dessert sounds tempting. It's called

STRAWBERRY WHIPPED CREAM PIE

2 pts. fresh strawberries
2 c. sweetened whipped cream, or dessert topping
9" baked pie shell
2 or 3 T honey
Slivered, toasted almonds

Slice one pint of berries and fold into whipped cream. Turn into pie shell and spread evenly. Halve remaining strawberries and arrange, cut side down, on whipped cream filling. Drizzle honey over berries and sprinkle with almonds.

Business management came to CHS

The Business Management class at Cohasset High School was able to have five guest speakers this year as a result of participation in the South Shore Chamber of Commerce Economic Education program.

The most recent speaker was Ms. Linda Derry, personnel manager of The Talbots in Hingham. She explained the retail business and management of a small specialty store such at The Talbots. A current job application was distributed and interview techniques and career development were discussed with the students.

Donald Bates, executive vice-president of Cohasset Savings Bank, discussed technological changes in banking such as the increased use of computers and their effect on the business. Other changes such as transfer of money electronically and changes in business banking activities were explained. The students were invited to visit the bank and see the equipment in action.

Charles Mongomery, vice-president of Halliday Lithograph of Hanover, explained the publishing business, the average corporate profit rate of approximately five percent and marketing and distribution of published materials. He also distributed books for all students.

Andrew Walsh, Owner of Walsh's Restaurant in Quincy, spoke of the development of his restaurant first as a proprietorship, then as a partnership and its present corporate structure. Managerial techniques which specifically relate to food service were explained. The students were invited to the restaurant.

Francis Kane, director of administrative services of Dunkin' Donuts, outlined franchise agreements and the world-wide appeal of the doughnut. Individual franchises are able to modify and add products based on geographic and cultural preferences. For example, Dunkin' Donuts in Dallas has saddles for restaurant seats; and in Canada, the restaurants are formal and have many selections based on French taste and customs.

Certificates for a dozen donuts each were given to five students.

Shirley Gulbok to speak at Pratt Library

Shirley Glubok, an author, art historian and lecturer at the Metropolitan Museum in New York, will speak at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Monday, July 12, at 7:30 p.m.

School-age children and their parents are invited to attend this family program.

In conjunction with the library's Summer Reading Program, "Dungeons, Dragons, Castles and Keeps," Ms. Glubok will talk about "Knights and Castles." Her talk will include slides taken from art which appeared in her book, "Knights in Armor," published by Harper and Row.

Ms. Glubok began her writing career as an elementary school teacher. She realized quickly that little was available on art for that age level.

Since then, her 42 widely acclaimed books have helped fill that need for young people. The Library owns many of the author's books, which will be on display for viewing during the program.

Carillon recital Sunday

Summer carillon recitals at St. Stephen's Church will continue Sunday, July 4, from 4 to 5 p.m.

The carilloneur is Earl Chamberlain, the carilloneur at St. Stephen's.

Chamberlain is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music and has studied with Palmer Christian at the University of Michigan and with Nadia Boulanger. He holds the degree of Fellow of Trinity College on Music, London.

Chamberlain is organist-emeritus at St. Stephen's and now teaches carillon playing in Cohasset. He has been active as an organ recitalist, choral conductor and supervisor of school music.

Angler's corner...

Bluefish are becoming more prolific as we push into summer, with reports of good catches off Billingsgate and Boston Harbor last week.

And then there are places where they charge to the surface as was the case Saturday when a Scituate angler en route to Provincetown spotted the familiar "boiling water" about five miles out. It was a small school of maurading blues trying to decimate a school of terrified menhaden. A popping plug produces three healthy keepers.

...The striped bass fishery is supposed to be on the decline but that does not mean good fish aren't being taken. They are...off High Pines, Ocean Bluff and in Duxbury Bay at low tide.

And last week some prize stripers were taken during a striped bass tournament sponsored by the Green Harbor Tuna Club. The rules restricted anglers to Cape Cod Bay, which isn't much of a restriction, and though no one was saying, we think most of the fish were caught off Stellwagen Bank.

The winning fish was a 49 pounder taken by John Crosby aboard the "Big Fish 2" skippered by Tom DiPersia. Roger Carlson, skipper of the "Kestrel" was second with a 41-pound fish and Bob Chadwick and Al Poturnicki, were tied for third. Their fish weighed 37 pounds and Chadwick's was caught aboard the "Lease I" skippered by Bill Sullivan; Poturnicki took his aboard the "Swan Song" skippered by Dave De. Honorable mention went to Ed Benevides and Bud Mondeau.

...Codfish are still out there but have moved into deeper, colder waters. We know because we spotted a couple of anglers with 41 fillets Saturday. The fish were all under eight pounds.

...For those willing to brave a few mosquitoes (actually many mosquitoes) there are native brook trout in the river leading to Hacket's Pond in Hanover. Use light tackle and get your frying pan ready. Brookies make good eating.

...Bound Brook in Scituate is a well stocked trout stream and should produce some good trout for the next three or four weeks. Another spot worth a look for bass, perch and sunfish is the Norris Reservation in Norwell. Downstream, the river leading into the North River holds an occasional salter trout.

...And now you trout lovers, put aside your tackle for a moment and pay heed to the warning of Trout Unlimited which reports that the Sandwich Hatchery is in danger of being polluted by a proposed condominium that would install a septic system within 600 feet of the hatchery's primary water supply.

The Sandwich Hatchery produces nearly 100 per cent of the rainbow trout stocked in southeastern Massachusetts. That equals about 150,000 fish a year, and if the hatchery waters become polluted you can kiss it all goodbye.

To fight the threat, Trout Unlimited has established a Sandwich Hatchery legal defense fund and is looking for contributions. Send them to: Trout Unlimited, Massachusetts-Rhode Island Council, Box 671, Falmouth, MA 02541.

T.U. leaders are also pressuring the attorney general to become involved in the fight by intervening on behalf of the Sandwich Planning Board. The more letters the better, so write: Atty. Gen. Francis X. Bellotti, the John McCormack State Office Building, One Ashburton Place, Boston, MA 02108.

Lindy Blaisdell
David Cutler

Handsome Pair — Roger Carlson hoists a 41-pound striped bass that earned him second place in last week's striped bass contest sponsored by the Green Harbor Tuna Club. The fish on the scale weighed 32.5 pounds.

Angler's corner...

Bluefish are becoming more prolific as we push into summer, with reports of good catches off Billingsgate and Boston Harbor last week.

And then there are places where they charge to the surface as was the case Saturday when a Scituate angler en route to Provincetown spotted the familiar "boiling water" about five miles out. It was a small school of maurading blues trying to decimate a school of terrified menhaden. A popping plug produces three healthy keepers.

...The striped bass fishery is supposed to be on the decline but that does not mean good fish aren't being taken. They are...off High Pines, Ocean Bluff and in Duxbury Bay at low tide.

And last week some prize stripers were taken during a striped bass tournament sponsored by the Green Harbor Tuna Club. The rules restricted anglers to Cape Cod Bay, which isn't much of a restriction, and though no one was saying, we think most of the fish were caught off Stellwagen Bank.

The winning fish was a 49 pounder taken by John Crosby aboard the "Big Fish 2" skippered by Tom DiPersia. Roger Carlson, skipper of the "Kestrel" was second with a 41-pound fish and Bob Chadwick and Al Poturnicki, were tied for third. Their fish weighed 37 pounds and Chadwick's was caught aboard the "Lease I" skippered by Bill Sullivan; Poturnicki took his aboard the "Swan Song" skippered by Dave De. Honorable mention went to Ed Benevides and Bud Mondeau.

...Codfish are still out there but have moved into deeper, colder waters. We know because we spotted a couple of anglers with 41 fillets Saturday. The fish were all under eight pounds.

...For those willing to brave a few mosquitoes (actually many mosquitoes) there are native brook trout in the river leading to Hacket's Pond in Hanover. Use light tackle and get your frying pan ready. Brookies make good eating.

...Bound Brook in Scituate is a well stocked trout stream and should produce some good trout for the next three or four weeks. Another spot worth a look for bass, perch and sunfish is the Norris Reservation in Norwell. Downstream, the river leading into the North River holds an occasional salter trout.

...And now you trout lovers, put aside your tackle for a moment and pay heed to the warning of Trout Unlimited which reports that the Sandwich Hatchery is in danger of being polluted by a proposed condominium that would install a septic system within 600 feet of the hatchery's primary water supply.

The Sandwich Hatchery produces nearly 100 per cent of the rainbow trout stocked in southeastern Massachusetts. That equals about 150,000 fish a year, and if the hatchery waters become polluted you can kiss it all goodbye.

To fight the threat, Trout Unlimited has established a Sandwich Hatchery legal defense fund and is looking for contributions. Send them to: Trout Unlimited, Massachusetts-Rhode Island Council, Box 671, Falmouth, MA 02541.

T.U. leaders are also pressuring the attorney general to become involved in the fight by intervening on behalf of the Sandwich Planning Board. The more letters the better, so write: Atty. Gen. Francis X. Bellotti, the John McCormack State Office Building, One Ashburton Place, Boston, MA 02108.

Lindy Blaisdell
David Cutler

Handsome Pair — Roger Carlson hoists a 41-pound striped bass that earned him second place in last week's striped bass contest sponsored by the Green Harbor Tuna Club. The fish on the scale weighed 32.5 pounds.

Historic lifeboat visit postponed

The Orleans Historical Society has regretfully announced postponement of the visit to Cohasset by its newly restored former Coast Guard 36' motor lifeboat CG-36500 is a veteran of the hazardous rescue of the crew of the sinking tanker Pendleton near Cape Cod in 1952 and recently was purchased by the Orleans Society. The historic lifeboat originally had been scheduled to visit Cohasset this coming weekend for an open house at Lawrence Wharf on Saturday.

A spokesman for the Orleans Historical Society has informed the Cohasset Historical Societky that mechanical problems will force a postponement of the local visit. Difficulties with the newly reconditioned engine and fuel system have curtailed the historic lifeboat's maiden voyage.

The Orleans Society hopes to have its mechanical problems solved soon enough to permit a visit to Cohasset on the weekend of July 9, with open house at Lawrence Wharf on that day; however, this is not yet definite. When CG-36500 does visit locally, its crew will be made up of members of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxilliary.

Plans call for an exhibit of historic lifesaving memorabilia to be viewed on board the boat. Host group for the hoped-for visit of CG-36500 will be the Cohasset Historical Society.

David Wadsworth,
Society Curator.

Youth soccer league succeeds

By Tom O'Connor

One hundred ninety-one teams of children from Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Duxbury, Plymouth, Kingston, Hanover, Carver, Norwell and the Sacred Heart School had a terrific time playing soccer this Spring.

Although the rain (and late snow in April) necessitated numerous scheduling changes, the 3500 youngsters who participate in the league managed to get all their games played in time for the State championship playoffs.

Boys' and girls' teams are fielded by all of the towns in all of the five age divisions. Some of the towns keep their younger players "in house," while others field "traveling" teams for all age groups. The winning teams compete for the State championship in each age division.

CYSL CHAMPIONS

Age Group	Town	Coach
Under 10: Boys	Scituate	Tom Wall
Girls	Plymouth	Rory Griffin
Under 12: Boys	Plymouth	Bud Utera
Girls	Plymouth	George Walker
Under 14: Boys	Cohasset	Martin Acevedo
Girls	Scituate	Kathy Pocock
Under 16: Boys	Duxbury	Jeff Chandler
Girls	Scituate	Tom O'Connor
Under 19: Boys	Duxbury	John Ronald
Girls	Duxbury	Mike Coven

Tom O'Connor of Scituate, President of the CYSL, said that he was delighted with the way the League had grown since it was founded four years ago.

"In 1978 we started with eight towns that fielded 136 teams. We expect that by next year we'll have well over 200 teams. That's a lot of youngsters having fun, thanks to the efforts of parents who are willing to take the time to coach."

The CYSL is affiliated with the Mass. Youth Soccer Association, which is the organizing body for nine youth soccer leagues in the state.

Playoffs for the championships of those leagues are held every year in June.

All of the age-division champions in the CYSL played in the quarter finals for the State championships on Sunday, June 13.

Headed for the semi-finals on June 19 were the Duxbury boys' and girls' "under 19" teams, the Duxbury boy's "under 16" team, the Scituate girls' "under 16" team, and the Plymouth girls' "under 10" team.

"We think this League is special," O'Connor said. "We attempt to make an issue of sportsmanlike conduct on the part of all players, coaches, and parents.

"We want these boys and girls to learn how to enjoy themselves in a competitive sport, without deceiving them into believing that winning at any cost is worthwhile.

"We depend on the parents and coaches to transmit that message, and we depend on well-trained referees to enforce that conduct code.

"As the League matures, we expect that we will be even more successful in getting out the message: Soccer is fun!"

Here are the guidelines for drug & alcohol policy at CHS

The guidelines and procedures for the proposed Drug and Alcohol Policy for the Cohasset Schools are scheduled for review by the school committee at their July 20 meeting. Only the policy section of the proposal has been approved by the school committee.

Here is the implementation section of the proposed Drug and Alcohol Abuse policy:

POLICY SECTION

The Cohasset School Committee recognizes its responsibility for ensuring the safety of all members of the student body and for supporting and assisting in the enforcement of current law. It is illegal, and physically and psychologically harmful for individuals to use, possess and/or distribute any controlled substance or alcohol in the public school system. The Committee will discourage such use, possession and/or distribution through educational programs, and where necessary, will impose penalities.

The purpose of this policy is to eliminate the use of alcohol and the misuse and abuse of other drugs from our public school system. To this end the Committee:

(l) recognizes its responsibility to educate all students to the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse;

(2) will direct the administration to disseminate to the students and community such rules and regulations established by the administration to support the implementation of this policy;

(3) will encourage rehabilitation of drug and alcohol offenders through referrals to appropriate agencies;

(4) will cooperate with the law enforcement agencies in fulfilling the legal responsibilities connected with criminal offenses according to Massachusetts statutes;

(5) will promote the understanding of current law by all students, school personnel and the community.

IMPLEMENTATION SECTION

The following section contains the guidelines which the School System will use in the implementation of the School Committee Policy:

I. Procedure:

If a student is in possession of, or is under the influence of a drug, he or she shall be escorted as tactfully as possible to the nearest administrative office. If a student is believed to have ingested a controlled substance on the premise of any of the schools in Cohasset, the school nurse shall examine the student and decide upon the following action:

(1) If, in the nurse's judgment, a medical emergency exists, the student should be transported to the proper medical facility. A medical emergency exists when: (a) The student has been rendered unconscious: (b) A student verbally or by his actions threatens harm to himself or others; or (c) A student exhibits abnormal coordination so as to possibly injure himself or others.

The proper medical facility is the South Shore Hospital or any other emergency facility recommended by a doctor or the Fire Department Ambulance Service. Every attempt must be made to notify and receive the permission of the parent or legal guardian before the student is transported. In the case of a medical emergency, if it is impossible to reach the parent, the principal will notify the Superintendent of Schools as to the action taken for the well-being of the student involved. Chapter 71, Section 55A of the General Law stated that: "No public school teacher, principal, or nurse, who in good faith renders emergency first aid or transportation to a student who has become injured or incapacitated in a public school building or on the grounds thereof, shall be liable in a suit for damages as a result of his acts or omissions either for such first aid or as a result of providing emergency transportation to a place of safety, now shall he/she be liable to a hospital for its expenses if under such emergency conditions he/she causes the admission of such injured or incapacitated student, nor shall he/she be subject to any disciplinary action by the school committee for such emergency first aid or transportation. Amended by St. 1973, c.660."

(2) If the health problem is not a medical emergency, then the principal shall take the appropriate disciplinary action making sure that the student's rights regarding suspension are carefully followed:

(a) The student shall be apprised of the possible outcome of his or her actions; (b) The parents or legal guardian shall be notified of the situation and the possible resulting disciplinary action; (c) The parent shall be advised to take the student to the appropriate health care facilities; (d) The student will be immediately suspended for five days if the school has succeeded in contacting the parent; (e) If the parents cannot be contacted, the student shall be detained in the "in-house suspension room" until the end of the school day or until such time that contact with the parent is established. Under no circumstances will he or she be returned to class; and (f) A parent/student conference will be scheduled with the administration prior to readmittance.

(3) Penalties for drug or alcohol abuse at all school functions:

The following specific action shall be taken in cases of use, possession and distribution of alcohol or drugs:

(a) Use: in the case of the use of a controlled substance and/or alcohol: (l) The parent or legal guardian will be immediately notified; (2) A mandatory parent conference will be immediately scheduled; (3) Five days of out-of-school suspension will be assigned; (4) The family will be referred to a rehabilitation program.

(b) Possession of a controlled substance: (1) Immediate notification of the parent or legal guardian; (2) Five day out-of-school suspension; (3) Mandatory parent conference before readmittance; (4) Family will be referred to a rehabilitation program.

(c) Distribution of and/or sale of a controlled substance: (l) Immediate notification of parent or legal guardian; (2) Notification of incident to the Cohasset Police; (3) Immediate 10-day suspension with a review of the case by the Superintendent, with possible expulsion from school for a specific period of time by the School Committee.

II. Search and Seizure:

(1) According to a recent opinion of the Attorney General, "Under the circumstances of a clear and present danger to the individual and general well-being and/or in the maintenance of discipline and order in the schools, the principal or his designee shall have the right and duty to inspect student lockers and their contents therein without prior additional authority or police participation." Under the laws of "loco parentus," the school has more legal search latitude than do the law enforcement agencies.

The administration may search an individual pupil's person or any of his or her belongings. This includes clothing, pockets, wallets, purses, etc. Any search of a student or his or her belongings shall be conducted in the presence of a witness and only if circumstances direct. Police shall make such searches only when there is proper legal justification.

III. Student Rights:

Any local, state or federal law enforcement agency has the right to question a student. The school will cooperate with the authorities but will insist that a school official be present during the questioning. Every effort will be made to inform and/or include the parent or legal guardian of any requested hearing and the parents' or student's right to remain silent or to be represented by legal counsel may not be abridged.

IV. Confidentiality:

School personnel have no protection or privileges under Massachusetts law to confidential communication, with the exception of the school physician. School personnel can be subpoened into court and required to reveal information which has been confided to them. Administration and teachers may also be liable in civil suit for failure to notify parents or legal guardians about pupils' drug or alcohol involvement. Similarly, student records may be subpoenaed into court with respect to civil or criminal proceedings. Many teachers fear that this will stop young people from asking for help. Reports from schools which have adopted this confidentiality section tend to indicate that it does not deter students from seeking help. Therefore, teachers must make it clear to pupils who confide in them that it is their duty to report this information to the school principal but only in order to further the goal of promoting the pupils' personal welfare. Students are advised that information must be reported to the school administrator — and, in fact, the pupil who seeks the teacher's help is actually asking for help from the school authorities.

V. School Related Activities:

If the activity is a school-sponsored event, then the policy applies. A student who disrupts a school function or activity by an acutely abnormal or bizarre personality display, should be aware of the following:

(1) All drug and alcohol policies adopted for the regular school day are in force during all school-related activities and cover behavior on school buses during such events as athletic functions, school dances etc., on school property and away.

(2) Student shall be asked to leave the function if disruptive behavior continues. Police can be called to remove offender if necessary and parents and school should be notified as soon as possible. Bus privileges can be suspended for stated time periods if behavior warrants.

(3) In most instances a referral to school principal will be indicated to determine the most appropriate long-range plan for the student.

Activity supervisors are reminded that: (a) Immediate assessment of real danger to the student, other students, staff and property must be made. It should be remembered that such behavior may be emotionally, organically or chemically induced and that immediate differentiation may be possible; (b) If time permits, consultation and/or assistance from school personnel or other personnel who may already know the individual student or have specialized skills in this area may avoid unpleasant and unnecessary complications) (c) If the crisis persists, and no reason can be determined for the obvious and sudden personality change, the parent and/or doctor should be called immediately. If danger exists, call the police.

-A-

STAFF IMPLEMENTATION SECTION

Principal's and/or the Assistant Principal's role: As the highest authority in a specific school building. the principal bears the responsibility for the welfare of the student body. The assistant principal, as his designee, is to a great degree in charge of student discipline and control. Therefore, the staff member who has encountered a drug/alcohol situation at the Cohasset High School should immediately call on the assistant for help. In the elementary schools, the principal is the administrator responsible for this action. The assistant will then notify the principal who will serve as action leader for the "Reporting Team." They will be responsible for developing a written follow-up plan in each case of proven drug and alcohol abuse. Proper documentation also will be kept by the assistant principal in the standard supervision format and filed in his office. The principal and/or the assistant will use their discretion in the involvement of the appropriate staff members for the "Reporting Team" and in notifying "outside" agencies of the details surrounding the incident. As a general rule, the least said to the least number of people, the better for all concerned.

The principal or his assistant are the only officials authorized to contact the Chief of Police. The police will be notified when physical drugs are found and all available information will be supplied to them. Conferences between the administration and police department will be held as needed. The principal or his assistant have the authority to suspend for a period of five days for drug/alcohol infractions. This period of suspension is authorized by the Superintendent of Schools under the procedure of this policy.

The Teacher's Role: The teachers are perhaps in the best position to judge as to the possibility of student drug or alcohol involvement. Teachers know their students and as professionals, they know normal adolescent school behavior. The emergency situation is obvious; the gradual is more difficult and insidious. Some danger signs are:

(l) Abrupt changes in behavior patterns and personality traits.

(2) Changes in peer relationship and friends' [illegible].

(3) Changes in homework and test grades achievement.

(4) Loss of weight,drowsiness, lack of attention in class.

(5) Drug paraphernalia or unusual objects (pipes, etc.)

(6) Absenteeism.

(7) Eye and pupil changes.

(8) Loud talk and aggressive behavior or quiet, withdrawn, sullen deportment — vandalism.

In an emergency situation, escort the student to the assistant principal or have him come to your aid. If he cannot be located, take the student to the principal or nurse. Stand by to make sure the situation is stabilizing or until you are no longer needed. Ask the next door teacher or staff member to monitor your class while you tend to the emergency. Confiscate any drugs or materials which you see or find. After the situation is over, write down the facts and impressions surrounding the situation.

The Role of the School Nurse: The nurse is a vital part of the action taken and because of her medical knowledge will be called upon to make judgments as

Happily ever after

You'd be interested in knowing that Bill and Lois are now married.

That's right. Bill and Lois of Rte. 3 North fame, with names signatured in a love message on the rocks in Braintree near the blasting, have tied the knot.

There's a local tie to the story. But we won't tell it all...just a little. Seems the couple broke up last fall. And Bill, in his misery, scribed his testimony of love to Lois on Rte. 3. There it stays and it must have made a difference. A reconciliation and a marriage have transpired since.

Congratulations, Bill & Lois.

Art show at the Library

Cut paper, charcoal and watercolor are some of the techniques used by the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools' students for art that has just been hung in the children's room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The show was assembled by Jean O'Malley, elementary art teacher. Carolyn Horn, children's art exhibit chairman for the Friends of the Library, arranged the showing. The exhibit will remain on display until September.

Who goes shopping in the wee hours?

By Lois Martin

As a hobby I couldn't handle it. As a way of life I'd never get the hang of it.

But for a one time deal, I couldn't resist it. Who, I'd said to myself, who on earth goes shopping in the middle of the night? What do they buy? How do they care about cereal then? Do they doze off in their baskets over by special cheeses?

Simple is the mind that can afford such childlike wonderings. Happy the woman who can once, just once, switch her grocery shopping habit embedded deeper than a tire tread on hot asphalt...and shop in midst of the deep dark night.

PATCHES

The new Stop & Shop kept saying it was open 24 hours. And down here in our slumbering suburb it was hard to fathom lots of people organized to shop at night. But I made plans to go and set the alarm accordingly. Not since I was to leave for Florida at 4 a.m. lots of years ago was I so alert. I was afraid I'd drop off, just get myself into that cozy snooze and then refuse to put my feet on the floor till dawn.

So by 1:40 I got up, got dressed (almost seems like an option at that hour) and headed for the car. I don't like dark driveways so I bolted to the car leaving the kitchen light on to welcome me home.

And I wasn't the only one out. That surprised me. There was a gathering in the all night open Donut Tree and a few people around the gas stations. The all nighters are in Pembroke. In Marshfield we go to bed. In Pembroke they're up all night and we have to go there if we want to do that too.

Pulling in to the parking lot at Stop & Shop, I knew I should count the cars but I couldn't. My "Star Spangled Banner" had played hours before and just because my physical being was moving about did not mean the mind was.

It would have been a swell opportunity to sneak into the handicapped space but I didn't. One of the big signs, they all looked so large, said, "floral profusion."That seemed out of place. There isn't floral profusion in the dark.

There's no salad bar available at 2 a.m. Get used to that. Your cheeses aren't cut into little pieces for sampling either. So no sense to tease. The deli lacks its throbbing chicken's-almost-ready-along-with-marinated-mushrooms atmosphere. And the bakery is just plain shut down for the night. No dough rising, no doughnuts circling in hot fat, no tempting fatties hot from the oven.

In fact the 2 a.m. shopping is like a no-frills flight. You can get food, but the niceties are saved for daytime.

They're really letting you shop while they restock. That new store is so large, so fancy new, modern in the sunshine (remember that, big round ball overhead, bless your little attic white body) but for the dark circuit shopping the aisles look like a warehouse.

My mind had slowed to about four words per minute. But the crew putting prices on goods with that clicker was going at full speed. They were fresh troops, brought in for the shift. My body's shift was long over, running beyond its warranty. And I looked longingly at the check out counter where no one was lying. I thought maybe they wouldn't notice if I were to just lie down a while.

But on to tough incisive reporting. I looked at a young man reputting the tissue products. It was my job to ask him how he liked working at night. But I couldn't get my mouth open. I'd walked a long way and had yet so many aisles to go. I had purposely saved my shopping needs for that moment.

That seemed a more honest test. And certainly no one raced me for the same head of lettuce. There were other shoppers, about a dozen or so along with the crew. There were no small children, no clattering business heels, no chatting aisle blocking conversationalists. Just the buyers and the stockers.

Knorr has the prettiest soup package. In my slowed breathing moments, I gazed at the soup, avoiding falling into them, and admired the nifty packaging. Bought one. Don't remember the kind, didn't give a hoot which.

Took me forever to get out of glasswear, yarn and household oil. Suddenly, as the level within my cart rose to three-quarter point, I realized something dreadful. When I'd get home, I'd have to get the groceries in the house, the spoilables in the refrigerator or freezer. Oh, no. If I could stay awake driving back over the line to Marshfield that would be enough. Let the paperboy find me in the morning asleep in the car with the peaches.

But the night was too warm for the chicken. (Notice always the chicken, day or night, the chicken). No one was going to trundle out of bed to lug in, let alone appreciate the horn's alert.

By the time I got to the cashier I had it figured out. He packed the stuff that had to be put away in separate bags.

With my mouth I asked him to do that and while it was open I asked him how he liked working at night. He said fine, so far. It was his first night on that shift and he was "a night owl till 4 a.m."

I'm still puzzled. What does he do after 4 a.m.? What is someone who is up at 5, a day person or a night one?

I ate an apple to keep me awake until I got the groceries in. It's so dark at night. At about 3 a.m. I met my pillow nearly overcome with emotion at our reunion.

And I'm back to my old patterns. At night it's faster. And those people shopping were wide awake and pleasant. But I'm a daylighter and not even easy access to chicken'll change that.

It's happening...

President's Choice Show

Right here in our own backyard, the President's Choice Show presents primitive paintings by Jeanne L. Replogle of Cohasset.

The exhibit designed by South Shore Art Center Presdient, Ubaldo DiBenedetto, will introduce artists otherwise unknown to the Center.

The opening reception July 4, 5-7 p.m. takes place in the midst of the Art Center's 27th annual arts festival celebration. The simple awkward shapes of folk art become animated with color and activity and bring the spirit of festival indoors to the Invitational Gallery.

After studying in Illinois at Northwestern University and Chicago Art Institute Ms. Replogle lived in New York where she took part in many group exhibits. "I have been painting most of my life," states Ms. Replogle. However, the development of primitives began more recently when she was co-owner of Sea Heather Antiques, Cohasset.

Now an active member of the Cohasset Golf Club, Yacht Club and Garden Club her days are as full as her paintings. Summer South Shore Art Center Gallery hours are 10-2 p.m. Monday-Friday. For more information call 383-9548.

Arts Festival starts Friday

Guidelines for drug & alcohol policy at CHS....

to the critical emergency nature of the abuse. She will counsel and report directly to the principal, his assistant and the school physician. She will attempt to determine whether the drug use is an isolated instance or a habitual pattern. She will make the student comfortable, administer aid when appropriate and arrange for emergency transportation to the home, physician's office or hospital. She shall notify the Cohasset Fire Department Ambulance Service to stand by if necessary if the circumstances warrant. She will keep detailed records of her actions, observations and patient symptoms.

The Role of the School Physician: The physician's involvement in a drug or alcohol related situation is or can be confidential. The school physician or the attending family doctor, if preferred by the parent, will treat the student for the medical emergency. The school requests that the circumstances be reported back to the school nurse or the principal and that recommendation be given to the school as to how it can help in the rehabilitation process. If controlled or narcotic drugs are involved, it is expected that the reporting procedures required by statute will be followed.

-B-

Suggested Guidelines for Specific Drug and Alcohol Related Situations:

When a student has been referred, identified or is suspected of drug or alcohol use, it is imperative to confirm the alleged misuse and classify the involvement according to its severity as well as type of drug used. IT IS IMPORTANT IN ANY DISCUSSION OF THIS SUBJECT TO AVOID LUMPING INTO A SIMPLE STEREOTYPE ALL PROBLEMS WHICH INCLUDE THE USE OF DRUGS. FIVE TYPES OF DRUG PROBLEMS MUST BE KEPT IN MIND:

Illicit experimentation — illegal, trial use of drugs.

Misuse — Use of medication in excess of recommended dosage.

Abuse — Repeated, excessive non-prescribed use of drugs, short of dependence.

Dependence — State of physical or psychic dependence, or both, upon a drug following administration of that drug on repeated periodic or continuous basis.

Selling — Distributing.

Massachusetts law does not make distinction between sharing for immediate use and commercial profit.

(1) Experimental User:

(1) If it is suspected that student is experimenting with drugs or alcohol, a careful evaluation of the student, his progress and actions should be made to determine if the student is in fact experimenting. To determine this, the following should be considered before proper action is taken: (a) Source of information: direct knowledge, self-report, informant; (b) Acute and/or severe change in normal behavior patterns; (c) Unexplained physiological reactions; (d) Peer associations; (e) Parental and home atmosphere; (f) Change or termination of school and outside activities.

(2) Once it has been determined that the student is experimenting with drugs or alcohol, the following course of action should be taken: (a) Since illicit experimentation with non-narcotic drugs falls within the legal definition of a misdemeanor, parents will be informed as soon as possible. The best interest of the child should prevail, but should not preclude disciplinary action where warranted; (b) Careful thought should be given before any permanent record is made of these incidents as they may be isolated incidents, a record of which could follow a student for life. School staff should make students aware of the potential lifelong stigma attached to the student who becomes involved in illicit drug use or abuse problems or in problems of drunkenness or alcoholism.; (c) If counseling is indicated, it should be provided by qualified members of the staff or referred to an outside agency (d) It may be important to determine the source of the drugs used by the experimenter to differentiate between organized distribution and isolated use.

(2) Misuse: In every case where a pupil is required to take medication while in school, a parent of the pupil shall write directly to the school nurse or principal of the school apprising them of the fact that the pupil is required to take medication and describing the specific medication which the pupil is required to take. At the discretion of the principal, the parent may be required to have the physician of the pupil send confirmatory information and/or any further information about the required medication and the circumstances that indicate its use.

The principal or assistant principal of the school may require that any medication be given by the parent to be distributed by a designated member of the school staff, whose duties shall include the administration of required medication to the pupil at the designated times. In this way the pupil himself will have no justification for having medications of any kind on his own person. And, therefore, any medications found on a pupil's person will constitute a violation of the school policies and regulations. Such infraction shall be reported to the principal or his delegate.

(3) Abuse:

(1) If it is suspected that a student is abusing drugs or alcohol, a careful evaluation of the student, his progress and actions should be made to determine if the student is in fact abusing drugs. To determine this, the following should be considered before taking action.

(a) Source of information: direct knowledge, self-report, informant. (Confidentiality for an informant is discretionary); (b) Acute or chronic symptoms and signs will occur only while under the drug or alcohol, i.e., sufficient amounts still in nervous tissue; in chronic situations, long-term comparison of behavior is useful, as well as apparently permanent personality and behavioral changes; (c) Unexplained physiological change. Each school should make accessible, as in-service training to all personnel, charts or lists of drug abuse of alcoholism signs and symptoms for background information, not for diagnosis. (d) Knowledge of unusual pressure situation, i.e., academic, peer influences, social, parental or health stresses; (e) Parental and home atmosphere; (f) Change or termination of school and outside activities; (g) Comparison of student's long-range academic achievement, discipline and teacher evaluation to determine consistency of progress.

(2) Once it has been determined that the student is abusing drugs or alcohol, the following course of action should be taken: (a) When the knowledge of drug or alcohol abuse by a school member has been obtained, the administration shall be informed. An initial determination can be made by any member of the "Reporting Team": 1. Legal ramifications; 2. Parental notification; 3. Treatment recommendations; 4. Record keeping; 5. Personnel to be involved. (b) Determination of the role of the police should be considered by the principal or assistant principal as outlined; (c) Consultation with the parents about the suspected abuser and a mutual effort to help the students should be undertaken. As a normal procedure students will be excluded until a parental conference has been conducted; (d) Referral to special services director should normally be made to evaluate the entire situation. Recommendations for special education, homebound instruction and possible disciplinary action should be considered.

(4) Dependence: When a determination is made that a student is drug dependent, the "Reporting Team" will work cooperatively with the parent and community agencies to develop educational plans.

(5) Seller: Distributor: It should be noted that under Massachusetts Law counterfeit substances are to be treated the same as the actual drug (e.g. if a person sells oregano as marijuana he would be charged with the sale of marijuana.)

(1) Once it can be determined that the student is selling drugs, the following course of action is recommended: (a) Since legally a student is presumed innocent of a crime until convicted, he may be suspended for the protection of the student body on the grounds of a clear and present danger; (b) If he is subsequently found guilty, a recommendation for expulsion may be made. Students not expelled, however, may be excluded from school for a period as long as a semester; (c) If he is subsequently found innocent, suspension should be terminated and he should be returned to regular student status without prejudice; (d) During this period of exclusion, alternative instruction may be provided; (e) The Special Service Department should be contacted to determine if special education programs are indicated; (f) School authorities should encourage and assist the police to eradicate the immediate source; (g) If the student returns to school but is also abusing or dependent upon drugs, procedures should be followed as outlined in these respective sections.

SUMMARY

All staff members are involved in this effort. We must all guard against making medical-legal-moral judgments and must instead be supportive, showing caring and concern for the student's health and well being. Try to avoid over reacting. Be sure of your facts and call on fellow staff members for help when needed. All staff members are expected to immediately render needed help. Use common sense and your knowledge of the adolescent. Never leave a suspected student alone or with other students. Avoid physical contact unless absolutely necessary in your own or other's defense. Immediately after the incident, write down your recollection of the facts and your impressions.

Bells win match point (round three) of the Cohasset tennis court battle

The town lost the third round of its set on the Bell family tennis court last week.

Three judges sitting in the state appeals court backed up the decision of a superior court judge who ruled the Bells were entitled to build their tennis court on their land at the end of Gammons Road.

The Bells spent time over the holiday weekend playing on the green clay court they had constructed last year, after they won their case in superior court last year.

Peter and Marilyn Mazza, the neighbors who started the controversy over the court — which is across the street from their house — were unavailable. Their old phone number is now connected to a law office and their house is on the market for close to half a million dollars.

Sources say the Mazza's are in Connecticut.

A case brought by the Bells against the town in federal court for violating their civil rights is still pending.

Should the Bells win their case, the town will have to pay the legal bills incurred by the Bells. The point of that case is that the town has not tried to apply the same rules to anyone else who wants to build a tennis court.

"The special characteristics of the Bells' lot make application of the bylaw to it somewhat difficult," said Judge Amy Cutter in the written decision handed down June 30.

The Bells own about two acres of land. It is shaped irregularly.

The panel, consisting of Judge Cutter, Judge Christopher Armstrong and Judge Raya Deben, found clearly for the Bells. There was even an inference in the decision that if the regulations were as the other side believed, they might be unconstitutional.

"The fact is that the restrictions are ambiguous and uncertain as applied to an unusual parcel of land with characteristics for which the bylaw makes imperfect provision," Judge Cutter said.

"If this type of residential accessory use ordinarily regarded as reasonable is to be prohibited, it should be done in clear, precise language which fully apprises the landowner of a prohibition not found to exist by the chairman of the zoning board, the trial judge or this courts."

Selectmen, Thompson to meet on fire chief

Selectmen were to meet with John Thompson, chairman of the fire chief search committee, tonight, to review the three finalists for the fire chief's job.

Because two local applicants were not included as finalists, many residents and firefighters have criticized the committee's choice. Selectmen are required to choose one of the three finalists to fill the vacancy of Charles Piepenbrink who retired in March.

Cohasset Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln and Captain James Gurry were among eight applicants interviewed in the screening process. Twenty people applied for the fire chief position.

Last week Town Counsel Blake Thaxter ruled that a special town meeting vote could override the work of the fire chief search committee which was established in 1981 to determine the "three most highly qualified applicants."

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said she was disappointed that Roger Lincoln was not among the three finalists. McArthur said she would not object to a special town meeting being held, but said she personally would not go that route. She accepts the task as completed by the search committee.

A petition requesting a special town meeting requires signatures from 200 Cohasset voters.

Those chosen as finalists were: Victor Cail of Reading, Martin Dooley of East Hartford, Connecticut and Robert Winston of Duxbury.

Hearing scheduled on charges against Ainslie

Selectmen will hold a hearing Tuesday on charges against Permanent Intermittent Patrolman Lawrence Ainslie, Jr. The hearing is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. in Town Hall.

Four charges have been brought against Patrolman Ainslie and it is expected the hearing will be held in private, a closed session having been sought by Police Chief John DeBassio and Ainslie's attorney, Mark Fitzsimmons.

Selectmen could decide to keep, dismiss or suspend Patrolman Ainslie once the hearing is held. Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie, the patrolman's uncle, said he would not participate in the hearing.

Along with the four charges which were written by DeBassio, Patrolman Ainslie was given a token suspension of five days which began last Wednesday. DeBassio cited the four charges as reasons for the suspension.

The charges are: falsification of an official police department document, neglect of duty (incompetence and general inefficiency), conduct unbecoming a police officer and unlawful and unnecessary exercise of authority.

Under each charge DeBassio noted specific times and places where the alleged incidents took place.

DeBassio charged Patrolman Ainslie to have: "Knowingly and deliberately falsified and withheld relevant information on a Cohasset Police Department employment application before a Notary Public on October 21, 1980."

In reference to neglect of duty, DeBassio stated Patrolman Ainslie failed to report information while assigned to a police stake-out, causing protracted deployment of police resources and the delayed capture of one suspect and the escape of a second suspect at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant in December 1980.

On three occasions, DeBassio said Ainslie threatened and attempted to intimidate and coerce members of the general public while assigned to details. DeBassio supplied the dates and places as: Hugo's Lighthouse, August 22, 1979; Kimball's

South Shore Arts Festival succeeds

By Patricia Desmond

There were so many people at the South Shore Arts Festival this weekend that the 3,000 programs disappeared long before the show tent went down.

So you would have to say the show was a success.

Jim Ann Howard won first prize in the painting category for an interesting piece in earth tones that was a surrealistic portrait of brushes. It's called "Holygraph."

The best of show was a large abstract in bright colors by Pamel Hoss.

One of Syma's sea nymph plates won a special award.

The money wasn't counted from the festival by the time the Mariner went to press. But Margaret Dillon, director of the center, said the people there are becoming very money conscious now that they are striving to buy a new home.

Next year she hopes to expand the festival further, adding food to the other offerings.

Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman, festival chairman, has already volunteered to spend the winter making signs for the next chairman.

This year crafters set up their wares on the Common next to the large festival tent.

There were more side attractions offered this year, or so it seemed. There was face painting for the young at heart.

Blankenship, whose cartoons appear in the Mariner as well as other publications, was done credibly well by Clement Micarelli, Mary Good and Ruth Ferrar.

What they should have done was sketch his head like one of those beak people that always appear in cartoons by Blankenship.

The South Shore Conservatory failed to show up with an ensemble. Roger Shaffer's sing along was probably more fun anyway.

T assessment of $103,729 is now found money

Last week the Legislature voted to return $4.4 million to MBTA communities that receive no service. Cohasset will have $103,729 returned, and seven other south suburban communities will receive similar rebates. Scituate, for example, is getting a rebate of $260,099.

Town Accountant Bill Signorelli is expecting the refund to arrive soon. He said the money will be put into the town's general fund and would probably be used toward deficient budgets once approval was given by a special town meeting vote.

The town can certainly use the one-time rebate, said Signorelli, "This will be a big help in funding deficiencies." One deficient budget that heads the top of the list for fiscal year 1983 is the town's share of Blue Cross-Blue Shield health insurance for town employees which increased by 50 percent this year.

Cohasset's week...

Guilty verdict in murder case

A Dedham Superior Court jury last week pronounced William McDermott, 17, of Marshfield, guilty of first-degree murder in the shooting death of the Golf Club manager last November.

After seven hours of deliberating, the jury decided that McDermott killed Robert Kemp, 38, of Pembroke. McDermott was accused of shooting Kemp 11 times in the kitchen of the Golf Club, Nov. 20.

The prosecution claimed that the motive was robbery. McDermott was found innocent of armed robbery. The verdict was reached Thursday.

The first-degree murder charge carries a mandatory life sentence in prison. McDermott, who was a maintenance worker at the golf club, will be held in Dedham jail until his July 26 sentencing.

Board of health statement

A recent statement from the Cohasset Board of Health said: "Disposal Works Construction Permits issued after Jan. 15, 1981, that have expired, will require that plans comply with rules and regulations in effect at the time of permit application."

The notice should read: "Permits issued after Jan. 15, 1981, that have expired, will require that plans comply with the rules and regulations in effect at the time of request for permit renewal."

Selectmen appoint

Selectmen made the following appointments last week.

Lot Bates, Jr., sealer of weights and measures; Stephen Wigmore, superintendent of wires; Noel Ripley, keeper of town clock; Lot Bates, Jr., measurer of wood and bark; Barbara Elliott, constable; James Litchfield, inspector of public buildings; Harry Ritter, harbormaster; Clifford Dickson, William Stone and John Hubbard, assistant harbormasters; Bernard Salvador, Jr., fish warden; David Wadsworth, town archivist; Lawrence Mitchell and Robert Leonard, gas inspectors; Kenneth Sargent, custodian of town hall; Gilbert Tower, honorary town engineer; Peter Laugelle, tree and park superintendent; Robert Maki, Peter O'Loughlin, Jr., and Merle Brown, Conservation Commission.

Also, Alice Daunt and George Fellows, council for the aging; Betty Enders, Roger Leonard, David Wadsworth, Historical Commission; Robert Davenport, John Rhodes, III, John Souther, Cemetery Space committee; Eleanor Cooney, Arthur Pompeo and Ernest Stevens to the disposal area study committee.

Hearing on Rhodes

Selectmen will hold a hearing Thursday at town hall to hear Police Chief DeBassio's charges against Police Sgt. John Rhodes.

DeBassio suspended Rhodes for five days without pay because of an incident where the mother of a 16 year-old claimed Rhodes had an affair with her daughter.

DeBassio has brought two charges against Rhodes: 1) "That during the period from April 4, 1981 until March 19, 1982, you contributed to the waywardness of a child in violation of Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 119, Section 63. 2) That during that period of time you were guilty of neglect of duty."

If one or both charges are substantiated, Rhodes could be suspended from active duty for more than five days or discharged from the police department.

Criminal charges were filed in Quincy District Court by the mother. They were dismissed May 27. The mother recently filed charges with DeBassio, who conducted an administrative hearing last week.

Attorney John F. Ridge will represent Rhodes at the hearing next week. It is expected that the hearing will be held in closed session.

Taxes & access

"If a person pays property taxes in Cohasset, they should have access to the town facilities," said selectman Mary Jane McArthur at last week's meeting. She was refering to a Scituate man who was denied a beach parking sticker recently because he did not live in town.

The Scituate resident works for the harbormaster and needs a sticker to park in the Government Island Lot. Selectmen's discussion focused on allowing all Cohasset property owners to be issued beach stickers, however the board did not make a decision.

Firefighter resigns

Firefighter James Sheerin resigned from the Cohasset fire department last week. His resignation became effective July 1.

Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln submitted notice of the resignation to the selectmen's office on Tuesday. Sheerin's reasons for leaving the force are expected to be announced by selectmen tonight at their meeting.

The Hingham Institution's MAGIC MONEY CERTIFICATE It May Be The BEST INVESTMENT In AMERICA Today!

Until today, there has been no investment offered by H.I.S. that gives you absolute security, high yield, and the chance to get at your money when you need it sinply by writing a check.*

Today Hingham Institution for Savings has made this investment a reality. Our new Magic Money Certificates are a major financial breakthrough because you are guaranteed all three of the basic elements of smart investing — security, liquidity and high yield. With $10,000.00 or more to invest, you can begin taking advantage of this new financial opportunity right now. Compare new Magic Money Certificates with other investments, and we think you will agree that Magic Money Certificates are the best investment you can make today.

MAGIC MONEY CERTIFICATES vs REGULAR SIX-MONTH CERTIFICATES

When you buy a regular six-month certificate, the kind offered by many banks today, your money is virtually tied up for six months. If you want to use part or all of the money, you pay a severe penalty that wipes out much of the potential earning power of that certificate. Magic Money Certificates actually allow you to use the money you have invested without being penalized simply by writing a check.* In short — you get all the guaranteed security of a regular six-month certificate (issued by Hingham Institution for Savings and insured by the Deposit Insurance Fund) and you also get the freedom to use your money if the need arises.

MAGIC MONEY CERTIFICATES vs MONEY MARKET FUNDS

Money Market Funds have received a lot of publicity over the past year or so. But no matter what you may have heart — Money Market Funds are an uninsured investment. Their rates fluctuate and your return can go down. There are also fees invovled in the purchase of some Money Market Funds. Magic Money Certificates involve no fees to purchase.

*Pre-authorized collateral loan agreement allows checks to be written against the certificate at an annual percentage rate of 1½% per year more than the certificate interest rate. If you decide NOT to exercise the check-writing privilege, and instead withdraw any part of the principal prior to maturity, Federal Regulations require a substantial penalty.

A success story from the Art Center

A very special part of the awards ceremony at the South Shore Art Center on July 1 was the awarding of the first Certificate of Merit for successful completion of the Art Center Certificate program to Marylouise Slotnick of South Main Street, Cohasset.

The Certificate Program was begun in 1979 and is a course of structured study in Drawing and Painting. Successful candidates must complete eight basic programs in beginning and advanced drawing and painting (including anatomy), one course in Art History, one course in three-dimensional study, and in addition must complete six terms of elective painting, drawing or photography study.

Many of the basic courses are college credit courses through Massachusetts College of Art Continuing Education program with which the South Shore Art Center is affiliated. Students are allowed up to four years to complete the certificate requirements.

Mrs. Slotnick attended Smith College and received her BA in French from Southern Methodist University; she received her MA from George Washington University and also attended the National Law Center of George Washington University. Her major interests are art, theater and music.

She holds a Massachusetts Teachers Certificate and has taught at the University of Toledo. She has held a variety of positions including librarian, secretary and museum aide.

She summarizes her present accomplishments by saying, "My biography shows that I'm a jack of all trades — but in everything that I do I consider myself acting as an artist. With a number of jobs and a number of children and a constantly competiting list of priorities, I doubt if I will ever be able to confine myself to achieving that kind of perfection of expression that most people long for. I do feel that I'm working toward painting more in oils and developing my own style, and that is exciting."

Her work has been exhibited at Cambridge Art Association, Cranberry World Museum, South Shore Art Center and most recently at a one-woman show at the Hingham Public Library this June. Examples of her certificate work are on display at the Center in July.

Ainslie hearing...

Motel, August 10, 1980; and the South Shore Music Circus, July 14, 1980.

DeBassio also charged Patrolman Ainslie with soliciting special privileges and using his position as a police officer for personal gain and private advantage.

If selectmen voted to dismiss Patrolman Ainslie following the hearing, Ainslie could appeal the decision to the Civil Service Commission. If the Civil Service Commission sided with selectmen, then Patrolman Ainslie has the right to appeal in district court and so on, up through the Massachusetts court system.

Last month selectmen voted 2-0 that Patrolman Ainslie should be assigned to paid details on an equal basis. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur was absent from that voting session.

DeBassio maintained Ainslie was unsuitable for police work. The Chief questioned town counsel to determine if he was obligated to comply with the board's wishes.

Because selectmen are the appointing authority for the police department, it was decided the board would act on the matter once a hearing was held.

South Shore Arts Festival succeeds...

One of the paintings that gathered a strong following throughout the festival was a surrealistic canvas done by Dedham artist Michael St. George.

Had there been a popular ballot for the festival, it seems the St. George painting would have drawn the vote.

The canvas took him two years to complete, St. George explained as he sat on the grass by the show, watching people gather at his art work.

It began as a stagecoach robbery and grew in detail until it became: "Statues in Purgatory: the American Story."

St. George lives by doing sidewalk painting in Dedham. He survives by searching for the truth and painting it.

The awards

Ubaldo diBenedetto, President of the South Shore Art Center, presented the awards for the South Shore Arts Festival at a festive champagne preview held at the Center Thursday evening, July 1. President diBenedetto praised the quality of the work in the Festival and complimented Festival Chairman Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman and her hard-working volunteers for a job well done.

The Best in Show award, donated by Gunn Associates, was given to Pamela Holl of Quincy for her acrylic and charcoal "Plants," a strong, dynamic work that dominates and intrigues the viewer. First prize in painting was awarded to Jim Ann Howard of Scituate for her oil "Holygraph." This award was donated by the Cohasset Savings Bank for Howard's whimsical and provocative fine-line rendering of brushes. Honorable mention in painting went to Carlton F. Barron, Jr., of Scituate for his traditional still life "Captain's Table" and also to Eileen McDonough of Hull for her charming primitive "Road in the Berkshires."

Michael Compton of Medford was awarded first prize in Watercolor for his crisp urban landscape "Clouds." First prize in drawing went to Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman for her celebration of Motherhood, "Waiting for Daisy," done in conte pencil. The graphics first prize, donated by Angelo's, was given to Wilfred Loring of Hingham for his aquatint "Existing Conditions," a city landscape with a striking use of shadows. Although no first prize was awarded in the sculpture category, the jurors gave honorable mention to Bill Bell of Plymouth for his humorous and unusual clay teapots titled "A Mad Tea Party Pair."

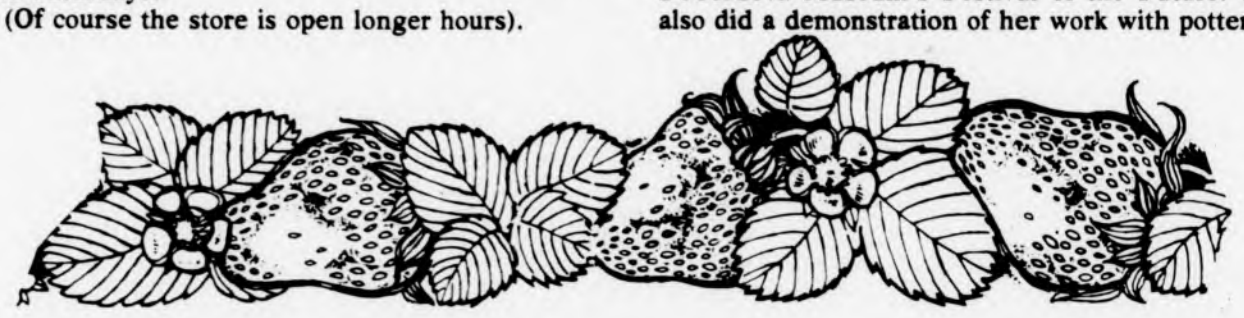
The Juried Photography show is one of the largest in recent years with 54 entries accepted. The first prize was split by the jurors with the award in black and white going to Gail Bryan of Cohasset for her hauntingly powerful "Sexuality Series #10: Brazil 1982" and the award in color going to James Wojno of Boston for his muted city-scene "La Boca, Buenos Aires." Two first Honorable Mentions were awarded: to Joan Hacker of Duxbury for "Laura", and to Peggy Roth of Cohasset for her soft-focus landscape "Mystical Serenity." Honorable Mentions were awarded to John Diauto, Pembroke, for "Harvest Moon"; J. Droege, Plymouth, for "Moon-Frost"; Joan Hacker, Duxbury, "Waiting"; Neil Hammer, Northampton, for two untitled photographs; and to Julie White, Minot, for "Man in the Tuilieries."

Awards for the Members' Show were donated by Quincy Cooperative Bank for four prizes of equal value. They were awarded to Jim Ann Howard, Scituate, for her mixed media "French Postcard"; to Thompson Hughes, Cohasset, for "Rice Island, March 15, 1981," in oil; to Syma, Hingham, for her fantasy clay dish "Mermaid #1, A dish to feed a water goddess"; and to Ronald Wilson, Bridgewater, for his photograph "Oceanside Cliffs." For the first time at Festival Honorable Mentions were awarded in the Members' Show by jurors Virginia Avery of Marshfield and Chris Rifkin. They were given to Eleanor Andrews, Squantum, for her watercolor "Boston"; Joanna Hudgens, Weymouth, for her mixed media "On the Rocks"; John Krall, Dorchester, for his photograph "Pilings"; and to Julie White, Cohasset, for her photograph "Charles A. Mahoney, Artist." The Members' Show is open to members of the South Shore Art Center only while all the juried shows in the Festival are open to all interested in submitting.

This 27th Annual Festival with its variety of events was previewed on WBZ-TV and drew a crowd of several thousand to view the exhibits and participate in activities.

Syma is decorating at Hancock Paint

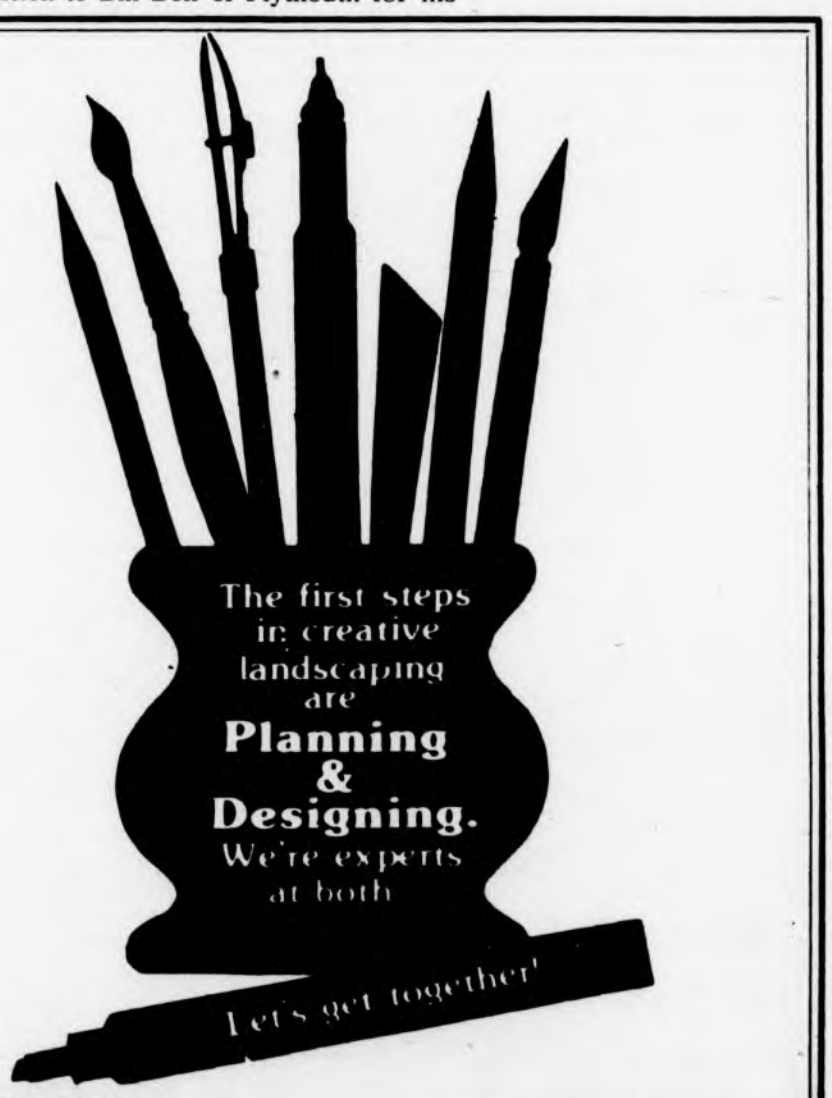
Syma, who sculpts magical bells, sea nymphs and precious boxes at her studio in Hingham, is working three days a week at Hancock Paint as the store's decorator.



She's available to help match colors, wallpapers, etc. from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

(Of course the store is open longer hours).

The store has another decorator working on Wednesdays and Fridays.



Syma said she wishes people would bring a snapshot of the room when they come. But she does and will work with bits of materials, even threads.

Syma's work was displayed recently at the DeCordova Museum's Festival of the Future. She also did a demonstration of her work with pottery.

The seagull problem...

The water department and health board are concerned that seagulls have been attracted to this rock in Lily Pond. The latest word is that things seem to be improving — the gull count is lower. The water department and health board will continue to monitor the fecal and bacteria counts in the town's water supply. On several occasions water department workers have taken a row boat out to paint the rock with dry chlorine to kill bacteria from the seagull droppings.

The living room has been abandoned by many families in favor of a family room. However, it is usually the living room that tends to receive the most concerted decorating effort of any room in the home. Its furniture is, typically, the most expensive as well. These facts should not exclude its use and enjoyment. To the contrary, the room should be lived in. Forbidding, hushed living rooms should be warmed with favorite objects. Textured fabrics and comfortable looking furniture should invite family and guests into the room for days and evenings of conversation and relaxation.

You can have an attractive living room decorated exactly the way you want but if people are afraid they might make a mess then its attractiveness will fade fast. A room can look lived in and still be attractive. We're BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE, and when you have a decorating problem let us help you. We're easy to find in No.Scituate at 763 Country Way, or call 545-3624. We're here Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs-Fri 8-8:30, Sat 7-5 and we know you'll enjoy the many services we have to offer. The focal point of a living room can often center on the warmth of the fireplace.

☐Pamella Gunville has been named to the Dean's List for the spring semester at the University of Southern Maine.

☐The following Cohasset students received degrees from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst this Spring.

☐Susan McNulty, daughter of Dennis and Doris McNulty of 80 Nichols Road recently received a bachelor of arts degree at the 116th Bates College commencement.

A religion major, McNulty was a dean's list student and a member of the Outing Club and the Campus Association, recreation and service organizations.

She is a 1977 graduate of Cohasset High School and also studied at Boston College.

☐Patrick Madigna, son of Richard and Ann Madigan of 25 Hobart Lane, recently received a bachelor of science degree at the 116th Bates College commencement.

A physics major, Madigan was a dean's list student and a member of the Outing Club and Campus Association, recreation and service organizations.

He is a 1979 graduate of Lawrenceville Academy in Lawrenceville, New Jersey.

☐There was a veritable smorgasbord of activities available to residents this weekend, and the beautiful weather made the special holiday events even more enjoyable.

Art enthusiasts and festival goers came from far and wide for the South Shore Arts Festival on the common. The planning and preparation that made the event such a success was largely due to chairman Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman and her committee. Especially popular were the many activities planned for both adults and children throughout the festival.

☐On Sunday, many residents about town started off with the festival stopping for the traditional carillon concert by Earl Chamberlain (his rendition of Shenandoah was a special favorite) and then, "Uplifted" beyond the very mundane task of cooking dinner, capped the whole day off with the Greek Taverna. The baklava, as always, was in much demand and Theodora Lelecas will tell you that one of the secrets to the success in preparing this pastry is in the timing of the filling for which she makes her own sauce.

☐Although we saw only one entry from Cohasset in the Hingham July 4th parade, many residents could be spotted on various floats. Peter O'Louglin looked very elegant in the Hingham Civic's float, Camelot, which won Best of All Floats.

Lisa Fichtner was a member of a very talented Young at Heart Theatre, which won Most Beautiful. Heather Doherty, Becky McCarthy, Laura Kuhn, Julianne Ayers and Carole Wallace, all members of Claire Berman's Jazz workshop at the Community Center performed dance routines to popular broadway musicals.

The float, itself, was the creative endeavor of Nancy and John Kinchla, aided by Lee and Leigh Jenkins, with Marie McCarthy as special consultant, and everyone was very pleased with the beautiful white ribbon it won for Third Place.

☐Many of us are looking forward to the opening of the new bake shop on Elm Street and Larry Fone of Cookworks already has his order in for hamburger rolls and blueberry pies ("the deeper dished the better.")

☐Another very positive addition to the village area is Village Fabrics which has now moved from Cushing Plaza to its new location next to Classics. Their many attractive materials and other sewing notions look especially attractive in the large window of their new shop.

☐This will be my last column for Around Town. It certainly has been fun writing about "all the news that's fit to print," and especially hearing about what wasn't.

And I'm sure that if there is any way to include the latter, my successor, Tanna Kasperowicz, will do just that. She can be reached at 383-9115.

The 4th

If we had our way the Fourth of July would not be transferable to the fifth or any other Monday that accommodates the calendar friggers and their obsessive desire for synchronous, meaningless three-day weekends.

The profundity of the above sentiment was brought home to us on Sunday as we jogged around town and later motored off to a fireworks display in Hyannis. What struck us for the umpteenth time, both in our own home town and in President Kennedy's, was how the spirit of the Fourth is totally lost on a great many fellow citizens.

Their ignorance they show by their "ghetto-blaster" radios, their "funny cigarettes" blowing our way, and above all by their ubiquitous, execrable littering.

No one ever said the Fourth shouldn't be fun, but we must wonder how any American worthy of the name can partake of a beauteous July day anywhere in this land and then leave his garbage behind.

So for starters (if you follow our reasoning), we conclude the Fourth ought to be celebrated on the fourth. Perhaps, then, if folks were inconvenienced to the extent of having their day-off in the middle of the week, it might be more likely to dawn on them that the Fourth exists for a reason, and that the trashing of America is not the appropriate way to celebrate America's birthday.

Oh well, George Washington's armies probably had a few slobs too. But still, of all the stupid, thoughtless things our brothers and sisters are capable of, littering ticks us off the most. And on the Fourth of July it seems all the more wicked...a simultaneous insult to the ancestors who bequeathed us the land and to the descendents who will inherit it.

Littering says, "I don't care," and "I don't care" will put this country into decline faster and more surely than the Republicans or the Democrats, or even the Bolcheviks.

America was built not so much by historiated characters as by millions of souls now mute to history whose magnificent life statement was a collective: "I care!"

They cared about their children, they cared about their communities, and they counted themselves lucky to be Americans. Our wealth has more to do with their care than with the size of America, its natural resources, or its often magnificent leadership.

We of this sometimes perplexed generation now have the power to pass on what we have inherited, or to throw it away. And littering — the careless way we throw little things away — sometimes seems to give the mental message that Americans are ready to throw bigger things away.

That is why, the downright discourtesy of it aside, littering gets us so steamed...

And scared.

More wisdom for Zodiophiles

By Claire McDonough

When you receive this issue of the Mariner the total eclipse of Tuesday, July 6 will be history.

However, I was sure all you Zodiophiles out there would want to know if the shadowy phenomenon would have any long-term effects, so I bopped over to Madam Zolar's chic little ashram and asked her if there is cause for concern. Well, my stars, is there ever! Just check your own sun sign and pay close attention. I mean, if no one tells you how awful things are, you might not realize you're miserable and go on having a wonderful time, and we can't have that, can we?

ARIES (March 21 - April 20): If there's one thing you can't Stand it's being eclipsed. You will fret because the social scene is so dull and everyone is paying attention to a Cappricorn. Don't worry. There is a dazzling surprise in store for you on the 21st, when a gentle Pisces becomes fed up with your domineering ways and punches you out.

TAURUS (April 21 - May 21): Your persistent attempts to succeed in the face of overwhelming odds will finally bear fruit. The United States Postal Service will learn that you are attempting to sell dehydrated water through the mails and you will be indicted for fraud.

GEMINI (May 22 - June 21): Your dual nature will be in evidence this month. As you know, the Gemini twins are Castor and Pollux, but neither of them will be able to evade the process server. You will regret it if you did not pay your attorney the last time he defended you.

CANCER (June 22 - July 23): You are so shy and retiring by nature that during an eclipse people may not see you at all. Try to avoid dimly lit rooms and do not attempt to take a seat on the MBTA. If you do, a large Sagittarian will fail to notice that you are there and will sit on top of you.

LEO (July 24 - August 23): Like your fellow fire sign, Aries, you do not enjoy life in the shadows. This is indeed unfortunate as the eclipse tends to bank your fires. The news is not all bad, however, as your chances for beating the arson rap look pretty bright.

VIRGO (August 24 - September 23): This month will be particularly difficult for Virgos. Your love of order and detail will be frustrated as the natives of all other signs become confused and spend their time drinking herbal teas and bumping into walls. Shrewd Virgos will invest in herbal tea stock.

LIBRA (September 24 - October 23): The lunar eclipse causes people to become confused, have difficulty making up their minds, and walk around with dazed expressions on their faces. In your case there will not be any discernable difference.

SCORPIO (October 24 - November 22): Yours is one of the few signs that benefits from the eclipse. Because of your love for secrecy, darkness and intrigue you are in your element. Do not give your correct name. The effects of the eclipse do not last forever.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 - December 21): A fire sign like Aries and Leo, you are not comfortable during an eclipse. If you ride the "T" be careful not to sit on a Cancer.

CAPRICORN (December 22 - January 20): All eyes will be on you in both social and business situations. Try to pass the blame onto someone else. Virgos are particularly vulnerable.

AQUARIUS (January 21 - February 19): The effects of the eclipse will cast a pall on your zany, fun-loving nature. This will come as a great relief to your friends and associates who were beginning to entertain thoughts of forcible restraint.

PISCES (February 20 - March 20): It's an ill eclipse that bodes no good, isn't it? For a change you Pisces natives will stop swimming upstream. You will finally assert yourself and punch out an Aries. Congratulations!

NOTE TO ALL SIGNS: No one is more confused or befuddled by an eclipse than a sun sign astrologer who writes for newspapers. Ignore anything she may tell you. In astrological parlance, it's a lot of Taurus.

Selectmen's briefs...

YOCUM — DOG OFFICER

Patrolman Richard Yocum was appointed dog officer by selectmen last week. He held the position once before and replaces Joanne Cogill who resigned in May.

In a written opinion to selectmen, Town Counsel Blake Thaxter said there was no problem with Yocum serving as a policeman and dog officer.

FARMER'S MARKET APPROVED

Selectmen approved a request from the Community Garden Club to hold their annual Farmer's Market at Town Hall October 6. The Club will also use Town Hall on October 5 for setting up the market.

TWO DOGS RESTRAINED

After a public hearing last week selectmen ordered the continued restrainment of two golden retrievers. The dogs belong to Dean Harrold of 14 Locust Road, who did not attend the hearing.

Neighbors told selectmen the dogs were not mean — just a nuisance. Residents said the dogs had damaged their properties. Last month selectmen ordered a tempoary restrainment of the dogs and residents said there had been a marked improvement.

NEWS ITEM — Cohasset: Anger greets search committee elimination of local firefighters for fire chief job. Disapproval expressed by selectmen, residents and firefighters at meeting. 'We wouldn't have put Roger Lincoln in as acting fire chief if he wasn't qualified,' says selectman chairman.

"...Hold it...here's another applicant for fire chief, with not a little hands on fire experience. Another plus, he's not a local...!!

A report from the fire chief search committee

(Here is a report to Selectmen from the Fire Chief Search Committee. Ed.)

On January 5, 1982, the signatorees of this letter were appointed as the Members of the Fire Chief's Search Committee. In accepting appointment to the Committee and in the discharge of our responsibilities thereunder we have been guided by the vote of the Town Meeting taken on April 6, 1982 wherein the following was passed constituting a part of Section 3 of Article 30:

> ...a committee of five (5) citizens shall be appointed by the Moderator, the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen and the Chairman of the Advisory Committee to be known as the Fire Chief Search Committee. Such Committee shall determine job qualifications, arrange for testing where appropriate and advertise the position in at least one locally circulated and one major Boston newspaper. Thereafter, they shall conduct screening interviews as they deem necessary giving due consideration to qualified members of the existing department. The Committee shall then submit the names of the three (3) most highly qualified applicants to the Board of Selectmen from which it shall select one.

The Committee proceeded to organize itself and to outline how this important task was to be accomplished. We were aided by a number of local and national professional organizations within the Fire Services. In addition, we consulted with retired Chief Charles Piepenbrink and conducted a public hearing at the Town Hall on March 18, 1982. The constructive suggestions received from these various sources were of great assistance. A substantial amount of effort was expended in developing an appreciation of the qualifications required for candidates and the translation of those qualifications into a definitive application form which would provide an equal opportunity to all candidates to express themselves as to their qualifications and their own individual views of the role of the Fire Chief in the Town of Cohasset. A copy of the application and an outline of the Committee's approach to its task were forwarded to the Board and were discussed at our meeting with you on March 3, 1982. That meeting was particularly helpful to the Committee.

Advertisements were placed in the Boston Globe and the Patriot Ledger commencing on March 23, 1982, which resulted in requests for applications from 38 individuals. Twenty of that number submitted completed applications prior to April 30, 1982.

After detailed analysis of each application by each member of the Committee, invitations for a personal interview were extended to eight applicants. In the process of assessing the applications and the interviewing of selected applicants, the Committee was concerned with the following characteristics:

1. Experience:
   A. Fire fighting
   B. Administrative, including budget and fiscal
   C. Supervisory
   D. Training of personnel
   E. Union and non-union bargaining
   F. Equipment
   G. Nature and size of community
   H. Volunteer, call and permanent personnel
   I. Ambulance and rescue
2. Education and Training
   A. Level and scope of general education
   B. Fire and medical related education and training
3. Personal Attributes:
   A. General character and attitude
   B. Demonstrated leadership capabilities
   C. Dedication to profession
   D. General health and appearance
   E. Ability to communicate
   F. Philosophical approach to life and property protection
   G. Community participation
   H. Motive for move

It became obvious to us during the interview process that a number of qualified individuals had indicated their interest in the position. The most difficult challenge to the Committee was to follow the clear mandate of the Town vote which required that we identify for your further action the "three (3) most highly qualified applicants." We have come to that conclusion and hereby forward for your consideration the following three individuals who are listed in alphabetical order:

1. Victor H. Cail, Reading, Mass.
2. Martin W. Dooley, East Hartford, Conn.
3. Robert Winston, Duxbury, Mass.

To assist the Board in your selection you will find enclosed a copy of the application submitted by each of the individuals along with any letters of reference or other pertinent materials that may have been received.

In regard to the three final applicants the Board should be aware of the fact that the Committee has confirmed the information on the applications to the extent of the individual's current employer and listed references. The Committee has also undertaken the verification of the individual's highest degree of educational attainment. The Committee has taken notice of the applicant's proclaimed health status as it appears on page 2 of the application but has not made a determination as to the individual's actual physical fitness to perform in the position.

The Board should note carefully the responses of the applicants to a number of questions that are part of the enclosed documents. We consider this important since there were differences of opinion among the applicants on issues which are relevant to your ultimate decision. More specifically, we would suggest that the Board during the interview should explore with each of the applicants their views relative to the utilization of call or volunteer firemen, their views on fire prevention, utilization of personnel in regard to both fire and ambulance services, acceptable levels of risk, and a number of other matters which fall within the policy prerogatives of the Board of Selectmen.

In closing we would like to assure the Board of Selectmen of our individual and collective sensitivity for due consideration for applications from members of our own Fire Department and other Cohasset residents. Our final recommendations should not be interpreted as adverse to any individual within the Department or to the Department itself. As previously stated, the process itself developed a number of qualified individuals which then left to the Committee the mandate of recommending the three most highly qualified.

The Committee would like to express its appreciation to Arthur Clark, Margaret Ramsey and Janet Ditmar for their logistical assistance.

Respectfully submitted,

Black Rock Beach isn't forgotten in Ohio

To the Editor:

Though the Fox's have been transplanted to Chagrin Falls, Ohio, I just thought we would let you know that Cohasset still has a very special place in our hearts.

This is a poem that my sister Peg (a little modest) wrote while in school at the University of Montana — Missoula. If you find it worth printing, please do so! (We still subscribe to the Mariner.)

BLACK ROCK BEACH

The ocean, ever changing —
Calm, stormy, violent, peaceful,
Green, blue, grey, black —
Washing in, washing out,
The waves, lapping the shoreline,
Round the rocks smooth.
Seagulls fight against the wind
Then turn,
To flow with the force back to shore.

There is an island, just offshore,
With a house built as if it was part of the rock itself.
Braving storm upon storm,
Surviving.

Dive and see the life among the "Black Rocks"
Which lace the shore.
Glistening gold-brown mottled colored rocks
Which cause such treachery
To ships as they cross to reach port.

Many an afternoon I escaped
The world at Rocky Beach,
Enjoying the moods of the ocean,
From calm blue seas
To the violent rages of a Nor'easter.
I think that's when I liked it best,
Watching Storms,
Standing on the seawall,

Letters

Straight bodies,
Leaning out,
To fall in the hands of the wind
If you lean just right
The wind will support you,
Spattering your face with a cold spray of salt water.

Following storms,
We scavenged the beach
For trinkets from the sea —
Shells, wampum, seaglass,
Buoys, lobster pots, driftwood.
The seawall —
Broken from the force of the waves,
Spilling rocks onto the road
To remind us that we cannot wall her in —
Is soon rebuilt.

There is a certain solitude about Black Rock Beach —
No parking lot, no sand, no venders, no lifeguards.
One comes prepared to face
The ocean on her own terms.

Sit and smell the salt and seaweed in the air.
Listen to the rhythm of the waves
Beating against the rocky shore
Like the heart of our Earth,
As if reminding us of our life source.

Its dynamic beauty
Renews my faith,
Cleanses my soul.

Oh! to be home again.

Cohasset deserves the best fire chief

To the Editor:

Cohasset deserves the best Fire Chief that we can find. That is why Town Meeting authorized the appointment of a committee to screen applicants and to submit the names of the three best qualified candidates to the board of selectmen for their appointment.

The committee did a thorough, painstaking job. Among the three dozen applicants were two from the Cohasset department. These men were interviewed along with the other top candidates and the committee's judgment was that they were not as highly qualified as the three that they have nominated.

While we would all like to see one of our own men get the post, we are none of us in a position to measure their qualifications against the three men we have never seen. We have to rely on the committee's judgment. That is why we authorized their appoinment. It would not be in the best interest of the town to do otherwise.

Let us support the committee in its thoughtfully taken decision.

Cohasset's Bob Blossom to play with Italian orchestra

By Donna Cogliano

Bob Blossom has made a commitment to music. And that commitment has brought him to Italy this summer for what will surely be one of the most memorable learning experiences of his life.

Blossom, a 1978 graduate of Cohasset High School, is a member of the prestigious orchestra for the Spoleto Festival in Spoleto, Italy.

Spoleto is about 60 miles northeast of Rome. At the seven week Spoleto Festival, Blossom is a trombone player in the orchestra which will produce more than 100 performances during that time. The festival is an annual affair entitled, "Festival dei Due Mondi" (Festival of Two Worlds.)

More than 900 young Americans auditioned for the orchestra this year, in trials which were held in seven United States cities. This is the 25th annual Spoleto Festival which was founded by Gian-Carlo Menotti, an Italian contemporary composer. At the closing of the festival in late July, the orchestra will perform a special concert in Venice.

Besides giving symphonic concerts the orchestra accompanies various fine arts events at the festival such as, opera, classical ballet, modern dance and musical plays. Orchestra members are housed with Italian families. Blossom receives a weekly salary to pay for food and expenses.

In addition to performances he is required to practice six hours each day with the orchestra. He is given one day off each week.

Blossom, 22, is a senior at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston and his specialty is the trombone. He is the son of Fiammetta Blossom of Station St., Hingham, and David Blossom of Monmouth, Maine.

Mrs. Blossom has heard from her son, Bob, who said he was happy to be staying with the Lotti family in Italy. His only disappointment was the lengthy stretch of rain they received during his first two weeks there.

Mrs. Blossom, a Hull school teacher for 22 years, is especially proud of her son being chosen for the festival. "I was tickled because this, on his resume, looks very, very good," she said.

Next week, Bob's number one fan, his mom, is scheduled to depart for Italy and catch one of her son's performances. After the close of the festival Bob is planning to tour Europe for the month of August.

Bob first picked up the trombone in the fourth grade. In the ninth grade at Cohasset High School he made considerable improvement under band director, Hal Janks, who is now with the Metropolitan Opera. "Hal really got Bobby sparked," said Mrs. Blossom.

During his summers at Cohasset High, Bob studied at the South Shore Conservatory of Music and was a member of the Summer Wind Ensemble. He performed both jazz and classical music. At the conservatory he was a student of Doug Wauchope, who is now director of the Duxbury branch of the South Shore Conservatory of Music.

Bob has completed various freelance jobs for the Curtain Call Theatre and the Hingham Civic Music Theatre.

During his junior high and high school years Blossom received many honors. He participated in SEMSBA, district and the all-state orchestras. He was a citation winner of the National Association of Jazz Educators competition which was held at Berklee. In 1977-78, he was a member of the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra.

In 1978, Bob toured England with the Massachusetts Youth Wind Ensemble group.

Before transfering to the New England Conservatory of Music, Bob majored in trombone for two years at Boston University's School of Fine Arts. He studied under Norman Bolter, a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

At the New England Conservatory of Music Bob is currently a student of John Swallow. He is a member of the Scholarship Brass Quintet and the symphonic orchestra.

Besides music Bob loves to go biking, rock climbing and back packing. He often rides his bike up to Maine to visit his father. But for now, Bob's chief interest is music and his ambition is to become a member of a major symphony orchestra.

Trombone player Bob Blossom is a member of the orchestra performing at the Spoleto Festival in Italy.

Displeased with the exclusion of Roger Lincoln

Letters

(The following is a copy of a letter to Selectmen. Ed.)

I wish to register with you my displeasure to the fact that the name of Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln was not included in the list of the final three candidates for the position of fire chief.

I disagree with the reason given to Chief Lincoln that there were three better qualified candidates for the position. I think you should look back at what Chief Lincoln has done for you, the Town of Cohasset and the fire department, since you asked him to take over the operation of the fire department.

He was able to bring about a solution to our ambulance problems and bureaucratic situations that have arisen since his appointment. His leadership this spring at the boat yard fire under the most difficult of conditions certainly speaks for itself as a fire command officer.

Chief Lincoln's ability to cooperate and to coordinate with other town departments is another benefit the town has received. His introduction of a smoke detector and oil burner inspection program is an example of this cooperation. The talent he showed in running an undermanned department with the financial limitations imposed upon him, shows that he has a great deal of management skills.

The fact that Chief Lincoln is a lifelong resident of Cohasset and he knows the town both physically and philosophically better than the three other candidates is something you should consider very seriously.

Chief Lincoln's manner of motivating the men on the fire department to improve themselves and in the building in which they work, is something I have not seen in the 22 years I have been a firefighter. Chief Lincoln has instilled a sense of pride in being a Cohasset Firefighter.

If these qualifications and what he has done in his enure as fire chief does not bring him up to or urpass the other three candidates selected by the ommittee, then I think they are overly qualified for the position as fire chief. By not including Chief Lincoln's name in the list of candidates, it has insulted the integrity of a fine firefighter and person who has given greatly to this town.

This decision also gives rise to the question: What is the sense of trying to be a professional about your job, when you know it won't be recognized or rewarded? I believe that the search committee has shown a tremendous lack of insensitivity to the needs of Cohasset and the fire department with this deliberate snub of Chief Lincoln.

One of the many questions that bothers me is: What qualifications did the selectmen ask the search committee to look for in a fire chief?

Another vote of confidence for DeBassio

(The following is a copy of a letter to selectmen. Ed.)

As a professional person and businessman who has maintained a successful practice in the Town of Cohasset for the past several years, I would like to place my full support and confidence in Chief DeBassio's performance as chief, and feel that he has done an exceptionally fine job worthy of accommodation.

I have seen an improvement in the morale of the police officers and have noticed increased respect for the police by our younger citizens and praise by the older citizens.

It is therefore my opinion that Chief DeBassio was appointed to do a job. I feel that he should be allowed to do his job as he was originally requested to do, but in order to do this he must be given free hand to implement what programs he feels will benefit the police department and the Town of Cohasset. He already has the authority, it would be unwise to try to pressure or override his knowledgeable decisions.

Dr. Daniel R. Bonetzky

P.S. Chief DeBassio has extended 100 percent of his effort in trying to produce an efficient, strong and dedicated police department.

Citizens, Music Circus drop legal suits

Shortly before press time this week, the Mariner learned The South Shore Music Circus and a citizen's group seeking volume and traffic relief from the Circus have agreed to drop their respective suits against one another.

Details of the settlement were unavailable before press time. However, the attorney for the Music Circus, Anthony Mooney of Hale and Dorr, will be sending out a press release regarding the settlement form to which both groups have agreed.

Part of that agreement is that neither The Music Circus or the citizens group will discuss details of the settlement, Mary Gainor, former spokesman for the group, said.

However, the Mariner has learned that in the future both groups have agreed to handle their problems through a liaison group.

Spring soccer takes a good bounce

To the Editor:

The spring soccer program is now completed and this year Cohasset entered seven teams in the Coastal Youth Soccer League, five boys teams and two girls teams. In all, 125 young people from our town ages 10 to 17 participated and did themselves proud.

Those of us involved in administering this program wish to acknowledge the cooperation and support we received from Cohasset town and school officials. The Selectmen allowed us to use the two fields at Milliken Field, Peter Laugelle saw that the fields were kept in top condition, and Clark Chatterton and the School Committee permitted us to use the school's goals and helped with field scheduling.

Thank you for helping us set up this program which obviously will continue to grow in future years.

The swim team is ready & the future looks good

By Donna Cogliano

The swim season gets underway next week with Cohasset facing Duxbury in Division "A" action of the South Shore League.

Last year Cohasset finished in second place with Hanover crowned champion. One highlight of last year's season was when Cohasset beat Duxbury in playoff action.

This year's swim team of nearly 180 participants will be under the direction of Doug Bell, Brenda Birmann and diving coach Erin O'Brien. The squad includes kids of 16 years old and younger.

"I think the team looks fantastic this year," said Coach Birmann, "I'm looking forward to a lot of new people that look strong."

"They are working really hard and I think it's important to get a lot of people to attend the meets and cheer them on," said Birmann, "I think the kids deserve some support."

"It should be a fun season," said Birmann, "Above anything we want the kids to have a good time."

The Cohasset coaches are smiling already because one swimmer, Missy Jackson, set a new pool record during tryouts. She bettered the old record of 15.2 seconds in the 25-yard freestyle with a 14.8 finish.

Sarah Trask, who competed during the winter, is expected to have a strong season for Cohasset. Other promising competitors for Cohasset include: Bridget Cox and Kate Anderson of the 14 and under age group; Mike Cunning and Steven Camarado of the 16 and under age group; Emily Tague and Sara Bishop of the 12 and under age group.

Each meet will feature 61 events with four new events. The new events, for both boys and girls, are the 100-yard individual medley for 12 and under and a two-length freestyle for 10 and under. The new events should prove more challenging, said Birmann.

Cohasset is scheduled to meet Duxbury next Friday, July 9 at the Swim Center on Sohier Street. The diving competition will begin at 1 p.m. followed by the swimming events.

Barry is candidate for state senator

Thomas Barry of Duxbury, Republican candidate for state senator, is conducting a petition drive to place two non-binding public policy questions on the Nov. 2 ballot in Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

One question would ask voters if they would like to have all sales tax revenues returned to cities and towns. The other question would ask voters if they would support legislation to repeal the law requiring consumers to pay utility company fuel adjustment charges.

Commenting on the questions, Barry stated, "The only justification for a state sales tax is that its revenues should be used to relieve the local property tax burden. When the limited 3 percent sales tax was enacted in 1966 it was done so on the premise that all of these revenues would be placed in a Local Aid Fund and then returned to cities and towns, after local tax levies had been set, for the expressed purpose of reducing property taxes."

Angler's corner...

...Bluefish have provided the most prolific sport for fishermen over the past week, with "meat" catches at the Race off Provincetown and sporadic fish being taken along the coast.

Example: Dennis Kowal of Cohasset caught himself four blues while trolling in Hingham Harbor, and the "Applejack" out of Scituate picked up five more in the seven-pound category off Minot. Rebels, Bill Norman lures and Hoochies will work when trolling as will umbrella rigs. Pogies are your best (and most available) for live bait but eels will also work.

...Eels are a gamey bait for big striped bass too and one was responsible for a 56-pound striper taken from Plymouth Beach last week. We suggest hooking the eel in the tail with a treble hook and letting it swim free around the boat. That done, all you have to do is set the rod in a rod holder and listen for the zzzzzzz of the line, though every once in a while you should check the line for tangles.

Eels are tougher than pogies and will live longer in and out of the water. Eel traps are best for catching them, but you can also find them in the harbors and rivers. Bait three or four hooks with small pieces of seaworm and put them on the bottom. And if your eels don't catch you a bass, take them home and eat them.

Our roving reporters say most of the other big stripers being taken in these parts are coming from Stellwagon Bank. There are few schoolies around and apparently there will be even fewer in coming years. Last year's spawn was non existant.

...Codfish are still plentiful in deep water and are taking clams, seaworms and cod jigs, jigged from the bottom. Lately they have been eating small lobsters (lobsters are molting) according to one angler who checked their dining habits last week.

...There are still plenty of flounder in the harbors and in the North and South Rivers. Pollock are also around and, in addition to bait, will chase small buck tails or castmasters. Any small lure will do.

...Sweetwater anglers will be pleased to know that largemouth bass are off their beds and feeding once again. Your reporter (Blaisdell) caught several respectable keepers on the Cape last week, but you don't have to go that far. Largemouths prowl most every decent sized pond.

Trout fishermen working the Cape have to fish deep — below the 30-foot level — and most of the catches are taken during the day with some success at dusk. Flyrodders have succeeded using nymphs at 10 to 12 feet deep.

...Summertime is good night fishing time for fresh and salt water bass, both being nocturnal creatures. Try popping plugs; they attract fish and they let you know where your line is.

...Quotas — one fish per week — bluefin tuna have reduced the catch significantly this season and that has hurt a lot of local tuna men who depend on the bluefin for their summer livelihood. The Japanese meanwhile, have been taking bluefin by the boatload. So much for simple justice.

Three charged in Spensley Chevrolet break

Three youths were arrested last Thursday for two separate break-in attempts at Spensley Chevrolet on Route 3A.

Robert Hirst, 18, and William Freel III, 19, both of Marshfield were arrested shortly after Cohasset police discovered a vehicle stripped of its tires in the parking lot of the auto dealership. Patrolman John Small investigated the parking lot while on routine patrol at 2:05 a.m. when he saw a pickup truck in the lot.

The two Marshfield men were charged with larceny of over $100 (the four mag wheels from the pickup truck.)

At about 5 a.m. a Hull man, Robert Ciulla, Jr., 18, was arrested by Scituate police for attempted breaking and entering at Spensley Chevrolet. He was also charged with malicious destruction of personal property and allowing an improper person to operate a motor vehicle.

During a check of the auto dealership, Patrolman Rick Grassie found three men at the side of the building. As the cruiser approached the men, one man ran into the woods and the others left in a Chevrolet Impala. The car hit the cruiser as it sped out of the lot.

The suspects were pursued by police down Route 3A and onto Summer St., where another cruiser was waiting. The suspects' car drove off the road and into the woods, striking a mailbox on Summer Street. Two men fled on foot from the vehicle and were not found. Both Hingham and Cohasset police searched until 7:30 a.m. for the two suspects.

In connection with the second attempted break-in at Spensley Chevrolet, the side door was found pried open with a crowbar and two hinges were removed. Police also found a car at the rear of the building with its windshield smashed, seat covers ripped and door lock and dashboard damaged.

The abandoned car on Summer Street was listed to Ciulla's father, John Nucci of North Scituate.

SATURDAY, JUNE 26

1:39 a.m. Received call from Mr. Bob Best, Scituate Harbor Marina's night watchman, reporting a man yelling for help off the Marina by O'Neil's clinging to a boat. Assistant Harbormaster was first on scene and retrieved the person from the water and transferred him to a waiting ambulance. The Coast Guard 41455 utility boat was second on scene and assisted by securing loose gear from the dingy.

1:00 p.m., Received call from vessel "Applejack" stating they found a bow section of a boat. The Auxiliary vessel "Patti Ann" was dispatched to retrieve the hazard to navigation. While enroute to the position, the "Patti Ann" developed engine problems. The Coast Guard Motor Lifeboat 44318 was dispatched to retrieve the bow section of the boat and to tow the "Patti Ann" to the North River where the Marshfield harbormaster relieved the tow.

5:00 p.m., Received call from sailing vessel "Cortazon" reporting they were disabled with engine failure and no wind off New Inlet. The Coast Guard 41455 was diverted from present operations to tow the 40' sailboat to Scituate Harbor.

Other boaters in the vicinity reported hearing the Mayday call, but saw no vessel in the vicinity. Between the Plymouth Harbor Master and the Coast Guard it was discovered a hoax.

8:30 p.m., Received a call from Coast Guard Boston reporting the vessel Zebra, eight miles east of Grave Light, on fire. The Coast Guard 41 foot utility boat was dispatched to assist. Salem control reported a similar incident happening approximately one year ago involving a vessel Zebra with negative results. While enroute to the position, the 41455 foot utility boat developed a total loss of power. The Coast Guard 44318 motor life boat was dispatched to assist. Coast Guard Group Boston called back reporting vessel Zebra was a false alarm. The CG 44318 towed the CG 41455 to the CG Station for repairs.

9:28 p.m., Received call from Coast Guard Group Boston stating the US1 Yellow Bird is overdue from Green Harbor. The 23 foot cabin cruiser, owned and operated by Arthur Graham of Hanover, was found by the Green Harbor Master at Pier 4, Green Harbor.

TUESDAY, JUNE 29

Cook your cod with milk and cream

By Charles Flanders

(Lean) Season All Year, Best During Winter Months, Flesh White, Firm, and Flaky

The Codfish belongs to a family which comprises many species, including some of our most valuable marine fish. The principal species are the Cod, Haddock, Pollock, Hake, and Cusk.

Until very recent years the annual value of the Cod has exceeded that of its close relatives, but during the past decade the Haddock fisheries have on many occasions assumed the first rank. The Cod owes its value as a food fish to its excellent flavor, size, comparatively few bones, year round abundance, and adaptability to dry salting. Fish rich in oil cannot be successfully dry salted, and for this reason such species as the Salmon, Bluefish, and Mackerel, if salted at all, must be put into brine.

The Cod is a cold water fish and its movements are largely governed by changes in the water temperature. However, the temperature in many parts of the North Atlantic is so low throughout the year that Codfish may be caught in equal abundance the year round. It is generally taken at depths of from 8 to 40 fathoms, but is known to inhabit much deeper water. It is taken in the largest commercial quanitites off the New England coast and the offshore banks throughout the year.

Cod is taken with otter trawls, trawl lines, hand lines, and gill nets. The larger vessels employ the otter trawls and are known as trawlers. Hand lines and trawl lines are the most popular methods of quality fishing, because of the short time they are out, and as their use requires only a small boat and crew. The boats range in size from the small motor and sail type to the large steam trawlers. Nearly all boats now carry engines, and thus are better equipped to encounter the frequent fogs and the violent storms which appear almost without warning, and which were the bane of fishermen of former days.

The Cod is one of the most prolific fish. The ovaries of a 21 pound Cod have been computed to contain 2,700,000 eggs or approximately one quart. When it is remembered that under natural conditions, in order to maintain the normal number of Codfish it is only necessary for two of these eggs to hatch and grow to maturity, it is easily seen that the destruction of eggs is very great. If all the eggs of a 75 pound Cod should hatch and grow to maturity, the ocean would soon become packed solid with Codfish.

The principal loss is probably due to failure of impregnation, to great numbers being thrown upon the shore by the waves, and to the vast numbers eaten by various animals, including fish, birds and invertebrates.

4 cups of half milk and half cream
3 tablespoons butter
2 cups of clam broth or 2 8-ounce bottles of clam juice (can be purchased any chain store)
1/2 pound salt pork, diced
2 or 3 onions, sliced thinly
2 cups boiling water, salted
Salt and pepper to your taste
8 Boston Common or Pilot Crackers

Directions

1. Have your choice fish market remove the fish fillets from the back bone, skin and cut into 1½ to 2 inch pieces, a Codfish.

2. Next have the fish cutter give you the head, with the eyes, gills, removed also the tail bones broken in pieces and trimmings. Wrapping fish fillets separated from head, bones and trimmings.

3. Before making your chowder, take a wire brush and remove all the blood from head, bones and trimmings. Wash in cold water, and tie in cheese cloth.

4. Make a fish stock, by placing the above savors in cheese cloth bag in large kettle, cover with the cold water, and simmer slowly for about 1 hour. Remove the cheese cloth bag, strain and set aside for further use.

5. Put the salt pork in a heavy frying pan, cook slowly about 5 minutes, adding onions and cooking until the onions are soft, about 5 to 8 minutes more, or until golden brown. Strain the fat into a deep pan and set the crisp pork scraps aside until ready for use.

6. Now place potatoes in large kettle in boiling salted water. Cook until potatoes are almost tender, about 6 to 8 minutes only, because they will be cooked more.

7. Add the fish liquid stock, clam broth to potatoes, fish fillet pieces, onions, and pork, scraps, simmer about 5 to 7 minutes longer, or until fish flakes easily with a fork.

8. At this point chowder may be refrigerated overnight if desired flavor is enhanced by the next day (But this is optional).

9. In a double boiler or separate saucepan, heat milk and cream to boiling point, but do not boil.

10. Add the heated milk and cream to chowder, season to your taste with salt and pepper; heat to serving temperature, but do not allow to boil, stirring occasionally, and add butter. Serving your choice of crackers on the side.

Makes 6 to 7 generous servings.

Remarks: For the real Gourmet Seafood Conscious, and something different, add 3 to 3½ ozs. of cooked minced fresh or canned clams just before removing chowder from stove.

To a New Englander, a summer clambake is a tribal rite. It sounds glorious to have your party on the beach, but seldom are conditions just right. Bob Barlow, who calls himself a "bakemaster," should know, for he's been catering clambakes for 20 years and much prefers a gathering in a grove, around a pool, or even an apartment complex such as Windsor Gardens in Foxboro, where there were five hundred gathered last summer. Everything is baked in seaweed; clams, hand-picked and scrubbed, layers of potatoes, corn and two lobsters per person are all structured like a monster casserole. Aromas creep out from under the topping of wet canvas and appetites are tantalized out of control. John Putnam, a high school teacher in Marshfield, is gradually learning the ropes as bakemaster, freeing Bob to spend more time on his many other enterprises. The menu for their old-fashioned clambake also includes steamed clams in their broth, rolls, coleslaw, watermelon, coffee and soft drinks. Traditional summer fare also is

NEW ENGLAND CHOWDER

4 bacon slices
2 c. chopped onions
1 c. celery slices
2 T flour
2 c. water
2 c. chopped potatoes
1 lb. fish fillets, thawed
1½ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper
1½ c. milk

Fry bacon in 3 qt. saucepan until crisp. Remove, drain off fat, reserving 2 T. Cook onions and celery in reserved bacon fat until tender. Blend in flour, gradually add water. Stir in potatoes, fish and seasonings. Cover and simmer 20 min., or until potatoes are tender. Add crumbled bacon and milk. Garnish with parsley if desired. Serves 6 to 8.

Radios blare, streets are filled with precious little bicyclists and the constant banging of the screen door is only muffled by the thud of the refrigerator. It's known as summertime, or to be more specific as far as mothers are concerned, snacktime and, as any mother knows, it's all the little extras in the way of treats that do terrible things to the food budget and dental bills. You can concoct a natural, nutritious snack or breakfast cereal that can be stored for two weeks, or sealed in plastic bags and frozen if it lasts that long. It's called

HOMEMADE GRANOLA

2½ c. old-fashioned rolled oats
1 c. shredded coconut
1/2 c. coarsely chopped almonds
1/2 c. sesame seeds
1/2 c. shelled sunflower seeds
1/2 c. unsweetened wheat germ
1/2 c. honey
1/4 c. cooking oil
1/2 c. dried apricots, chopped
1/2 c. raisins

In large bowl, combine rolled oats, shredded coconut, almonds, sesame seeds, sunflower seeds and wheat germ. Combine honey and oil. Stir into oat mixture. Spread out in 13x9x2" baking pan. Bake in 300 degree oven till light golden brown, 45 to 50 min., stirring every 15 min. Remove from oven; stir in apricots and raisins. Remove to another pan to cool. Stir occasionally while cooling to prevent lumping. Store in tightly covered jars or plastic bags. Makes 6½ c.

Also part of the summer scene is the ice cream truck that invariably appears about half an hour before dinner and can become a costly, nightly ritual. Perhaps you can tempt the little darlings with homemade popsicles made of fruit juice. You can buy the kits anywhere. You can also freeze maraschino cherries inside ice cubes for their lemonade. If there are some left over, they're good in Old Fashions, too. As Peg Bracken says, "Until someone invents a peanut butter, bubblegum casserole, tuna fish will have to do," so as a prelude to your child's popsicle, why not this

TUNA-MUSHROOM CASSEROLE

Mix together and place in greased casserole:
7 oz. can chunk tuna
2 to 3 c. cooked noodles
1 can mushroom soup, diluted with ½ can milk
1/2 c. frozen or canned peas

Salt, pepper, grated cheese sprinkled on top. Bake at 325 for half an hour. Serves six little people.

Americans take heart ... excel

By Lois Martin

The spectacular fireworks televised from Washington, D.C. Saturday night was featured with the theme from "Chariots of Fire" as background music. Best of all choices, irresistible.

That song will seem wonderful a long time. And so will the movie. I don't see a lot of movies. Though I go in spells of seeing several now and then. For me, sitting in the dark and being quiet for two hours, isn't always a preference.

But there'd been this hoopla about "Chariots of Fire" and "On Golden Pond." I finally saw both and prefer the former in all measures to the latter, with due respect to Henry Fonda, whom I felt I should help hold up, and to Katherine Hepburn, who has the strength and endurance and value of a maple tree.

PATCHES

But...'Chariots,' well it gave American society cause to take heart for three reasons. The first isn't even the movie itself. That was good, though it took me a while to get my character and place switching to make sense. That done it, like the runners, exemplified, grew stronger, more purposeful, and more excellent.

First of all, there was the purist runner, his personal struggle and his unquenchable pursuit of the goal. He must be best. He must win the race. Running must be the most naked of sports, as demanding as any, as painful, as thrilling. And to find among us still people who will not stand anything other than absolute excellence is heartening.

And secondly, there were those who are almost of equal importance...the throngs, the thousands who can't run but put all their energy into the success of the person who's trying to win. The masses, the cheering, the supporters. "[illegible]"

...And the trainer. I thought that was the high point of the movie. Remember that part where the controversial trainer stayed in his room while his protege ran the big race. And he waited and suffered. And on the track the runner ran and suffered.

And then he won and the trainer saw his flag go up. They were the victors, both of them. The athlete and the one who enabled him to be his best. Inseparable, vital, encouraging to see both.

Finally, I was encouraged that the Academy selected that as the best film. There it was, devoid of fiction/famous mystery, lurid sex (not to be confused with non lurid sex) and violence.

That drama outstripped marvelous competition. And clearly the saga of 'chariots' was simple fare...the runner and his race.

And it was peerless this year.

It all came to mind this morning when I mused about our Fourth of July as I was cleaning up (want any potato salad, brownies...iced tea?)

We tried to do it all on the Fourth, you know, the softball game, badminton/volley ball, scavenger hunt, street dance.

But we also threw in tough competition, egg throwing, three legged race, and all. And we gave ribbons. I noticed we cared about our ribbons. They were cut by Meghan, you remember hearing about her, and they were pinned with the little brass pins. Blue, first of course; red, second and white because they didn't have other that would do the trick.

Jim Wilson and I wouldn't have reminded anyone of Chariots of Fire but we won the three-legged race hands down. (The key I've decided is to start with the outside foot.) And one young man, Michael Barry, won three ribbons. He's strong, able, energetic and outrageously competitive. He made my day. After the scavenger hunt, some people went home, showered, changed and came back. Michael did that and when I last saw him he was clean as a whistle, dressed in fresh clothes... on which were pinned his three ribbons.

..."Chariots of Fire..." the unredoubtable drive to excel, matched by our appreciation, still surging in society, even on the Fourth. Thank God.

Coastal Community Center wins state grant

The Department of Public Health, Division of Alcoholism, has awarded a contract to Coastal Community Center to provide alcohol out patient treatment services for alcohol troubled individuals and their families.

Services will be provided to persons and families living in Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham, Milton, Randolph, Quincy, Braintree, Hull, Norwell and Weymouth.

Michael Obolensky will assume directorship of the new unit July 1.

Obolensky's experience in the field of alcohol treatment is extensive. Most recently he was a predoctoral intern at South Shore Mental Health Center, Quincy, working in adult out patient services. Prior to that, he was director of the Alcoholism Out Patient program at the Fall River/New Bedford Center for Alcohol Problems. Obolensky created and developed this program in July, 1977.

The treatment of alcohol related problems, said Obolensky, requires a multi-disciplinary approach. "In working with an alcohol troubled individual and the family, we will utilize the expertise of a wide range of disciplines — nursing, social work, psychology and psychiatry."

Obolensky outlined central components of the program which he feels help the individual learn the skills to maintain good sobriety. "Social skills training is an important factor in the rehabilitative process. For example, assertiveness training, communication, problem solving and coping skills are all vital to maintaining the gains made in treatment."

Relapse prevention training is as important, continued Obolensky. Using an approach developed by Dr. G. Alan Marlatt of the University of Washington, Seattle, the treatment team will teach the individual and the family to identify early warning signs of relapse and to employ various intervention strategies.

A daily morning support group as well as more traditional forms of alcohol out patient treatment and a strong cooperative effort with the Alcoholics Anonymous community will be integral parts of the program.

For more information call 479-5603.

Walks for children

Walking tours designed especially for children will be available this summer in Plymouth.

Beginning July 6, Diane Finn will guide groups of youngsters through Plymouth. In two hours, she will give the historic significance of Mayflower II, Plymouth Rock, Cole's Hill, sites along Leyden St. and Burial Hill.

Finn's tours will be offered every Wednesday through Sunday during July and Aug. from 2 to 4 p.m. Groups meet at Mayflower II

Conway meets Reagan

Congressional candidate Jack Conway told President Ronald Reagan the vital issues affecting the Scituate area were the economy and high employment, high interest rates, the future of off-shore oil drilling and the future of Social Security benefits.

"The President seemed confident that the problems with the economy had bottomed out and commented about the improvement in the gross national product (up 6/10 of 1 percent) and the continued low rate of inflation (down from 12.6 percent to about 3.6 percent)," said Conway, a South Shore Realtor and civic leader.

Conway also discussed with Congressman Jack Kemp, keeping inflation under control; keeping the tax burden off the people; getting excessive regulation off the backs of the American people; and working towards a predictable and stable money policy.

Conway stressed that jobs, employment and economic development was the primary issue throughout the congressional district.

"We have unemployment in the New Bedford area which is 56 percent above the state average; in the Cape Cod area of almost 50 percent over the state average and on the South Shore of about 12 percent over the state average.

"We need jobs and sensible job development programs here. It must be one of the key cornerstones of the Congressman's office to maintain a day by day contact with the government establishment so that national job and work opportunity contracts get pointed in the direction of the South Shore, Cape Cod and southeastern Massachusetts," said Conway.

Dog obedience training

The Recreation Department is accepting telephone registrations for two Dog Obedience training programs scheduled to begin Wednesday evening, July 21.

The programs will be held on the Town Common at 6:30 p.m. with a second class at 7:30. The fee is $15 per dog for the eight-week session.

The purpose of the first class will be to teach novice and pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered will include proper use of voice, corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc.

Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included. The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dog in obedience. The 7:30 p.m. class will be an advanced class for those dogs who have had prior training.

Owners are required to bring their dogs equiped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely, no spike collars will be allowed! It is also strongly suggested that handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions.

The classes will have a graduation "fun match" and ceremony to demonstrate their newly acquired skills at the end of the eight week session. The two classes will be combined for this and will start at 6:30. More will be said in class.

Laurie Ann Goodrich will instruct the course in Basic Canine Obedience beginning Wednesday evening, July 21. As an experienced professional handler at the breed and obedience level, Miss Goodrich has handled dogs in each dog group as well as rare breeds. She has been an assistant trainer at Wilder's Dog Training School in Scituate since 1976 having much experience with both pure bred and mixed breed dogs.

She is a certified obedience instructor in canine obedience at beginning and advanced levels through Newbury Junior College in Holliston. She also holds a B.A. in Psychology with a minor in Biology from Boston State College where she did her psychology practicum at the Stone Zoo in Stoneham, graduating cum laude.

To register, call the Recreation Department Office at 383-6791. Class size will be limited and enrolled on a first call first registered basis. Non-residents will be accepted for an extra fee charge on a space available basis.

Photography show

South Shore area photographers are invited to exhibit their work in the juried Photography Show to be held Aug. 7 and 8 as part of the town-wide observance of Heritage Days, sponsored by the Scituate Chamber of Commerce.

The show will be held at St. Mary's Hall, Scituate Harbor, from 10 a.m to 5 p.m. Aug. 7 and from noon to 3 p.m. Aug. 8. Public judging of the exhibits will be on the first day.

Juried judging will be at the G.A.R. Hall on Country Way, near First Parish Road, Sunday, Aug. 1, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Jurors will be Donna Greene, Scituate artist, and Daniel Sheehan and Walter Frost, both of the Boston Globe. The judging is open to the public. Each print will be judged on its own merits.

Best of Show plaques will be awarded in both the juried and public judging. The awards will be made at the Scituate Town Pier at the conclusion of the Boat Parade.

Scituate Photographer Rudolph Mitchell, chairman of the show, states that photographers, regardless of age, may submit any number of unframed prints — black and white or color — at an entry fee of $2 per print.

The minimum size is 8"x10" and the maximum size is 16"x20". Each must be mounted or matted and unframed. Each entry must be titled on the back only along with the photographer's name, address and telephone number.

According to Mitchell, all entries must be delivered to him at his home, 93 Maple Street, Scituate, by Saturday, July 31, and picked up there by Wednesday, Aug. 25. Additional information may be obtained by calling him at 545-2137.

Following Heritage Days, the winning prints will be hung for one week at the Scituate Federal Savings Bank on Front Street, Scituate Harbor.

Nature program

Registrations are now being accepted for a special Nature Program to be given by the Cohasset Community Center beginning Wednesday, July 14 from 10 a.m. to noon.

The four-week program, which is being offered in cooperation with the South Shore Natural Science Center, will be under the direction of Dorothy Marshall, teacher/director and will include a presentation by a guest specialist, each week on a different topic area.

On July 14, Bill Perkins will explore the ever changing community along marshes, mud flats, tidal pools and the sandy shore. On July 21, Perkins will provide insight into common and familiar wild plants. Children will learn some things about their names, their uses and folklore which has been associated with them over the years.

On July 28, Rollin Bailey will provide a description of the organization and communications system among honeybees with color slides. A visit to a nearby beehive to observe firsthand some additional information will also be included.

On Aug. 4, David Magnusson will provide giant ferns, fossils and dinosaurs to show how scientists interpret evidence of new discoveries. This will be a session to build a child's growth in the concepts of time and size.

The program has been planned for children in Grades 1 through 6 and classes will be divided according to ages and ability. Program cost is $20.

For further information call 383-0088 from 9 to 1, weekdays.

Painting workshops

Enrollments must be made in advance for three special one-week painting workshops at the South Shore Art Center.

Landscape Painting with Margaret Dillon will take place July 12-16 for intermediate and advanced painters and will meet in half-day sessions, 9:30-12:30 daily. Students may use their own choice of medium and should come prepared to work outdoors at several sites in Cohasset.

Emphasis will be on form and design and learning "how to" capture the characteristics of "place" while using good design. Ms. Dillon exhibits in Boston and New York and is represented by the Helen Shlien Gallery.

One-Week Outdoor Painting with Betty Kohlberg is now being offered July 19-23 in full day sessions for three college credits. Students will work in a variety of media with emphasis placed on mastering a variety of skills involved in creating successful work. Optional credit is available with the Massachusetts College of Art Continuing Education program.

Ms. Kohlberg is a visiting professor of Art at Mass. College of Art and received her MFA from Tufts University.

Outdoor Drawing and Painting with popular teacher Rosalind Farbush will be offered July 19-23 for five half-day sessions in the morning. Students may be at beginning, intermediate or advanced levels and may take the course for one college credit.

Form, structure and composition will be emphasized as well as various methods of paint handling. Students may use their own choice of media. Ms. Farbush will teach only this course at the Center this summer since she has recently moved from this area. She studied at the School of the Museum in Boston and has been an award-winning exhibitor in the Boston area and New York.

Telephone 383-9548 for more information.

Community Center courses

Registrations are now being accepted at the Cohasset Community Center for several youth and adult courses which will be beginning within the next week.

Mosquitoes are here, counter attack coming

By Donna Cogliano

The mosquito population is alive and stinging in Cohasset, and will soon be the object of aerial spraying.

The Plymouth County Mosquito Control is scheduled to take to the air in a couple of weeks to treat the mosquito breeding areas and salt marshes with insecticide. Residential areas will not be the target of the spray, said Gary Benzon, superintendent of the Plymouth County Mosquito Control operation.

Benzon said Cohasset will be sprayed from an airplane on two occasions this summer. Townspeople will be notified through the press as to what will be sprayed and when. The mosquito aerial spray is not expected to cause the stir that the gypsy moth project did in May.

The town will be sprayed with the insecticide Abate which is a selective weapon against mosquitos. Benzon said Abate is less toxic than table salt. In addition to Abate, the mosquito control operation plans to experiment with a new biological insecticide, which is a variety of B.t. It was B.t. (Dipel) which was used in the aerial spray of gypsy moths in May. The Dipel insecticide was chosen over Sevin because it was considered to be safer.

Benzon said B.t. would kill mosquitos and black flies yet remain safe for non-target organisms. He said the product is so safe that the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) hasn't set residue tolerances.

For the most part the town will be sprayed with Abate. Because B.t. is so expensive, "We will use as much as we can afford to," said Benzon.

A third checmical insecticide, "Altoside" may

Special town meeting sought to amend fire chief selection

There's a petition circulating in town this week calling for a special town meeting to amend the procedure of choosing a new fire chief.

Firefighters and residents circulating the petition don't see eye to eye with the committee's choice of finalists. They hoped someone from the Cohasset department would have been included as a finalist. The committee excluded Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln and Captain James Gurry.

Committee Chairman John L. Thompson defended his committee's action at last Wednesday's selectmen's meeting, answering several questions from firefighters, residents and selectmen. At one point Thompson referred to the questioning as a cross-examination.

Thompson spoke of the committee's charge from town meeting, "It is a very definitive charge as to what we were to do." He said, "We did not address this on the basis of qualified or unqualified — that was not the charge given to us by town meeting. The charge was to pick the three best."

Firefighter Dick Conley presented selectmen with a petition of 140 signatures requesting that Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln be included as one of the finalists to be interviewed by the board. A town meeting vote last year requires that selectmen choose a fire chief among the three names submitted by the selection committee.

Conley said he knew of a petition circulating for special town meeting and that if selectmen included Lincoln as a finalist the costs of holding a town meeting would be saved. He said the petition only requests that Lincoln be considered a finalist and that selectmen choose from the final four.

The board did not act on the petition, saying they were required to obey town meeting vote. Conley reminded board members that they disregarded the vote of town meeting in the spring concerning gypsy moths. In a last minute change, the town was sprayed with B.T. instead of Sevin. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur maintained that the town meeting article to spray aerially for gypsy moths was more broad than the specific charge of the search committee.

Conley told selectmen, "It's best not to give absolute power to these boards. You are going to have to live and die with this chief."

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie said the screening process was left to a search committee, "because people have had so little faith in the board of selectmen."

Martha Conley, the firefighter's wife said, "I really feel strongly that maybe the search committee

Selectmen open hearing on Ainslie

Selectmen opened a public hearing Tuesday night on charges against Lawrence Ainslie Jr., a permanent intermittent patrolman.

The charges against Ainslie, made by Police Chief John DeBassio include: falsification of a police document, neglect of duty and conduct unbecoming a police officer. A fourth charge — unlawful and unnecessary exercise of authority — was dropped and incorporated into charge number three.

The charges were heard by Selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Mary Jane McArthur. Town Counsel Blake Thaxter was also on hand.

Selectmen Henry Ainslie, the uncle of Lawrence Ainslie, did not participate in the hearing. He was present, however, and recorded most of the session on tape.

Only one charge had been discussed by Chief DeBassio and Ainslie's attorney, Mark Fitzsimmons, when the Mariner went to press shortly before 10 p.m., and it appeared that the hearing would be a drawn-out process that could continue onto Wednesday.

Once the hearing is over, Selectmen will have two days to take action. They could take no action or could decide to suspend or dismiss Ainslie.

At the opening of the hearing, Atty. Fitzsimmons, asked that the charges be dismissed for reasons of "unjust cause." The request was denied by Selectmen.

In the early going, it was stop and go testimony by DeBassio as he was constantly interrupted by objections from Fitzsimmons. The attorney was asked by Thaxter to hold his cross examination of DeBassio until after the chief had finished his presentation of each charge.

"We're not in court and you know it," he told Fitzsimmons. "You really don't have to impress a jury, you know."

Under the first charge — falsification of an official police document — DeBassio accused Patrolman Ainslie of withholding pertinent information on a questionnaire-application.

DeBassio said Ainslie did not include his employment with Osco Drug in 1979 on the questionnaire. Fitzsimmons later argued that his

Trash haulers rap proposed dump fees

Local trash haulers are unhappy with newly proposed fees at the town's landfill. They say the fees are unfair unless local business is to be charged. Four commercial trash haulers were invited to Monday's health board meeting to discuss and review the proposed regulations which will be the subject of a future public hearing.

The proposed regulations require that a $200 fee be set annually for commercial dumping. But if haulers used the recycling system then the annual fee would be kept at $50.

The idea behind the $200 fee is to promote recycling. A Health Board member Michael Bliss said, "We're trying to get everybody to recycle. This, we figure, is an incentive."

Haulers maintained that their customers would have to absorb the increase. Anthony Sestito said that when he polled customers about a potential increase — 12 would terminate their business with him, six people would stay and two were undecided.

Individuals and commercial users of the dump should be allowed to dump the same materials, the haulers argued. The recycling bonus should also apply to local businesses, they said.

In other proposed fees, haulers would pay $3 per yard for compacted materials at each dumping. The commercial haulers would be charged a set fee, based on what their vehicle is capable of dumping in one load. Even if the haulers dump a half load they would be charged for a full load.

The trash haulers wanted local businesses to be charged by the truck load also. But board members admitted they would have a tough time enforcing it and determining who was dumping personal trash and who was dumping commercial trash. Sestito said that Dump Manager Joseph Laugelle, who knows everyone up at the dump, would know the difference between personal and local business dump users.

The reason for the individual load dumping fees is to help the health board pay for operation of the town dump which came under its jurisdiction on July 1. Before July the dump was under the direction of the highway department.

Floyd Robbins, a trash hauler, favored a flat annual customer fee of $10 instead of the load fee. Commercial haulers would pay $10 to the town for each customer's account.

When discussion closed Monday night, Health Board member Michael Bliss remarked, "This was the end of round one with more to follow."

A public hearing on the proposed regulation is expected to be held in a few weeks.

Now the condo proposal can be presented for approval to the planning and zoning board of appeals.

Postmaster Keating retires

After a 42 year career that started in 1940, Cohasset Postmaster T. Gerard Keating, has applied for retirement, effective August 6.

Postmaster Keating wishes to extend his thanks to the citizens of Cohasset for their splended cooperation and support during his long period of government service.

The responsibility of being postmaster during the past 34 years has been made easier by the many favorable comments of the users of the mail and their general endorsement as numerous changes were inaugurated, particularly during the past 10 years, he said.

"Being postmaster afforded me an opportunity to come in contact with many residents of the town who I normally would never have known.

"While I miss these regular contacts, the fine associations developed over the years will always be cherished by me," said Keating. I have no plans for the future except to take an occasional short trip."

Shellfish ban

The board of health released information this week on the closing of shellfish areas. The entire area within the breakwaters of the harbor is closed for shellfish digging. The Glades in Scituate and part of Bassing Beach have also been designated as contaminated shellfish areas.

Shellfish taken in contaminated areas are unfit for food purposes and dangerous to health when consumed. The contaminated areas will remain closed until further testing by the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering provides data within safe levels.

Taking of prohibited shellfish can result in fines ranging from $50 to $300 and/or imprisonment for not more than 90 days.

Little Harbor, Whitehead and Sandy Cove are considered safe by the state for taking of shellfish. Commerical shellfish digging is not allowed in Cohasset. And clam digging for those with permits is limited.

School board fare

The school committee is scheduled to meet Tuesday at 8 p.m. next week in the home economics room at the High School.

Agenda items for the meeting include: use of school computer equipment during the summer months; review of the drug and alcohol use abuse regulations concerning implementation and guidelines for the administration; an executive grievance session for Dorothy Bates and end of the year transfers to close out the final fiscal year 1982 warrant.

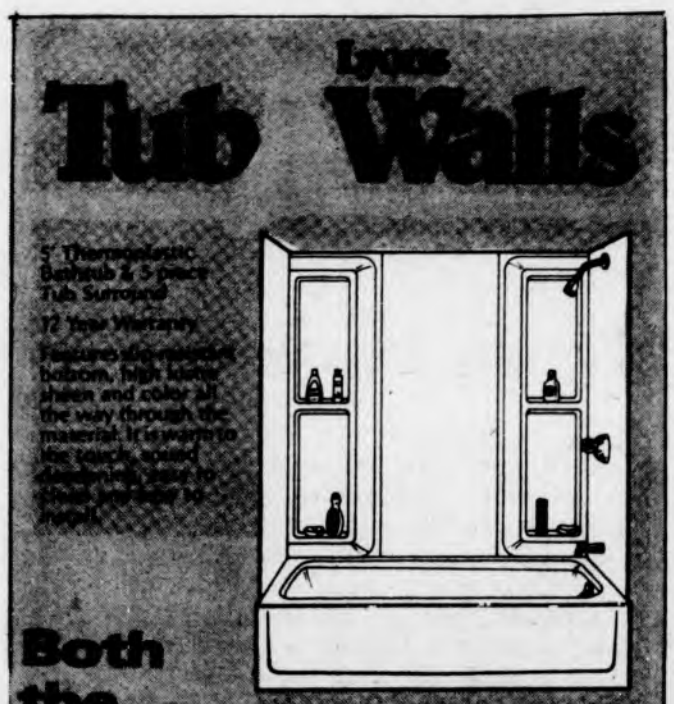
No Rhodes decision yet

Selectmen completed their hearing Monday on charges brought against police Sgt. John Rhodes III. No decision had been announced as of Mariner press time Tuesday.

The board is required to make a decision within 48 hours of the hearing's completion.

Monday's hearing was a continuation of last Thursday's closed hour-long session which recessed so the board could read the large volume of evidence presented.

The Monday night closed hearing lasted about one hour. After Rhodes and his Attorney, John F. Ridge, left the hearing, selectmen met for nearly two hours in executive session.



Rhodes was suspended for five days without pay recently because of an incident where the mother of a 16 year-old claimed Rhodes had an affair with her daughter. Rhodes was charged with contributing to the waywardness of a child and neglect of duty.

Special town meeting sought...

is not the route to go...if so maybe we need a search committee to seek out a search committee. I just feel that not too many people understand the fire chief's job. It's a unique position...it's not like interviewing someone for General Foods. I would like to see someone chosen who is a native of Cohasset."

Another woman suggested that the economic level of committee members be looked at. She said the search committee consisted of well-to-do members of the community.

Dick Conley argued that it would be a learning situation for an entire year if one of the three candidates were chosen to be chief. The chief would have to learn the physical makeup of the town as well as which fire hydrants are in operating condition. A new chief would have to learn how to lead and operate a small town department.

"You have to have faith in the man behind you," said Conley, "and there are some doubts here." He asked selectmen, "What if you feel these three don't have the characteristics that you're looking for in a fire chief?" Would you pick the man with the least amount of flaws, asked Conley. "No, we won't pick any of them," Ainslie responded.

Firefighter Bill Protulis, president of the firefighter's union asked Thompson, "How much weight did you give the needs of a small town fire department in this screening?"

Thompson replied, "All of us were concerned about that particular issue. Don't forget, all we can do is interview these people. In fairness to the people who were identified...it's a little bit hard at this moment in time to evaluate the results of the committee until the board of selectmen (conduct their interviews) — they may very well differ with us."

Protulis pointed toward the size of departments that the candidates worked in. There are 24 positions in the Cohasset Fire Department plus call men. The finalists work in departments of 480 and 587 employees, said Protulis. One candidate currently works in fire prevention and doesn't do any firefighting, he said.

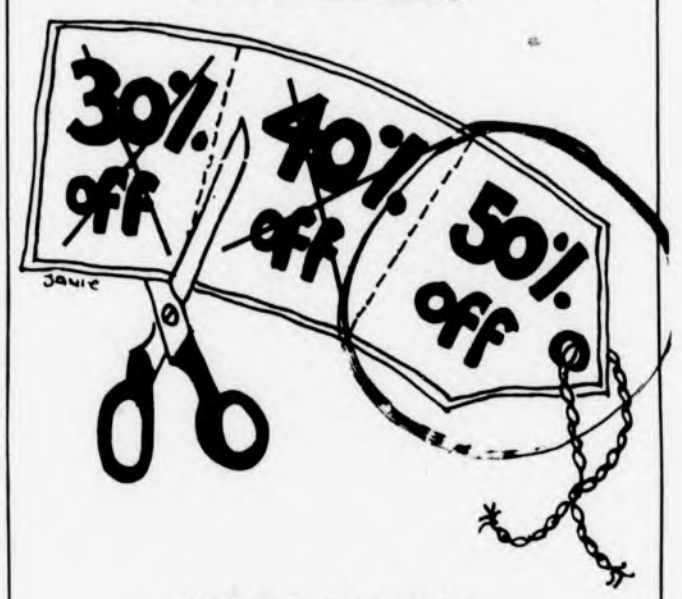
Conley asked Thompson, "Do you feel that your committee has a bias against the fire department." Thompson answered, 'I'm not aware of any," and stated that his only contact with the fire department had been limited to two emergency visits to his home. He had been to the station three or four times, he said.

"We're not here to argue," Conley said, but this is a period of frustration for the department. Conley wondered if the committee considered a local candidate to be far superior. Thompson said he considered it good company policy to promote from within.

In closing Thompson said to selectmen, "I would just hope that you keep an open mind in judging the applicants. They are very able and dedicated people." He was concerned with the way the candidates were being "bounced around" and criticized.

Selectmen will meet tonight (Wednesday) in a workshop session to draft a contract for the fire chief position. Once the petition (of 200 signatures) for special town meeting is presented to selectmen a meeting must be called within 45 days.

The three finalists for the fire chief's position are Victor Cail of Reading, Martin Dooley of East Hartford, Connecticut and Robert Winston of Duxbury.



Teen-aged motorcyclist injured in accident

A teen-aged motorcyclist was injured Monday morning when his vehicle struck a wall at the Richard McIntosh residence on Jerusalem Road.

The driver, Richard Nickerson, 18, of 2 Grace Drive in Cohasset was issued various motor vehicle citations for speeding and lack of headgear and registration plate. There was lawn damage from the incident.

Cohasset E.M.T.'s treated Nickerson at the scene of the accident and transported him to the South Shore Hospital where he was admitted. Nickerson was listed in fair condition on Tuesday.

Cohasset families host 34 AFS students

By Barbara Spooner

The Cohasset AFS Chapter and supportive families in the community had a unique opportunity to host 34 AFS (American Field Service) students for a "Bus Stop" last week.

"This end-of-stay bus trip provides the opportunity for all AFS'ers to review their year in the U.S. and think about their experiences. It also enables them to reflect upon how they have changed and how this will affect them upon returning home," explained Denis Rossi, Bus Stop Chairman.

Activities during the stay were designed to familiarize the visiting students with our community. This was particularly successful due to the efforts of Paul Dusossoit who organized a treasure hunt which sent AFS'ers in search of noted locations in Cohasset. The students later expressed a genuine appreciation for the chance to learn about the town and meet so many of its residents during the hunt.

A tour day itinerary included a day in Boston which was highlighted by a tour of the State House and a brief meeting with Mary Jeanette Murray, arranged by Mrs. Eric Pearson, a State House Guide. The day's activities were concluded with a Boston Harbor cruise sponsored by Boston Gas Company, courtesy of Denis Rossi.

While the activity schedule was full, ample time was allotted for each AFS student to spend time with his or her host family and other students in their international group. The "Bus Stop" was concluded with a pot luck supper and a talent show produced by the AFS'ers.

After only four days of sharing their Cohasset homes and lifestyle, host family members, and the AFS students alike, regretted having to say good-bye. The students headed for their second bus stop in Maine before flying to their respective homes throughout the world.

One teen-age girl summed up her feelings by saying, "I liked having an older brother better than a younger one," while many of the younger brothers and sisters wept while they waved good bye to the bus.

The AFS "Bus Stop" students, their home countries and Cohasset host families are as follows:

Mosquitoes are here, counter attack is coming...

also be used in the aerial spray, said Benzon. Altoside is a synthetic hormone which interrupts the proper growth cycle of the mosquito causing them to die.

This year Cohasset has contracted with the Plymouth County Mosquito Control for $9,500. The South Shore Mosquito Control battled the mosquitos on Cohasset's behalf two years ago. Last year the South Shore operation went out of business and was succeeded by Plymouth County.

The Plymouth County Mosquito Control is based in Kingston and is actually a state agency, run by the State Pesticide Board. Residents may call the agency directly at 1-585-5450 to report any heavily infested areas with mosquitos. Though a truck might not be dispatched immediately Benzon said it would help the agency determine problem areas which need the most attention.

During the past few weeks the town has been sprayed from the ground level with malathion. Benzon expects that Cohasset and bordering towns will receive more spraying during the height of the mosquito infestation in the next few weeks. He expects that the entire town will be sprayed once a week from the ground level.

A white truck delivers the spray in the early morning and late evening hours. Residents might not realize that their are had been sprayed unless they see the truck passing or smell the strong odor, said Benzon.

He spoke of ground level spraying as an aerosol treatment for killing adult mosquitos. Malathion is sprayed at a rate of a half-ounce per acre. That's enough to kill mosquitos and it won't kill anything else, said Benzon of the fine misting malathion.

"It makes it much safer to bring into residential areas. It's so safe," said Benzon, "that after it is sprayed there is no evidence...it floats up into the atmosphere and is broken down by the sun."

Benzon said it takes about 12 to 24 hours for the mosquitos to die once the area is sprayed with malathion. People shouldn't expect the mosquitos to drop out of the air and die, he said.

In all, the mosquito control force operates nine trucks on the South Shore and two trucks have been assigned to Cohasset.

Of 42 species of mosquitos Cohasset has only 20 types of biting mosquitos. And the good news is that some mosquitos only bite birds while others prefer frogs.

The most ferocious mosquitos come from the salt marshes, said Benzon. These mosquitos have bright white bands on their legs and are very, very aggressive.

Rock pools on the shore receive a special treatment for what Benzon described as an odd species, the Ades atropalpus. Mosquito control workers have been placing thumb-sized gray bricks in these rock pools to kill the mosquito larvae.

Benzon does not recommend bug lights for residents' yards to conquer mosquitos. But if bug lights are used they should be placed at the far ends of the yard, he said. Bug lights attract more mosquitos and moths, said Benzon, and "really do more to make people feel good — just to hear the zap."

He recommends that residents purchase a malthion product from a hardware store to use in their yards against mosquitos. The label should specifically mention mosquitos. He said the directions should be followed exactly because an overdose won't work any better and would be harmful to trees.

If you are bitten by a mosquito, the toughest part is not to scratch the itch during the first ten minutes. It's important not to touch a bite at all unless you swell up, said Benzon. Mosquito bites tend to itch for only a few minutes but if you scratch they will itch for hours, he said. If you do swell from a bite you should apply an antihistamine for relief, said Benzon.

One day watercolor workshop with Murray Wentworth

South Shore watercolorists now have an opportunity to study with Murray Wentworth of Norwell, nationally known artist, in an intensive one-day session to be held at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset on Thursday, July 22 and again on Tuesday, Aug. 24.

This will be the same expert instruction that watercolorists from all over the U.S. have enjoyed at Wentworth's yearly Maine Workshops. The Watercolor Workshop Day will be held outdoors in a Cohasset location with each session beginning with a teacher demonstration. The day will begin at 10 a.m. break for lunch (bring your own bag lunch) and close at 3 p.m. with a critique. This is an intermediate/advanced level workshop so participants should have basic drawing and watercolor skills before enrolling. Wentworth concentrates on developing individual styles while stressing concept, design, values and color harmonies using the landscape as subject. All enrollments, with fee, must be made in advance either by mail or in person at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

Murray Wentworth is a member of the American Watercolor Society, an Associate of the National Academy of Design, listed in Who's Who in American Art and Who's Who in the East. His watercolors are in private and corporate collections nationwide; he has won over 40 awards in national competitions and is a highly regarded exhibitor in Boston, New York and Maine. He received his training at the Art Institute and has had many years of teaching experience at art schools and in his own private workshops.

Pratt Library plans series of family programs

Story-tellers from the Boston area will present a series of six evening programs for family enjoyment. The Paul Pratt Memorial Library offers these story hours to school-age children and their parents, beginning Monday, July 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the children's room.

Ms. Diane Wadel from Marshfield will be the first guest storyteller. Her tales will include "Old One Eye" from the American folklore collection entitled "The Jack Tales," and a Japanese folktale entitled "The Magic Teakettle."

Ms. Wadel has performed in local schools and libraries. Most recently, she participated in the North River Art Society's festival. Her program will last about 45 minutes.

Five young men fit comfortably in this raft at the harbor. Pictured in random order are Danny Curran, Gary Parziale, Pat Leonard, Jay Contis and Greg Brynes.

☐Welcome to the continuing story of Around Town . . . where you and yours make the headlines . . . where little things count. Here's how to get your news to me: you can slip the information into my mailbox at 172 South Main Street or call 383-9115 anytime.

Here now, the news!

☐Saw Fred Howe and Al Odermatt on the beach this past week . . . after three months of rain they alrady have their summer tans . . . sunlamps? Al had two young gals in tow . . . both of whom he introduced to me later at the Strawberry Parfait as his grandnieces.

☐Thirteen year-old Steve Ralff, son of Pat and David Ralff on Lantern Lane, got a HOLE IN ONE at tne Fall River Junior Open on July 2nd. According to sources, he got it on a 170 yard, par three in front of scads of witnesses (which is delicious, because often when we are catching our largest fish there is no one around to notice).

Contrarily, it is when we are doing our very worst that we seem to be in a crowd. Steve has been playing golf at the Cohasset Country Club for the past three years and is beginning to attract the attention of his elders with his game.

☐Peter Pratt is back and John McNabb is gone. John left for a new job in Towanda, Pennsylvania (near Scranton) where he is working (he started Monday) for a group called Health Care Financial Consultants. His first duties (a six month assignment) will be as public relations director/public relations person for a PA hospital.

☐Happy belated birthday to Yvette Rattenbury. She didn't give us a list of her gifts, but she did note that Henry got her a lovely cake which he dropped on the kitchen floor. "Only the flowers andmy name were smeared."They ate it anyway. In other Rattenbury news, Ralph (the family poodle) was put under protective custody over the fourth of July weekend.

☐Debbie Cook, the only Cohasset resident ever grilled by the Hull Selectmen about whether she had eaten at The Maison Robert (and she has never dined there) went sailplaneing over the July 4th weekend.

Her first time up, she was dropped from 4,000 feet and loved every minute of it. While Debbie was having this adventure, Whitney Cook (2½) was toilet-trained by Grandma Cook in Springfield, Vermont. Somehow, Grandmas have a better way of explaining things.

☐The Mitman clan of Beach Street (nee Moyer of Pennsylvania) held a family reunion several weeks ago . . . 27 relatives arrived from as far away as Danville, Virginia . . . the three days of festivities included watersliding at Nantasket Avenue, Hull . . . playing the machines at the park arcade, cruising (provided by Bill Becker who is equally at home in air or water); and an old fashion lobster bake put on by the St. Onges and Jim Hamilton . . . who wore old fashioned waitress uniforms from somebody's attic and tuxes, as they prepared the food in trash barrels.

Entertaining for at least a part of the time was the famous Scott Daniels Band. And on Sunday before the clan packed up to go home, Ed Atkinson of the Unitarian Church gave a sermon entitled "All in the Family." Too bad the Mariner didn't know it before he came and went . . . Millie Mitman has a famous relative. John Cook of the TV soap, "Days of Our Lives" appeared at the reunion and sang in the choir at the Unitarian Church with Millie and Jenny Mitman. After that little three-day festivity, the Mitmans plan to more or less take it easy for a while. Except for Jenny, who is receiving alcolades at the Frank Berman Tennis Academy in New Jersey where she's number three on the ladder! (Happy house painting, Doug.)

☐"I was hoping for a quake in her voice" . . . Laura Doherty said this week after talking to her eight year-old daughter, Allison, who is touring England at this very moment with friends. According to Laura, Alison was a little disappointed the Queen was not in when she visited the castle. But she's been loving riding the double decker buses and will probably have lots to tell us when she get shome.

☐When Miss Doreen Flynn returns to Osgood School this fall she will only be Miss Flynn for a short time. A week or two after school begins she will be married to Jim Trahan, a lawyer from Milton. From all reports, her husband-to-be is a fine person and the marriage has the blessing of the Osgood School administration, and staff. A couple of little boys' hearts may break, however.

☐Ray Remick of Rice Island has a horn on his grey, Datsun 280 Turbo that can play 76 songs . . . "40 songs are college anthems." Obviously, he's been causing quite a sensation in Cohasset these days. "The kids love it. People yell at me." Wouldn't it be lovely to pull out of Curtis Compact, come disasterously close to smashing the headlights of the car you didn't see speeding down South Main Street and instead of that someone giving you the you know what and blaring on their horn, play "Oh, You Beautiful Doll?" Ray Remick can do that.

Cohasset places AFS finalists

The Cohasset Chapter of the American Field Service announces that all five finalists in the AFS international/intercultural program have received their placements in host countries.

Amy Murphy and Justine Hoffman are off to the Netherlands and Spain, respectively, and will be back at the end of August.

Then Paul Dormitzer will leave for his senior year in Lucon, France; and Amy Urmson, in Geneva, Switzerland. These young people will live with families and attend school in their host countries, just as Holly Grant has been doing since January in Uruguay.

After their summer or year abroad, Cohasset AFSers will have many exciting experiences to share with their friends and fellow AFS Club members.

Hiromi and Johanna, AFS students who have lived here for the past year, are now returning home to Japan and Finland. They have brightened the lives of all who have known them, and Cohasset will miss them.

The 'Bus Stop'

They arrived on Monday afternoon and left again on Friday morning, but during the four days they lived in Cohasset, the 34 AFS students from around the globe touched young hearts and began friendships that will be renewed in the future.

Cohasset recently re-activated their chapter of AFS (American Field Service) which had been dormant for a decade. After a successful first year when Cohasset hosted three foreign students, and with five local students now placed for learning experiences abroad, the recent "Bus Stop" made 'converts' of those families who opened their homes for the week. At the closing pot luck supper a sign-up sheet for new AFS members and host families circulated and all of the families present signed up!

How could this group of young people have made such an impact on so many people in such a short time? "They made the world a little smaller," one host parent said. On a one-to-one basis, they rejuvenated hope for peace through friendship. They inspired a stronger dedication to the AFS program by their often courageous perserverance in an alien culture and by their adaptability and optimism.

Make room for grandmother

By Claire McDonough

When William Arthur Philip Luis Windsor is christened, you can bet your last farthing that his paternal grandmother will not be banished to the sidelines.

And I say, let's hear it for the royal Grandmum. Elizabeth II may not be able to dispatch the English Navy against a threatening armada like Good Queen Bess. As a matter of fact, when M. Thatcher deployed the fleet during the recent unpleasantness, Her Royal Highness didn't get to command so much as a tug boat.

As I recall, she couldn't even keep her own son on shore leave for the duration. But when it comes to ceremony and family life, all England is in Her Majesty's Service.

As a grandmother myself, I find Her Highness's position enviable. When I told Eileen that in my day we boiled everything that went near the baby's mouth during the first three months, she raised a superior eyebrow, said, "Really, mother? How positively primitive," and gave Jacob the Wonder Baby some squashed banana on a patently unboiled spoon.

When, out of the goodness of my heart, I informed Mary Claire that a regular bedtime was essential if Christian was to have to discipline at all, she laughed and said that inflexibility is one of the first signs of old age. Of OLD AGE, for heaven's sake!

Jay seemed a little easier. The day I told him that too many sweets weren't good for Tanya he agreed. Then he wouldn't let me give her any more lollypops.

Well, Chuck and Di had better not try any of that nonsense with W.A.P.L. Windsor's grammy. She'll have them exiled. And quite right, too.

There was a time when grandmothers had a little more clout. Do you remember the story Sam Levenson used to tell about the young mother who phoned her mother-in-law in a panic. The baby, it seemed, had swallowed an aspirin.

Grandma dismissed the problem with a royal sweep of her arm.

"So give him a headache," she decreed grandly.

Elizabeth was smart. She established her role early in the marriage. Remember when the newlyweds appeared on the balcony at Windsor Castle to wave at the crowd? Did you notice how Prince Charles looked to his mother for permission before he kissed his bride? Every mother-in-law's dream.

There's no question who'll have the last word on sterilizing, bedtime, diet, potty-training or fresh air in that family. And it's The Tower for anyone who so much as thinks "old age." Heaven.

Grandmothers of the world, unite! You have nothing to lose but a reputation for stupidity. Let's all get behind the royal grandmum. Raise your voices. All together now: A boy's best friend is his mother; father knows best, but for real infallibility it takes a grandma. God save the Queen!

Praise for children's art exhibit

Letters

To the Editor:

I would like to express appreciation to Linda Summers for her conception and organization of the children's art exhibit and activity center at the South Shore Arts Festival. A separate tent was given over to paintings, drawings and chalk portraits by Osgood and Deer Hill students which were created during the school year as a result of the poets-in-residence program.

The pictures were hung low so that children could easily see the artwork and the presentation of puppetry, face painting and other children's activities in or near the tent, made it a very special spot for youngsters (and their parents as well as many other adults)!

The exhibition ably demonstrated the creative impact the residency program had in our schools this year. It was gratifying to see the students' efforts recognized.

Thank you, again, Linda, and Sue DeMichele, for her assistance in hanging the show.

P.S. "Others Croak Back" and "Inside a Mad Dragon," poetry anthologies with illustrations by Deer Hill and Osgood students, respectively, are available, only at Cards and Shards in Cohasset Village for $2 each.

Distressed with fire chief search

[The following is a copy of a letter to Selectmen. Ed.]

I have just read with great distress that the search committee has come up with a list of three candidates which does not include any members of our present department for the position of Fire Chief.

I would like to stress that my own experience as a physician who has to call upon our present departmen frequently for medical assistance has always resulted in an immediate and efficient response. I consider that the present fire department functions without question more efficiently and effectively than any of our surrounding towns.

Since this is so, I do not feel that we should have to go elsewhere for a chief. Not every qualifaication has to come from books and academic degrees. Or department now meets the needs of our town adequately and I hope that your Board will do whatever is necessary to consider our present firefighters for promotion so that the present efficiency and esprit de corps of our department may be continued.

Yours very truly,
Robert T. Sceery, M.D.

Backs Police Chief John DeBassio

[The following is a copy of a letter to Selectmen. Ed.]

I wish to express my strong opposition to your interference in the matter of the authority of Chief John DeBassio. I have been a resident of Cohasset for 32 years and in my opinion he is the most capable and intelligent Chief we have ever had. Let us not lose a man of this caliber.

Very truly yours,
Mildred W. Harrington
Jerusalem Road

What's wrong here?

What's wrong with this picture is the young man jumping off the bridge into the rapids of the Mill River — an activity that is both dangerous and illegal. Police Chief John DeBassio is trying to stop the practice before someone gets hurt. (Greg Derr photo)

From the town clerk...

There were eight reported deaths in Cohasset last month and three births.

The town clerk's office issued six fishing licenses and one raffle permit. Dog licenses were given out to 57 dogs (23 males, five females and 29 spayed females). One small business certificate was issued.

MARRIAGE INTENTIONS

Six couples filed marriage intentions at the town clerk's office in June. Those who intend to marry are: Stephen Etkind to Susan Hurlbert, both of Watertown; Joseph Crossen of Jerusalem Road to Donna Osbourne of Margin Street; Alexander Rose of Ripley Road to Anne Marie Mack of South Main Street; Randolph Jury of Missouri to Elizabeth Conroy of Cushing Road; Matthew Woodworth of Hull to Annette Fagone of Howe Road and Richard Kelly of Norwell to Charlene Hart of Atlantic Avenue.

Selectman Henry Ainslie on the 'Ainslie issue'

(Henry Ainslie, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, released the following statement last week on what he termed the controversy between the Board of Selectmen and the Chief of Police. Ed.)

It is amazing that some otherwise objective townspeople are willing to castigate the Board of Selectmen without obtaining the facts on the recent police department controversy, before sending letters of criticism or signing meaningless petitions. Fortunately, greater numbers have enough trust in the integrity of their elected officials to wait and make an independent judgement when the facts are known.

We are not engaged in a popularity contest but rather in the serious business of directing the Town's affairs in a manner that hopefully represents the feelings and desires of the majority of our community. The molding of a "new" police department geared to the times and addressing the needs of the Town is of utmost importance.

It is primarily through the intense efforts of the undersigned, and Arthur Clark, when he was on the board, that the town was afforded the opportunity to choose a chief outside the civil service system or from out of town. Believe me, it has not endeared me to the many supporters of the system.

As a professional administrator, I will not back off from what I believe to be an individuals's basic right, whether it be stranger, casual acquaintance, friend or relative. Fortunately, there are still elected officials who can stand up to these issues and not fold under the pressure, yet have the objectivity to compromise when a "no-win" situation presents itself, as in the recent aerial spraying issue.

The news media in its endless quest for sensationalism has done the Town a great disservice by misrepresenting or not reporting facts and playing on emotions to the extent the real issues were obscured. In my desire to keep discussions as open as possible, due to the personal issues involved, a forum may have been provided where everyone loses except the press. More importantly, they repeated the slanderous statements of persons of authority who failed to recognize that as an elected official I am "fair-game" in the eyes of the law, but my relatives are not.

There seems to be no way to get the facts out to interested citizens except by direct correspondence, now that cooler heads prevail. This summary is as factual as possible, but may not represent the feelings of the entire board on all issues. Comments dealing with allegations concerning the board chairman, represent his views only, and not necessarily those of the other board members.

The differences between the Board of Selectmen and the Chief of Police revolve about three simple issues:

1. What are the rights of an individual under the civil service laws?
2. What constitutes an acceptable background for police work?
3. Who prevails should there be a difference of opinion?

Taking them in reverse order, the last issue is quite clear as defined in the Town by-laws, general laws of the Commonwealth and the chief's employment contract. All three delegate final authority to the Board of Selectmen.

The second issue is slightly more complex. There is a difference in philosophy between the board and the chief. He has openly stated that he is not interested in "good" reports on a person, only the "bad", which is all that he reported to the board, with a request to terminate the officer without a chance to explain or dispute the allegations.

At least a majority of the board feels that any individual should be judged on a total background review. It also questions that right under civil service regulations to revert for disciplinary purposes to alleged events occurring prior to appointment and certification and not of a serious nature, which is the case.

The first issue is clearly defined in Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 31, Section 34, a copy of which is appended (Exhibit "A"). The chief has continually refused to honor these rights until forced to enter specific charges by the selectmen. For some strange reason, the charges finally made were not those of "background" deficiencies previously publicly proclaimed.

Another point that warrants clarification in the beginning without violating a trust of confidentiality, is the subject of psychological testing. Two members of the board reluctantly acquiesced to the chief's recommendation that the permanent intermittent officers already appointed and certified by civil service be subjected to psychological evaluation. It was felt that the requirement was discrimintory and defenseless before civil service as a reason to discharge anyone, without specific charges related to psychological abnormalities.

Those two members also felt that the cost of psychological testing was an unwarranted expense in a small town department where all candidates were known and the results would be generally inconclusive anyway.

Four permanent intermittent police officers, including Officer Ainslie, were subjected to the testing. One had been evaluated previously.

The evaluations were performed by a registered psychologist, of the chief's choosing, specializing in law-enforcement personnel. He summarized his findings by declaring, "The interpretation of the instruments cannot predict who will make a good police officer and who will not, but they can predict aspects of a candidate's personality which are not compatible with norms established for police officers and municipal personnel"..."In summing up all the information available, it appears that all four of the applicants may indeed be good candidates for police work."

Now, as to the basis for the recent dispute with Chief DeBassio. The subject of permanent intermittent police officers has been a matter of discussion in executive sessions for several months, but it erupted into a major controversy at the selectmen's meeting of June 2, 1982. Permanent Intermittent Police Officer Ainslie having previously requested time on the selectmen's meeting agenda, appeared to ask the appointing authority why he was not being offered special details when out-of-town officers were being used.

Chief DeBassio was scheduled to appear before the board to discuss facility permits. Being the person responsible for assigning details, it seemed appropriate to place the subject on the agenda following the aforementioned facility permit discussion so as not to unduly impose upon his time.

A lively discussion ensued during which the chief said that if the board so voted he would assign the officer to details.

The board felt that such a vote would be inappropriate. The vote finally taken was superfluous and only meant to emphsize civil service laws, Cahpter 31, Section 34 which either the chief does not understand or he refuses to honor them. This has been the basis for our differences for some time.

At the request of Chief DeBassio, town counsel rendered an opinion saying the selectmen acted properly and had not instructed the chief to do anything that is not already required by the General Laws of the Commonwealth.

There has been much ado about the vote taken and subsequent legal opinions, that is easily explained. In order to expedite preparing the minutes of the meeting, so that town counsel's opinion of the vote could be sought, the chairman wrote up the minutes over the weekend so that they would be in proper form. They were turned over to the recording secretary with the instructions that since they were prepared without notes the minutes should be carefully compared to the official record and corrected wherever necessary. Somehow this was not done and the minutes were incorrectly released to the press. When discovered by the recording secretary, there was no choice but to revise the vote accordingly and obtain an opinion of counsel on the revised version.

There was no signigicant difference in meaning between the two versions. The vote was only intended to point out existing law and to satisfy the chief who insisted that a vote be taken.

A copy of the minutes of that meeting are appended hereto (Exhibit "B") together with town counsel's rulings (Exhibits "C" and "D".)

It makes no difference whether or not our police department is under civil service or if it is under either Section 97 or 97A of Chapter 41 of the M.G.L.'s, authority for hiring or firing personnel lies solely with the Board of Selectmen. The chief's recommendations are usually solicited but historically have not always been followed. In no way can this statutory obligation be considered interference with the daily management of the department.

The Division of Personnel Administration indirectly controls and oversees appointing and dismissing of our police personnel, below chief, including the permanent intermittent classification. Any person appointed by the selectmen must be certified for employment by the division who then maintains his/her records. Likewise, a move to terminate a tenured employee is subject to appeal before the Civil Service Commission. All appointments are made from a list compiled by the division following open competitive examinations. Position on the list is based upon examination grades except for veterans who automatically go to the top of the list. Very specific guidelines must be adhered to in selecting from the list.

The appeal process affords a degree of protection from unreasonable or unwarranted punishment by a superior and gives the employee a "day in court" to refute the charges and be judged by an independent panel. This protection extends to any tenured civil service employee, whomever he or she may be, pursuant to Chapter 31, Section 34 of the M.G.L.'s.

The subject of discharge has never been taken lightly by the Board of Selectmen and even more so by the Civil Service Commission. Charges to warrant such drastic action must be proven beyhond a reasonable doubt and be of a nature to justify the degree of punishment.

It was originally intended to discuss the merits of the case but Chief DeBassio has finally recognized the permanent intermittent status of the officer and upon the insistance of the Board of Selectmen has filed specific charges that are under appeal. Therefore, any comments along these lines would be inappropriate.

In the interest of common decency, with all the character assassinations being made in public meetings for which I, as Chairman, must take full responsibility for not cutting off debate, it behooves me on behalf of the town to set the record straight as far as Permanent Intermittent Police Officer, Lawrence D. Ainslie Jr., is concerned. Therefore, a summary of his background qualifications, experience and present status is appended for your information (Exhibit "E"). This summary has been supplied by the officer at his own expense, including duplicating costs.

The issue of permanent intermittent appointments has again raised the question, that the selectmen have freely discussed, as to how the present permanent intermittent list was selected. The addended minutes of the March 19, 1980 executive session of the board that were released shortly after the meeting, explain the criteria used for selecting candidates (Exhibit "F"). The procedure was later confirmed by the Division of Personnel Administration. Officers Cogill, Small and Yocum on that list have subsequently been elevated to permanent status.

A question of a potential conflict of interest was raised by a member of the local press through the district attorney's office. A reply to that charge is also addended (Exhibit "G").

Allegations have been made that the Board of Selectmen have interfered with the day-to-day operations of the department. Nothing could be further from the truth. A request for specific instances of those accusations is still unanswered by Chief DeBassio.

There is no question that the board should not be involved in the daily administration of police matters and there is nothing to suggest that it has done so. However, as the appointing authority, it should be and is very much involved in appointments, internal affairs investigations and disciplinary matters, including dismissal after a hearing, when appropriate.

Of course, the Board of Selectmen is also responsible for promulgating rules and regulations for governing the activities of the entire department pursuant to Section 97 of Chapter 41 of the M.G.L.'s. As a practical matter, the chief compiles them for review and revision by the board as it may determine. This is actually the procedure required under Section 97A except that there is a time limit on the approval process.

All of the above are statutory obligations that, hopefully, are not daily occurrences and can hardly be construed as day-to-day operations.

There are some people second-guessing as to what the selectmen represented to the town meeting when the chief's position was removed from civil service. Those representations were in a prepared speech, the manuscript of which is available for review. It said in part, "Make the successful candidate answer to the townspeople through their elected representatives, the Selectmen." "The present board has never demonstrated a desire to unduly influence the day-to-day operations of the department and would not do so in the future."

I have kept that pledge and the record will show that I have. As far as I know, the other board members have, also.

If the selection committee represented otherwise, they were unauthorized to do so. Having handled Chief DeBassio's contract negotiations for the board and being involved in his interview before the board, I am certain no other representations were client's employment with Osco Drug was included on a resume given to selectmen.

DeBassio spoke of incorrect information given by Ainslie concerning a small claims rent dispute in Quincy District Court, charging that Ainslie had incorrectly reported the case as settled.

The chief also said Ainslie failed to mention his job as a security guard at the Cox Estate for which he was dismissed. At the time he was working for the Pinkerton Security Co.

"I am just appalled at the absurdity of these allegations," responded Fitzsimmons. "This is ridiculous." On another occasion, while DeBassio was testifying, he whispered to his client, "this is off the wall."

Fitzsimmons complained that DeBassio used evidence dating back three years. He called it irrevelant because Ainslie had not yet served as a permanent intermittent.

At one point, Fitzsimmons cracked that he was waiting for Ainslie's third grade teacher to be brought in to testify about Ainslie's chewing gum in class.

DeBassio had planned to call one outside witness during the hearing; Fitzsimmons said he had no witnesses scheduled.

The chief's witness, Steve Walsh of Norwell, wasn't allowed in the town hall auditorium while the hearing was in progress. He waited on the steps outside listening, he said, to the songs of Loretta Lynn who was performing at the Music Circus.

In a related action, Atty. Fitzsimmons petitioned the Massachusetts Civil Service to consider the case and to restore Ainslie to "his employment immediately without loss of compensation or other rights."

In a letter to Civil Service, Fitzsimmons said DeBassio's "bringing of these allegations some 2-3 years after they allegedly took place is patently unfair and unjust because of the element of delay alone."

The chief, Fitzsimmons wrote, is clearly acting to prejudice Ainslie's career as a police officer by these belated allegations.

'Ainslie issue'...

made.

He was made aware that the department was under civil service, including permanent intermittents. Unfortunately, it was only assumed that he knew how to work within the system.

Some progress has been made in this regard within the past week or so. The chief has finally acknowledged that the employee is a tenured permanent intermittent police officer with all the rights granted him under Chapter 31, Section 34 of the M.G.L.'s, even if it is only for the purpose of filing charges.

In conclusion, I will never subscribe to the J. Edgar Hoover concept of law enforcement and I do not believe that the majority of townspeople will either. I intend to speak out and do everything possible to see that it does not happen.

Rep. Murray raps the Tregor (Boston Bailout) bill

"After 18 months and countless redrafts, Tregor is now law...and I have problems with that," said State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray last week.

"I and many of my colleagues voted against the final version of Tregor, also known as the Boston Bailout Bill. We voted against the measure for various reasons, but most importantly because it was a bill in which Boston was not required to help itself. Moreover, the burden of Tregor's funding was placed at the doorsteps of the other cities and towns in the Commonwealth," Mary Jeanette Murray continued.

The Cohasset, Hingham and Hull legislator said, "Let me provide you with a synopsis of the Tregor Bill: Boston would be authorized to issue $45 million in bonds to fund Tregor abatements. Debt service on the abatements would be paid in several different ways including adjusting the hotel room occupancy tax to Boston's benefit.

Presently, there is a hotel and motel tax paid by room occupants throughout the state, which goes directly into our state coffers. The Tregor Bill provides for the room occupancy tax collected from Boston Hotels opened after Aug. 1, 1981, to be dedicated to Boston for debt service on Tregor bonds.

The city bonds would further be repaid by transferring money collected by the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds from the County to the City of Boston. This would be the equivalent of allowing a single city or town of our country to receive our county taxes, thereby shorting the rest of the county of these funds."

Rep. Murray is concerned about the establishment of still another government bureaucracy plus the cost to her taxpayers. "One of the most important provisions of the Boston Bill requires the state to purchase the Hynes Auditorium and the Boston Common Garage. State monies would be used; however, the purchase price has not yet been determined and could be far greater than anticipated."

In 1980 a law, Chapter 486, was passed issuing a bond authorization of $30 million to be used expressly for aid to civic centers. The Tregor Bill speaks of a net increase of $70 million above the present level and would allow a newly established Massachusetts Convention Center Authority immediate access to the money for funding for the Hynes project for the reconstruction, expansion and remodeling of such properties necessary to develop and establish the proposed convention center.

Tregor establishes this Massachusetts Convention Center Authority. The membership of the Authority would consist of four appointees of the Governor, two appointees of the Mayor of the City of Boston and the State Treasurer, who will serve as chairman.

In this portion of the bill, there is a provision which states that the salary of the executive director of the Convention Center cannot be reduced without his consent during his tenure in office. This salary clause is, in my view, irresponsible."

Murray concluded, "Boston is a fine city and the capitol of our state. It greets many visitors and workers from other parts of the Commonwealth, nation and world, daily. Yes, I understand that a fiscal reform bill for Boston was necessary, but not one which asks so much support from the rest of the state.

"Boston must learn to take positive steps in solving its fiscal problems."

The inventory keeps growing for celebrity auction

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Historical Society's gala 1982 Celebrity Auction will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall Saturday, Aug. 7, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., or until all auction items are gone.

Up to now, more than 275 separate auction items have been received, and more are arriving daily. It promises to be a busy afternoon both for the Society's Guest Auctioneers and for lucky bidders as an amazingly wide range of fascinating things will be presented by a triumverate of media personalities who will be serving as volunteer auctioneers.

Guest auctioneer for the Society's Celebrity Auction will be a well-known voice in the Boston area. Nick Mills of Hingham is scheduled to hold forth as master of ceremonies and chief auctioneer. For any who my not have heard Nick, he is the News Director and morning news anchorman on WITS radio in Boston.

Nick comes to the Celebrity Auction having long experience in the field of broadcasting, having for over 10 years been a morning news voice in Boston. He started in 1970 on WHDH where he shared the microphone with Jess Cain. Nick left Boston in 1976 for a two-year stint as a newscaster on the ABC Radio Network but returned in 1978 to head the WITS news team.

Nick is a graduate of Boston University. After college he served as a Peace Corps Volunteer in Colombia, then served for two years in the U.S. Army. As a lieutenant he commanded a combat photography team in Vietnam.

Nick Mills has a special reason for wanting to serve as the Society's Guest Auctioneer, for last year he and his wife Heather Conover were married in a Christmastime wedding ceremony performed at the Society's historic Lothrop House on Summer Street in Cohasset.

Nick has chosen two well-known Boston personalities to assist as Celebrity Auctioneers. The Husband and wife team of Norma and Norman Nathan. She is a regular columnist for the Herald American newspaper, and he is the familier voice of the Norm Nathan Show, radio WRKO's morning program.

As for the auction itself, a fascinating collection of items has been received by the Society. To be auctioned to lucky high bidders will be such valuable items as books by Billy Graham, Jean Dixon, Norman Vincent Peal and Commander Tyrone Martin of Cohasset whose historic book of the ship that was his command, the famous frigate Constitution, is considered to be the definitive biography of that famous vessel.

From the Boston Red Sox has arrived a pair of tickets for the Aug. 15 Fenway Park game with the Orioles, and from Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset, a 3' x 5' new flag of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Prof. Arthur Schlesinger has contributed an autographed copy of one of his writings; the Boston and Pittsburgh Steelers are among the teams sending signed footballs.

From Louis Rukeyser, financial wizard, has come an autographed copy of one of his series of T.V. programs. The actor Carrol O'Connor has sent an autographed flashlight dedicated to "my friends who fall down in the dark." Entertainer Steve Allen has sent an interesting family game devised by himself; and Henry Winkler an autographed script from the T.V. show "Happy Days."

Author Tom Wicker of the New York Times sends an autographed copy of his book "Facing the Lions." From the Utah Jazz comes a team tee-shirt, one of several received from sports teams. Ed McMahon of the Johnny Carson Show has given a genuine paperweight and from author Jean Fritz has arrived a fine piece of antique China piecework.

These are but a few of the fascinating items received so far by the Historical Society for its giant auction. There are many, many more, and on August 7, all must go, go to the highest bidders. The Historical Society's 1982 Celebrity Auction is a fund-raiser for the Society's Museum building restoration and preservation fund.

It is vital that extensive and costly work be done to the Society's fine old museum buildings at Cohasset Center and at the Lothrop House; and proceeds from the coming auction will help greatly in this worthy project.

Calling Cohasset pets to Heritage Days

Several special events will be held in North Scituate Saturday, Aug. 7, in connection with the townwide observance of the 14th annual Heritage Days to be held August 6 to 8.

For the first time, merchants will set up a sidewalk bazaar in the North Scituate business center.

The popular Children's Pet Dog Show of a few years ago will return this year and will be held in the parking lot of Wilder Brothers Tire Mart.

Children of year-round and summer residents of Scituate and neighboring South Shore towns, as well as tourists, may enter their leashed and 1982 — licensed dogs by registering at 9:30 a.m. There are no specific categories for judging, but registrants will be given a numbered ticket for a drawing for prizes.

As part of the Pet Dog Show, Malcolm Wilder, chairman, who is also director of Wilder's Dog Training School, will give a free lesson in dog handling and basic obedience training.

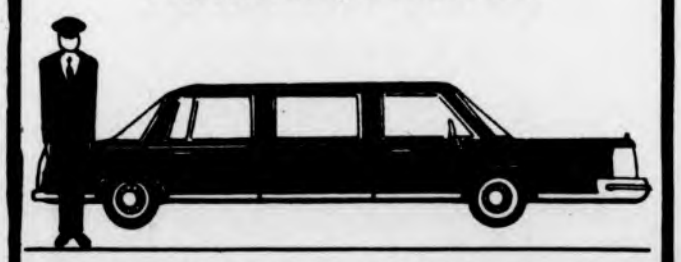
Following the lesson, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burke of Norwell, members of the Southeastern Massachusetts Sled Dog Association, will bring their sled dogs and give a demonstration of harnessed driving.

From 1 to 4 p.m., there will be pottery making, wood refinishing and flower arranging demonstrations beneath a tent in the backyard of Bound Brook Hardware on Country Way.

Town legal expenses saved

Lowry and Diana Bell helped the town accountant last week to save $1812.50 in legal expenses which were to be paid to the Boston Tow firm of Burns and Levinson for work on the tennis court controversy.

The Burns and Levinson firm told Town Accountant Bill Signorelli that three line items totaling $1,812.50 were mistakenly included in a bill dated June 22. That bill amounted to $2,365.21.



The Bells spotted the extra charges because they recognize the line items as being related to the recent Appeal Court case which was supposed to amount to a flat fee of $1,000. On the June 22 bill, both the flat fee and a $1,812.50 charge were included as line items.

Selectmen approved a payment of $2,365 last week to Burns and Levinson for services rendered in fiscal year 1982. That payment was minus the overcharge. Signorelli said he would have spotted one line item of $437 as suspicious but would not have known that the other two line items of prepared arguments were related to the Appeals Court case.

Angler's corner...

The inevitable summer doldrums are here which is bad news, but it doesn't mean you need to shelve your fishing in favor of improving your backhand. There are fish around, and you will simply have to work to get them.

For example, it is an accepted fact that striped bass fishing in local waters is lousy. That is a half truth, because bass are still being taken on lures and live bait...off the North River mouth, in the white water off Cohasset and in Duxbury Bay. Two good keeper bass were taken on successive nights in the bay last week (32 and 28 pounds). Both were caught on pogies and both were taken on the incoming tide. We fished the out-going tide and got nothing but a few puny flounder.

The best bluefishing is still "across the bay" at Race Point and off Provincetown. Most are taken on lures and umbrella rigs trolled deep. Locally blues are strictly hit or miss, but if you are persistent, you will hit.

Roger Jarvis who charters the "Misty" out of Green Harbor and knows of what he speaks said blues are occasionally on top of the water but don't stay there long.

Last week he was bluefishing across the bay and about halfway back spotted a bluefin tuna sunning itself on top. Out came the harpoon and after a brief struggle, Roger had landed himself an 867-pound bluefin. Other recent catches have been taken by Don Hebert and Kevin Scola. Harpooners have been doing well, but handliners, using chum, are also starting to succeed.

We know the bluefin season is starting in earnest, because representatives of Japanese buyers are showing up locally.

... Mackerel fishing has been mediocre for several years in local waters but, according to Sir Roger, some have popped up in the last week. Try off the Gurnet and the mouth of the North River.

... Striper fishing, which has ranged from fair-to-excellent off Stellwagen Bank, is now fair-to-poor and for a lot of that we can blame dogfish. They are everywhere and are most adept at gobbling the bait meant for bass swimming below.

... Fluke fishing is usually associated with Cape fishing, but we caught one in Duxbury Bay last week which proves they're local too. Right?

Fluke, incidentally, are responsible for the expression, "it's a fluke." Why? Well, without getting complicated, we'll simply say that they swim differently from other flatfish.

... Snapper blues (little bluefish) are being caught in Green Harbor...There are still flounder in Scituate Harbor...Cod are still deep.

... Trout fishing is still good on the Cape. Correspondent Blaisdell caught several healthy rainbows (up to 18 inches) and a few browns and brookies in Ashument Pond Sunday. He fished in deep waters and used corn.

Other good Cape trout spots include the Quashnet River in Falmouth (browns taking flies) and the Mashpee River in Mashpee which is producing native brookies on wet flies or worms.

A few smallmouth bass were caught while night fishing at Big Island Pond, Plymouth, and Hackett's Pond in Hanover has yielded some worthwhile perch. Fish down near the dam.

... We see lots of fishermen but no fish at the Cape Cod Canal.

... The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency reports that 45 per cent (772 miles) of Massachusetts major river mileage is suitable for fishing. That should make your day.

Cohasset Fleet 210 hosts August championships

The Cohasset Fleet of the International 210 Association will host the National Championships from August 16 to 20 in Cohasset.

The competition is open and any dues paying member is eligible to participate, according to co-chairmen John Keane and Richard Sullivan.

"In the past, a member had to be in one of the top three boats in his fleet or the winner of a class sanction event in order to qualify," Keane explained. "By opening the event to all members, we hope to give people who have never competed a chance to participate," he added.

Between 40 and 45 entries are expected from as far away as Gull Lake, Wisconsin and Kalamazoo, Michigan.

The International 210 Association was founded after World War II and has members throughout the United States.

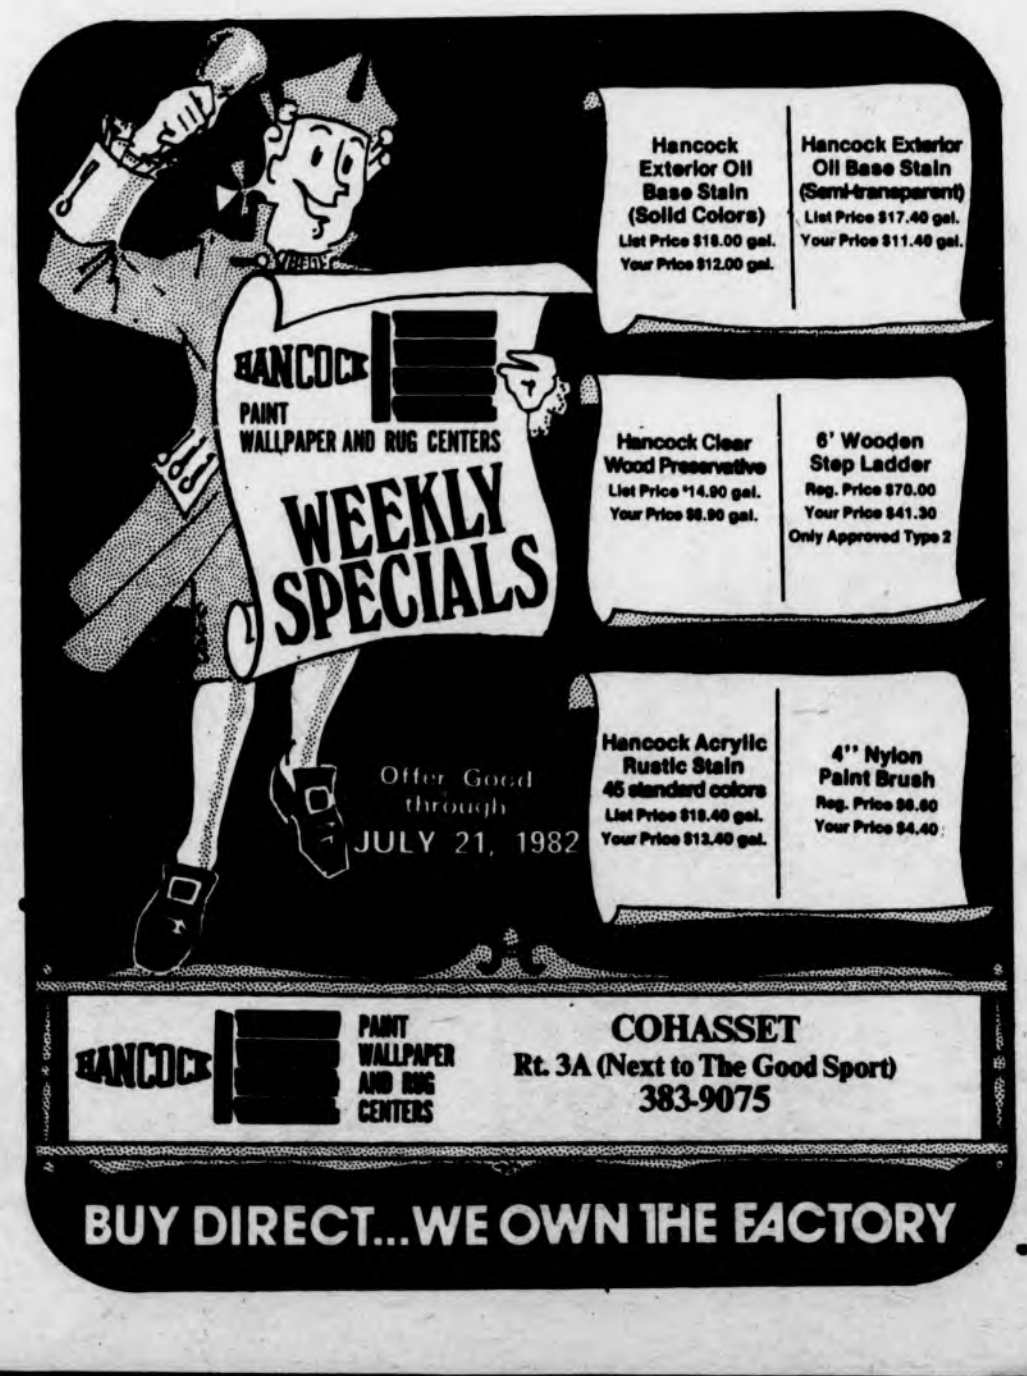
Around Town



☐Attending the New England Wrestling School clinic at Boston University this week are frosh: Brian Leary, John Ripley and Noel Ripley . . . all fine up and coming young matmen who are sure to be a credit to the high school wrestling team this year!

☐THE LAST BUS RIDE . . . it's not playing in Scituate or Hingham. But it got beautiful reviews . . . it being one of those happy/sad occasions when a very special person retires from a job, but not just a job, she did so well and made so much fun for everyone.

Osgood School children marked Beth Goff's retirement as school bus driver, playground aid, good friend, second in command at Osgood the day school closed for the summer. The children gathered in front of Beth Goff's bus on the last day of school and sang "Let There Be Peace on Earth." Snapper Sneakers Turtle was there to witness the tribute after which the children "ballooned" her!

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

July is...wild roses blooming by the sea and daisies and day lillies in the fields...sweet, ripe raspberries and crisp lettuce from the backyard garden...Snowy egrets gracing the marshes and those chubby little black birds with white tails one sees traveling in flocks out over the ocean (they never come into shore), known as Wilson's petrels. Many are rejoicing in our little vegetable patches, feeling rather smug when we see the prices at the supermarket; lettuce, celery, string beans and apples, hovering around a dollar. Soon blueberries will be ripe for the picking and you may want to try my favorite

MAINE BLUEBERRY PIE

1 9" baked pie shell
1 qt. blueberries
1 c. sugar
3/4 c. cold water
2 T flour
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 c. water

Take out 3 cups blueberries. To the remaining berries, add sugar, 3/4 c. water and cook until soft. Make paste of flour, salt and cold water and cook slowly till thickened. Add hot mixture to uncooked, 3 cups of berries. Cool, pour into shell. Chill for three hours. Serve with whipped or ice cream.

Bet you didn't know July is named after Julius Ceasar who celebrated his birthday this month many moons ago. For those who believe in the signs of the Zodiac and were born under the sign of Cancer (June 21 to July 22), you also might know that these "moon children" are fickle in love and should never marry early. Not all bad, though, for July babies are supposedly endowed with strong determination, intuition and purpose; are restless, ambitious and fond of travel. Sound like anyone you know? So, take them on a picnic. If it's a spur of the moment birthday party, just stop at your deli. You'll need 1/4 pound of meat, cheese and shrimp per person and about 1/4 c. deli salad to top each open-faced sandwich made of assorted sliced cooked meats: ham, turkey, corned beef, roast beef, cold cuts; assorted cheeses: cheddar, Monterey Jack, Swiss; canned tiny shrimp, chilled, rinsed and drained. Also pack in your cooler some three-bean, potato and coleslaw salads, some fruit and wine and you're off and away.

A dear friend of mine says about the only time she spends in the house these days is to sleep and prepare a meal. Never one to miss a moment of July's fleeting beauty, fresh veggies are fixed for the evening meal on their deck overlooking the marshes which border the river. So, if it's your turn to have "the girls" over for luncheon, close the door on the gathering dust and turn your back on the ironing that is piling up and set a table under a shady tree and eat outside. Nothing could be more refreshing on a summery day than Carol Larson's cream salad, a recipe you have seen here some time ago, but so good it bears repeating and for want of a name, we'll call

CAROL'S STRAWBERRY SALAD

2 c. sour cream
1 #1 can crushed pineapple
1 lb. pkg. frozen strawberries
2 pkg. strawberry jello
1½ c. hot water
1/2 c. drained pineapple juice
2 bananas, finely diced

Mix jello with water. Add other ingredients, except sour cream. Pour 1/2 of recipe in 9 x 9" pan, or deep serving bowl. When set, put sour cream on top. When remaining mixture has stiffened somewhat, pour on top of sour cream. Chill until firm.

A glass of iced tea is seldom refused, if only for the cooling sound of the clink of iced cubes. A little booklet from Twinings of London tells how to make a perfect brew. They should know, for they have been selling tea and coffee since 1706 in the Strand.

ICED TEA

Make a pot of tea in the same way as for a hot brew, but use four times as much tea. Then strain the tea into an equal quantity of cold water, allowing no tea leaves into the liquor. Pour the tea onto ice cubes in large glasses. Fresh lemon juice, mint or sugar can be added if desired.

Family story hour at Paul Pratt Library

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library invites school-age children and their parents to a Family Story Hour on Monday, July 26 at 7:30 p.m.

This program is the second in a series of five evening programs for family enjoyment.

Ms. Beryl Beatley, supervisor of children's services for the Newton Free Library, will be the guest storyteller for this second program. Her stories will include a favorite classic, "The Elephant's Child" by Kipling as well as the "Little Dressmaker" by Eleanor Farjeon.

Ms. Beatley has performed extensively throughout the New England area. She also organized and implemented the highly successful "Family Story Hour" at the Newton Free Library, a program which became the model for others in the area. Ms. Beatley's program will last about an hour.

Greek Taverna succeeds

Thank you, one and all, for helping make the Third Annual, July 4th Weekend, Greek Taverna, sponsored by the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church (Pope Memorial) in Cohasset such a success!

All the work which is involved in the Taverna was richly rewarded by the smiling faces, the laughter and obvious good times shared by everyone who attended.

The Greek foods, needless to say, were scrumptious, the Greek dancing lessons thoroughly enjoyed. One of the highlights of the festivities was the drawing for the five wonderful raffle prizes, done at 6:30 p.m. on Sunday, July 4.

Here are the winners: first, the Atari and five games was won by Mr. H. Betzger of Braintree; second, the Seiko watch, by Mr. F. Shaver of Cohasset; third, the Kodak disc camera, by Ms. C. O'Rourke of Dorchester; fourth, the G.E. Walk Around Stereo Cassette Player, by Mr. S. Carroll of Rockland; and fifth, the case of champagne, by Mrs. H. Thistlewaite of Cohasset.

We want to wish a special congratulations to these lucky people, and enjoy your prizes!

We all had such a good time at our July Taverna, that Panagia members are now organizing for the next summertime Taverna to be held Aug. 14 and 15. The hours will be the same, the food will be just as delicious, the music and lessons just as satisfying and the raffle prizes just as special.

Welcome, one and all, to our August, "Eat, Drink, Be Merry" Greek Taverna. What a great way to celebrate a beautiful summer weekend!

It's not AFS — but it's 'WES' and fun

By Lois Martin

About this time last summer I had an urge to do something different on a vacation. So I worked... seven jobs in three days, things I hadn't done or didn't do well. Loved it. Laughed a lot. And I want to do that again, but not now.

Because this year I've got a new idea...an editor swap. If kids can have the AFS (American Field Service) exchange student program, I decided editors could work on different papers, for a buswoman's holiday of sorts.

Unable to arrange the swap in Honolulu, (don't think I won't give it a shot), the Mariner instead will be host to a New Hampshire editor and he'll host me.

PATCHES

That'll be Doug Rooks, editor of the Granite State News of Wolfboro, N.H. on the gorgeous Winnipesaukee. (That's so much harder to spell than North River or even Atlantic.)

He said his Publisher was a bit skeptical at first (wise man) but now he thinks it's a great idea. The size of Granite State News is like that of the Globe, standard. The Mariner is a tab(loid). That paper is 123 years old. The Mariner is 10. They are both weeklies. This publication serves a town of about 21,000 with a far higher number in the summer.

Granite State News is in a hometown that's about a quarter that size but it quadruples in the summer and it also reports news of nearby towns.

Headlines in the Granite State News June 23 included news of the high school graduation, vacation rentals, a found child and a fuel firm's plans.

And Doug Rooks, with wife Lorna, will come to Marshfield Aug. 11. That's a Wednesday and he'll be swished around town on a tour and then he'll work in Marshfield, covering meetings, reporting and writing a commentary on his impressions of Marshfield. (Everybody smile and act nice!)

Then later that month, Aug. 22, I'll go to New Hampshire, get to see that Lake Winnipesaukee and write for the issue of the Granite State News.

I've never been to Wolfboro. Nor has Doug been to Marshfield. So each of us will have the advantage of being fresh in a community and the disadvantage of not knowing a darn thing about it...

But it'll be interesting. I saw his picture in that paper. He has a beard. I don't. Honest. He writes a column called "Perspectives." This column is probably short on perspective, but we're big on the prospective visit from the visiting editor.

Still I'd like my former employers of last year, the most courageous sports among a community of them, to keep my work ethic in mind. 'Cause I plan to do the short stints again. And this is a warning: I might not go for short charter flights over town, but I definitely will include a shift with a taxi...all hail a good cabbie!

Flags donated

Supporters of selectmen Rocky Laugelle who was re-elected to office in the spring, donated two flags with stands to the town.

A United States flag and Massachusetts state flag are now housed in the corners of the selectmen's office at town hall.

Government Island policy

Selectmen voted last Wednesday to ask $750 up front from new tenants at the Government Island apartment. The $750 includes first and last month's rent along with a $250 security deposit.

The board also voted to require that a one year lease be signed by new tenants and then be renewed annually at the selectmen's discretion.

Selectmen are expected to choose a new occupant for the vacant apartment soon. Selectmen began their tenant search in June and Executive Secretary Arthur Clark has narrowed the field to three potential tenants.

The Vedanta Centre links Cohasset with Calcutta

From the Vendanta Centre

What does the genteel town of Cohasset have in common with Calcutta, possibly the poorest city on earth? Both possess a branch of the Ananda Ashrama, a religious organization founded over 50 years ago by Swami Paramananda of India.

Both centers are currently directed by Swami Paramananda's successor, the Reverend Mother Gayatri Devi, a 75-year-old Indian woman who has been teaching Eastern spirituality in America since 1927. Both centers are dedicated to the joint ideal of love of God and service of man.

There the similarities end. The Cohasset ashrama, or peace retreat, more generally known as the Vedanta Centre, is a tranquil haven set amidst twenty-one acres of woodland.

Interested people come to meditate in its chapel, called the "Temple of the Universal Spirit" and dedicated to all world religions; spiritual seekers from throughout the United States and abroad make retreats in its picturesque guest cottages; its small resident monastic community, comprised mostly of American young men and women in their twenties and thirties (although the community's oldest member, Brother Richard, is 89) lead a seemingly idyllic life.

They divide their time between three daily periods of meditation and prayer, maintenance of the grounds and buildings, working in the flower gardens and vegetable garden (which feeds the community year-round), publishing books on Vedanta philosophy, and cooking for the community and retreatants (whose contributions help support the Centre).

The Vedanta Centre's service to the larger community was described by Sister Sudha: "We have public services on Sunday morning and classes Thursday nights in which we present a philosophy and a spiritual approach to living. We feel that Vedanta gives people the strength to cope with their problems and the wisdom to transcend them. People come to the ashrama in mental distress, perhaps faced with marital of family troubles, or depressed, or unsettled, and they find peace here. Not a soporific peace, but an inner assurance and strength that enables them to deal with their outer challenges."

The human problems ministered to by the vedanta Centre's Calcutta branch are vastly different. Primarily a social service center, the bustling Calcutta Ananda Ashrama provides a home for seventy-five destitute girls and about thirty-five dependant women, primary and secondary education to nearly 3,000 day students, vocational training in weaving, embroidery, tailoring, etc., and adult education.

According to the Cohasset ashrama's Sister Suradhuni, who spent last winter working at their Calcutta branch, what it provides most is "opportunity." "These are people who would otherwise have no possibility of leading self-supporting, self-respecting lives. We have orphan children who probably would have received no education whatsoever, and now they hope to become nurses, doctors, secretaries, etc. And they are intelligent enough to realize those goals, if we can provide the higher education. We have young widows and abandoned wives who could never remarry, because of societal restrictions, some of them with children to support, and we are teaching them vocational skills so they can get respectable jobs as weavers or tailors, rather than having to stand in charity lines.

To support this work the Vedanta Centre is holding its second annual "Festive Fair and Bazaar" on Saturday, July 31, and Sunday, Aug. 1. The event will feature minstrels, games, horse rides for children, and other entertainment, along with tables spread with antiques, white elephants, handicrafts, and the community's own gourmet vegetarian food, homemade bread, and pastries. It will also give South Shore residents a chance to sample the Vendanta Centre's peaceful atmosphere.

So whether people come to the fair our of curiosity, or to support a worthy cause in India, or just to pick up some bargains and have fun, the Vedanta Centre fair and bazaar is sure to be a unique experience.

Cohasset swimmers sink Duxbury

By Donna Cogliano

In the season opener on Friday the Cohasset Swim team defeated Aqua-Dux of Duxbury, 321-246. In this contest eight pool records were set at the Cohasset Swim Center with four broken by Cohasset swimmers.

The Cohasset squad is made up of nearly 180 members and each meet features 61 events.

The Cohasset swimmers jumped out to an early lead during the diving competition and placed four times. Robbie Lowe was first, his age group of 16 and under and Jane deLima won the 12 and under competition. Julie Sechen was second behind Lowe and Cindy Spooner was third in the 12 and unders.

In the girls' eight and under races Niffy Jackson won four swimming events including a relay. She set a new pool record in the freestyle for her age group.

Four boys won two events each for Cohasset enroute to the 75-point margin of victory. Double winners for Cohasset were Jonathan deLima, Ian Knox, Eric Karcher and Stephen Camardo.

Camardo set two new pool records — one in the 16 and under backstroke and the other in the freestyle relay with teammates Jay Santini, James Dillon and Mike Cunning. Camardo was also tied with a Duxbury swimmer in setting a new best in the butterfly event.

Other first place finishers for Cohasset included: Craig Carter, Alida Dean, Com Crocker, Matt Buckley, Cindy Spooner, Sara Bishop, Bridget Cox, Danny Camardo and John Jackson.

The Aqua-Dux team set four pool records in the boys 16 and under individual medley, freestyle, medley relay, and in the girls 12 and under individual relay.

The Cohasset coaches agreed that everyone swam a fantastic meet as seen by the margin of victory. Coaches Doug Bell, Brenda Birmann and Erin O'Brien wish to thank all who helped in running the meet.

The Cohasset team faces Boston College in a home meet on Friday at 1 p.m.

Porter sails into first place of Flying Scott race

Skipper Roger Porter sailed to catch Peter Chapman in the final leg of the Flying Scott race for a first place finish Saturday.

Chapman and crew member Jeannie Baccari had owned first place from the start of the race and seemed destined to win. But Roger Porter and crew member Jimmy Porter clung to second place for much of the race and sprinted to victory at the finish.

Raymond Kasperowicz and Bob Davenport clinched third place with the husband and wife team of Steve and Karin Bartow in fourth, which was their best finish this summer. Skipper Terry Young and crew member Regina Schultz completed the eight leg course in fifth place.

Rob Henry and Dave Croniger wound up sixth and Dick Horn and Gerry Schultz were seventh place finishers.

(Note: Donna Cogliano failed to mention her presence in the Bartow boat and the assistance she lent to their "best-yet" finish! K.B.)

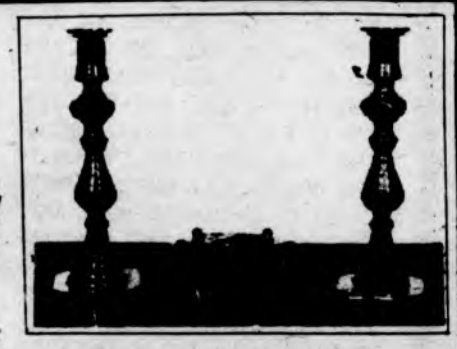
The Hingham Institution's MAGIC MONEY CERTIFICATE
It May Be The BEST INVESTMENT In AMERICA Today!

Until today, there has been no investment offered by H.I.S. that gives you absolute security, high yield, and the chance to get at your money when you need it sinply by writing a check.*

Today Hingham Institution for Savings has made this investment a reality. Our new Magic Money Certificates are a major financial breakthrough because you are guaranteed all three of the basic elements of smart investing — security, liquidity and high yield. With $10,000.00 or more to invest, you can begin taking advantage of this new financial opportunity right now. Compare new Magic Money Certificates with other investments, and we think you will agree that Magic Money Certificates are the best investment you can make today.

MAGIC MONEY CERTIFICATES vs REGULAR SIX-MONTH CERTIFICATES



When you buy a regular six-month certificate, the kind offered by many banks today, your money is virtually tied up for six months. If you want to use part or all of the money, you pay a severe penalty that wipes out much of the potential earning power of that certificate. Magic Money Certificates actually allow you to use the money you have invested without being penalized simply by writing a check.* In short — you get all the guaranteed security of a regular six-month certificate (issued by Hingham Institution for Savings and insured by the Deposit Insurance Fund) and you also get the freedom to use your money if the need arises.

MAGIC MONEY CERTIFICATES vs MONEY MARKET FUNDS

Money Market Funds have received a lot of publicity over the past year or so. But no matter what you may have heart — Money Market Funds are an uninsured investment. Their rates fluctuate and your return can go down. There are also fees invovled in the purchase of some Money Market Funds. Magic Money Certificates involve no fees to purchase.

*Pre-authorized collateral loan agreement allows checks to be written against the certificate at an annual percentage rate of 1½% per year more than the certificate interest rate. If you decide NOT to exercise the check-writing privilege, and instead withdraw any part of the principal prior to maturity, Federal Regulations require a substantial penalty.

Around Town

☐Jennifer C. Maire and Susan C. Woods of Cohasset received Bachelor of Arts degrees at the 161st commencement exercises of Colby college (Waterville, Maine) May 30.

Miss Maire graduated cum laude with distinction in the major of classics. She is the daughter of Mr. Max S. Maire and prepared for college at Noble and Greenough School.

Miss Woods majored in administrative science. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Edward F. Woods and prepared for college at Milton Academy for Girls.

☐It's always fun to call Tana Carlson.

Hello!

Hello, Tana?

This is Tana.

This is Tanna.

Hi, Tanna! Oh, I love being able to say that to someone else. Never knew another Tana (with any n's) before I met Tana Carlson at college. Then for about 15 years I didn't know what happened to her until I saw her at a Cohasset Memorial Day Parade. We both married blind dates from Lehigh University in Bethlehem. We both have two sons. Tana's 15 year old son, Gary, is presently attending Wilderness Camp somewhere in Canada. No one's very sure where he is exactly because the campers move around a lot. Twelve year-old Eric Carlson is camping in New Hampshire. Paul is boating. And Tana is walking the dog.

Local realtors continue to prosper

By Jane Lane

Despite forecasts of impending economic doom and a slumping national housing market, realtors in Cohasset are optimistic.

A brisk business in the sale of housing in Cohasset is credited to several factors, including transfer of business executives into the town, the "lure" of this attractive coastal community, and the advantage of a nationally-recognized school system.

All realtors agree the hardest hit of the 16 percent mortgage interest rates is the first-time home buyer. According to Eugene Price, young prospective homeowners find it exceptionally difficult to meet the requirements of purchasing a home, particularly in more expensive markets such as Cohasset.

"In many cases, these young people are paying a high rent for their apartments, and they are often trying to pay back things like student loans," Price said. "And on top of this, they have to come up with a 20 percent downpayment. That is exceptionally difficult, especially in Cohasset, where many of the homes are higher-priced."

Cohasset is faring better than many other real estate markets because of the appeal the town holds for "executive transfers."This term applies to the executive who is transferred from one city to another and is relocated at the company's expense. Companies are attracted to Cohasset because of the relatively short commute to Boston, the appeal of the seacoast, the sound educational system, and the prospective easy resale of the property in later years.

"Most people realize that if an executive is transferred to another city in another three to four years, the resale value on the South Shore is better than inland," Price maintained. "The chances for reselling the property are better in a shorter period of time in Cohasset.

"Wherever you go, you are going to pay substantial taxes," he added. "But if you are getting an oceanfront home, you are getting a better deal for those tax dollars. And Cohasset has a very good reputation for its school system. Many people check out the school system before they decide to relocate into any community. This town has a national reputation for putting kids into 'name' colleges. It's a respected school system."

Tom Hamilton of Dean and Hamilton's Gallery of Homes agreed that executive transfers entail a large portion of the real estate business in this town. Although it is an expensive procedure for a company to maintain, many large corporations will pay as much as $50,000 in relocation costs in order to transfer a valued employee, Hamilton said.

Hamilton outlined several reasons for the increasingly bright housing market along the South Shore.

Cohasset and Hingham are among the "premium" real estate markets on the South Shore because of their easier commute to Boston than more southern communities. They also have the advantage of being pretty coastal towns, he added.

Hamilton noted, "A seaside community is a nice place to live. The ocean provides the residents with what we call 'year-round vacation living.' Cohasset also has the advantage of a good school system and excellent recreational facilities.

"A lot of people who live in towns north and west of Boston are finding it difficult to fight the traffic every weekend on their way down to the Cape. They are discovering that for an equivalent cost, they can purchase an oceanfront home on the South Shore, rather than a companion home on the Cape," he added.

"The South Shore has taken longer to develop than the towns north and west of Boston, but I've been told it's the fastest-growing area for light in-

Ainslie cleared by selectmen

By Donna Cogliano

Patrolman Lawrence Ainslie, Jr., was cleared last week of all three charges brought by Police Chief John DeBassio, and Saturday returned to work as permanent intermittent police officer, being assigned to a detail at the Hugo's Lighthouse restaurant.

Selectmen dismissed the charges against Ainslie Thursday, two days after they were considered at a public hearing. And on Monday, Patrolman Ainslie was honored at a luncheon by Boston Police Commissioner Joseph Jordan for apprehending an armed felon last December. In addition to the commendation from Jordan, patrolman Ainslie received an achievement award from the Pinkerton Security Co.

On Dec. 17, 1981, Patrolman Ainslie and a sergeant apprehended the suspect who was armed with an automatic weapon. He later gave testimony stating his intentions to rob the First National Bank at the Prudential Center.

The felon had held up a liquor establishment at the Prudential Center on two other occasions, and Monday, Patrolman Ainslie and his partner were honored for preventing an armed robbery at the bank.

Ainslie was naturally pleased by the decision of selectmen Mary Jane McArthur and Rocco Laugelle to dismiss the DeBassio charges. "As far as I'm concerned justice has prevailed in that the selectmen could see the matter for what it really was...I'm glad they saw it for what it really was."

Ainslie did say that he was surprised to be assigned to Hugo's "of all places" on his first day back on the job.

Because the selectmen had declared the five-day suspension unjustified, Patrolman Ainslie wondered how the 18 months without work could be rectified. Although it's hard to tell if he would have been assigned to work during the five-day suspension, Patrolman Ainslie maintained that he could have earned thousands of dollars if he were put to work during past months.

The town is required to pay some of Ainslie's legal expenses since he was cleared of the charges, and Ainslie says he expects the final bill to amount to about $1,200.

"As my attorney has told me, no one is a winner in this matter," said Ainslie. "I feel a relief but I'm upset by the whole thing. I think it certinaly could have been handled in a different way. It was upsetting but I knew all along that the appointing authority would see the facts when both sides were brought out," said Patrolman Ainslie.

Ainslie said he holds no grudges on the matter as long as the police chief treats him fairly.

"There will always be people, I'm sure, who will stand against me. No matter what, some will be behind the chief and against my uncle. It's kind of difficult because I'm the center of attention because I have a relative in politics..it makes you a target," he said.

Throughout the matter Patrolman Ainslie said he had nothing to hide and that if he did he would have resigned rather than cause embarrassment to his family.

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie said Monday, "The hearing just brought out everything I've been saying all along...The family isn't relieved, the family feels the name and the individual has been

Miss Cohasset beauty contest coming

The Cohasset Village and Harbor Association will sponsor a Miss Cohasset 1982 contest next month during the Midsummer Stroll Festival.

Single women, the ages of 15 to 21 are invited to enter the Miss Cohasset Contest. The queen and her court will be crowned Saturday, Aug. 7, at the Historical Museum Court Yard on Elm Street at 6 p.m.

Applicants should submit a photo, brief history, education, special interests and career plans by Wednesday, Aug. 4. Materials should be delivered to the mail slots at either the Tides Inn, 3 South Main St. or the Linen Chest on Brook St.

Festival and contest coordinator Ellen Morrissey said that local doctors, teachers and perhaps a newspaper publisher will be asked to judge the contest.

Morrissey said the association is trying to keep the contest simple as more of an entertainment event than a judge's contest. The queen and a

Stouffer seeks Murray's Rep. seat

Caroline J. Stouffer of Hingham announced her candidacy this week for state representative in the Third Plymouth District, serving Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

The District is presently represented by State Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray, R-Cohasset, who has already announced her candidacy for re-election.

In a statement, Stouffer, a Democrat, who once represented the old Hingham-Hull district, said stronger leadership and more effective representation is needed in the district.

She promised to be a more aggressive advocate for district needs, and suggested several areas which need attention, including increased state and local joint planning in solving district transportation problems, rebuilding of piers in Hull and Hingham, assistance to Cohasset planners in resolving sewering questions, and better cooperation with Hull town agencies and board to help the town expand its financial base.

Stouffer cited the fact that four years after she left office, little more has been done on the Pemberton Pier project. "At the time I left office, a contract was about to be signed between MDC and the Town of Hull. I spent much of 1978 helping work out a design and management compromise acceptable to both parties. Since then, except for the actual signing, there's been little or no progress. Projects like this one need constant pushing, not just election year efforts. The people of this district deserve more from their legislator than notices whenever they're mentioned in the local newspapers; they need someone who can get things done."

Stouffer believes the Transportation Caucus set up by Sen. McKinnon and Rep. Johnston can serve a useful function in creating a state-local dialogue and she feels cooperative efforts of this kind are essential to start alleviating the serious problems that confront the South Shore commuter daily.

A leading proponent of water transit, Stouffer was instrumental in bringing the Hovermarine to the district for a trial of its potential. The popularity of the Hovermarine, said Stouffer, "despite its bugs, showed there's a market out there for fast, frequent boat service. I'm pleased that the present administration, like its predecessor, has recognized the advantages of water transit and has assigned a person to concentrate on the water transportation issue. Now we have to see where we can go from here. The commuters have been let down too often already."

"At the time I left office, a contract was about to be signed between MDC and the Town of Hull. I spent much of 1978 helping work out a design and management compromise acceptable to both parties. Since then, except for the actual signing, there's been little or no progress. Projects like this one need constant pushing, not just election year efforts. The people of this district deserve more from their legislator than notices whenever they're mentioned in the local newspapers; they need someone who can get things done."

Stouffer believes the Transportation Caucus set up by Sen. McKinnon and Rep. Johnston can serve a useful function in creating a state-local dialogue and she feels cooperative efforts of this kind are essential to start alleviating the serious problems that confront the South Shore commuter daily.

A leading proponent of water transit, Stouffer was instrumental in bringing the Hovermarine to the district for a trial of its potential. The popularity of the Hovermarine, said Stouffer, "despite its bugs, showed there's a market out there for fast, frequent boat service. I'm pleased that the present administration, like its predecessor, has recognized the advantages of water transit and has assigned a person to concentrate on the water transportation issue. Now we have to see where we can go from here. The commuters have been let down too often already."

Cohasset's week...

Beach water is clean

The Cohasset Board of Health has been taking samples of beach water at six locations over the past two weeks and both sets of samples revealed excellent quality swimming water.

The sample locations are: Bassing Beach, Cunningham Bridge, Sandy Beach. Sandy Cove. Stony Beach and Black Rock Beach. Low or non-existent fecal counts indicate that the septic systems in the beach areas are not leaching into the ocean, thus enabling safe swimming water.

The Board of Health is pleased with these results, and hopes they continue throughout the summer. Weekly samples will be taken and results reported in the press. In the event that a problem occurs at a particular beach, it will be posted "Keep Out, Water Polluted."

Residents are reminded they they are required to pump their systems every two years. This preventive maintenance will keep soil and water free of pollution.

Sewer study available

The Board of Sewer Commissioners announces that the Outfall Study for the proposed new sewage treatment plant is available for public review at the Sewer Department office on 43 Elm St., from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Guild leads local GOP

Julie Guild was recently elected the new chairman of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee.

Other new committee officers are Rita Strong, vice chairman; Jeff Nothnagle, treasurer; and Judy Burke, secretary.

Other new members of the committee are Jack Creighton, Lee C. Jenkins and Lloyd Prescott.

Neil Chayet, a well known attorney, author and radio personality spoke at the committee's most recent meeting. His topic "Something's Wrong with the System," covered mental health, the insanity defense as exhibited in the Hinckley case, abuse of the health care system, conflict of interest laws in Massachusetts and the treatment of victims of crime.

Other Republicans who spoke at the meeting included: Leon Lombardi Jr., a candidate for lieutenant governor; Tom Barry, a candidate for state senator and State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, who is seeking reelection this fall.

Petition for fire chief

A petition calling for a special town meeting is scheduled to be delivered to selectmen tonight (Wednesday) at 8 p.m. Nearly 450 signatures have been gathered in the petition drive which was spearheaded by John Ridge, a local attorney.

The petition asks that selectmen consider all eight semi-finalists for the position of fire chief thus assuring that two Cohasset firefighters be included in the interviewing process by the appointing authority.

Only 200 signatures are required of registered voters to hold a special town meeting. Once the petition is turned over to selectmen a special town meeting would have to be held within 45 days.

The fire chief search committee selected three finalists for the vacancy and did not include Cohasset's Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln nor Captain James Gurry. Finalists chosen were: Victor Cail of Reading, Martin Dooley of East Hartford, Conn., and Robert Winston of Duxbury.

Selectmen briefs

KEATING APPOINTED

T. Gerard Keating was reappointed by selectmen last week as director of veteran's affairs for the town.

FIREFIGHTER SHEERIN RESIGNS

Selectmen accepted the resignation of firefighter James Sheerin last week which became effective July 1. Sheerin stated his reason for resigning as related to the fire chief search selection which did not include local candidates as finalists.

TWO-DAY BEER AND WINE

A two-day wine and beer license was granted to the Greek Orthodox Church by selectmen last week. The beer and wine license is for the Taverna on Aug. 14 and 15.

court of four to six women are scheduled to be chosen Thursday, Aug. 5.

The Midsummer Stroll Festival will feature sidewalk cafes, entertainment, gift drawings, an evening block dance and the Miss Cohasset Contest.

Volunteers are needed to man various projects and people with an interest or ideas are invited to attend Tuesday meetings, 6 p.m., at the Lothrop House. Refreshments will be served.

It is hoped the Aug. 7 Midsummer Stroll Festival would attract people who would be in the area for Scituate's Heritage Days. The Midsummer Stroll will be held from noon to midnight on Saturday, Aug. 7.

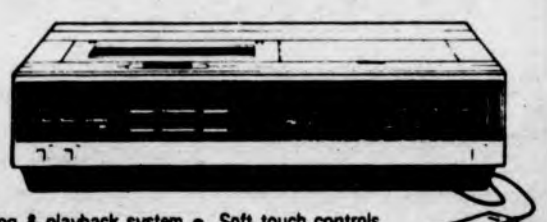
TRASK APPOINTMENT

Selectmen are scheduled to meet with firefighter Mark Trask Wednesday to consider his appointment as captain. Trask recently passed the captain's examination and was recommended by Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln for the promotion.

GOV'T ISLAND PARKING

Selectmen continued to discuss parking policy at the Government Island parking area at their meeting last week. The board is considering temporary two-week courtesy tags to allow parking for non-residents.

No cost to recycle



The Board of Health would like to remind residents that recycling privileges are free and open to the public at the Cedar Street Town landfill.

Stickers are not required to leave newspapers, glass and aluminum at the town dump.

REPAIRS TO GLASS CRUSHER

At Monday's meeting the Board of Health agreed to spend an estimated $185 to repair the glass crusher at the town dump.

The crusher was a gift from a recycling group five or six years ago and the town paid only for the crusher's motor at that time.

Local realtors continue to prosper...

dustry and housing right now. As more of these industrial parks, such as in Hingham, are developed on the South Shore, more people will decide to move right into that community," he added.

Local realtors agree the term "creative financing" is now playing a larger role in obtaining home mortgages. Hamilton said about 70 percent of the sales in his office involve some type of seller-participatory financing. In many cases, in order to speed the sale of a home, the seller will take a second mortgage, pay the percentage points on a mortgage, or take back a mortgage himself, which reduces the burden on the buyer.

In addition, Hamilton credited Reaganomics for the slow rise in the housing market this year. According to Hamilton, the rise in interest rates has caused a simultaneous deflation in housing prices. As the interest rates for mortgages ascend, the price for housing must remain the same or descend to reasonable, marketable prices, Hamilton noted.

Through intensive and aggressive marketing by realtors, clients have been forced to bring their properties down to correct market value, equal to those of 1981 levels. And although fewer homes may be sold in Cohasset, the dollar sales are higher than in most other communities, he added.

Barbara Froio, sales manager for Fred Petersen Realty, said that in an affluent community such as Cohasset, the price range is higher than in most towns, but the transaction involves persons in a higher income bracket than in many other communities.

"Most people buying a home here are not buying their first home," she said. "They can use their first home as equity towards purchasing a home here."

A factor in the successful market in Cohasset, Froio noted, is that "we don't have to sell the town. Many people decide this would be a desirable place to live. We have a lot to offer here — the ocean and sailing, a town swimming pool, and a good school system, among other things. And many people like the quaintness of a small community. We get requests all the time for waterfront property."

For instance, Froio said there is currently a Jerusalem Road apartment building for sale at $495,000. Most likely an investor will buy the property, although there should be no problem attracting prospective clients, she said. Recently, a $515,000 Atlantic Avenue home was sold by another local realtor.

"Many people who came to Cohasset as an 'executive transfer' decide to remain in the town, even though that may entail changing employment rather than being transferred again," she explained. "Once they buy here, many people would rather stay. They may purchase a larger piece of property in the future and better themselves within the town."

As bright as the realty market may appear today, Froio concedes it could always be improved.

"I think when a broker is dealing with less expensive property, things have a way of falling through because of trouble with the financing. Most often, a person obtaining expensive waterfront property has the equity of previous real estate holdings with which to obtain the necessary financing. That's the usual circumstance in Cohasset," she said.

Stouffer seeks Rep. seat...

Stouffer puts a state representative's work into three categories:

1) Leadership in assisting local officials with projects necessary to the district or town;

2) Constituent services and assistance to individuals in coping with the state bureaucracy; and

3) State legislative matters, which require voting or working on many broad, statewide issues which affect the entire Commonwealth.

In addition, there is an education component which Stouffer believes hasn't been emphasized as much as it should. "If I'm returned to the Legislature, I'll make sure I'm available to schools and individual teachers in their classrooms on a regular basis, for explanation of how the political process works or discussion of issues. The generation of young people coming of age and about to take on the responsibilities of adult life will be better informed and more willing to participate if they have had some background about the political process, some personal connection with legislators who affect the lives of their families and themselves." She said young people need to be encouraged to take part, to understand the system and to perform their citizen responsibilities in an informed and serious way. An articulate and enthusiastic spokesperson can show them that politics is a process to be part of and not something to be shunned.

Stouffer suggested several major challenges for the next Legislature and Administration: 1) to help municipalities cope with Prop. 2½ in its second year; 2) to reform the tax laws, esp. to reduce the reliance on local property taxes for education and other municipal services (a position she's advocated since her first campaign in 1974); 3) to find new revenues in order to keep up with inflation and to replace cutbacks in federal funds; 4) to find a solution to the hazardous waste disposal problem; 5) to encourage further growth of alternative energy sources and conservation efforts to help free us from dependence on imported oil; 6) to promote conservation and preservation of the state's water supplies; 7) to find ways of reducing unemployment which in turn will help reduce crime. Overriding all is the national concern about stopping the nuclear arms race. Although agreeing with the necessity of always being wary of the USSR, Stouffer supports the Kennedy-Hatfield Resolution for a mutually verifiable freeze on nuclear arms production and deployment.

Since leaving the Legislature, Stouffer has kept up her interests in the environment, improvement of economic opportunities for women and mental health and social services. She write and distributes a quarterly Newsletter on political issues to approximately 1000 area residents and has appeared numerous times to testify on issues at the State House.

Stouffer served eight years on the Area Board for Mental Health and Retardation, and over a year on the Department of Social Services Area Board. She was vice-chairman of the Back River Study Committee and later chairman of the Back River Committee. She served for several years on various town committees, including the Shipyard and Route 3A Improvement committees, the Development and Industrial Commission, the Energy Conservation Committee and as the Selectmen's representative to the Community Advisoty Committee to Massport on the problems of airplane noise.

Stouffer has been active for over a decade as a member of the Democratic Town Committee, League of Women Voters and AAUW. In 1972 she was elected a delegate to the National Democratic Convention and has participated in many state conferences and party conventions since then. In 1970 she helped initiate the first campaign to elect Gerry Studds to Congress; in 1974 she helped coordinate the area for Paul Guzzi in his successful effort to win the Secretary of State race and was herself a candidate for the then First Plymouth District state rep. seat.

In 1976 she won the seat, ousting a Democratic incumbent in the Primary and going on to win in November over two other challengers. In 1978, when the district was changed to include Cohasset, she lost to Mrs. Murray.

While in office, Stouffer concentrated on improving local transportation, including water transit and bus service to Hull, and protection of the environment by safeguarding the Clean Air and Water Acts, with special attention to the natural resources important to the district.

During the 1978 blizzard, Stouffer lived for over two weeks in the Hull Selectmen's office, visiting the marooned residents and helping to coordinate various state assistance efforts for Hull. In 1980 she headed the Kennedy for President Campaign in Hingham; in 1982 she has been the Senatorial District coordinator for the Evelyn Murphy for Lt. Governor Campaign, as well as the Hingham Kennedy reelection coordinator.

Caroline Stouffer is married to John Stouffer, a Hingham H.S. Biology teacher, and they have two children, Mallary Anne and Douglas Stewart. They have been Hingham residents for over 17 years.

New insurance bill could save good drivers

By Mike Berger

State Sen. Allan McKinnon said Cohasset and other South Shore "good" motorists could save as much as $70 if his latest auto insurance reform bill passes the House and is signed by the governor.

McKinnon, a Weymouth democrat, and chairman of the Senate Insurance Committee, led his bill successfully through the Senate before the Legislature adjourned for the summer.

The bill reached the House Ways and Means Committee but McKinnon expects a tough fight in the House in the fall.

The legislation calls for a safe driver discount plan, giving credits to motorists with accident and violation-free driving records.

The credits would be financed from surcharges paid by drivers whose records show repeated accidents, traffic violations and fire and theft claims.

Another major provision of the bill calls for the withdrawal of mandatory offer of insurance optional coverages for motorists with poor driving records.

A "dirty risk" driver under McKinnon's bill, would have three or more "at fault" accidents or traffic violations; a single conviction in vehicular homicide, insurance fraud, motor vehicle theft, driving under the influence charge, and multiple fire and theft claims in a three-year period.

Those motorists who claim two or more thefts or fire claims in a three-year period would be assigned into the "dirty risk" pool unless they chose not to purchase the insurance coverage.

Insurance companies would have the option not to offer comprehensive insurance coverage to motorists who have four or more accidents whose claims total $2,000 or more in a three-year period.

McKinnon's bill is the first insurance legislation following defeat of a bill in December which would have allowed insurance companies to set their own rates.

McKinnon added that recent media reports have erroneously indicated his bill would allow the companies to set rates.

"It's just the opposite. I'm totally opposed to company set rates," he said. Under McKinnon's bill, the state Insurance Commissioner would continue to set the rates for private passenger motor vehicles.

Industry officials have lobbied for a return to competitive rating since a 1977 experiment which saw rates for urban drivers soar. Company officials also want to eliminate a provision requiring firms to sell insurance to all applicants, regardless of driving records.

Under McKinnon's legislation, bad drivers would receive higher insurance premiums from one of 20 companies if they were denied coverage in the voluntary market.

McKinnon said his bill is a good compromise for those good drivers who "pay through the nose to subsidize the bad driver who cost the system millions of dollars annually" and the insurance companies and agents.

Water Dept. revises billing procedures

The water commissioners recently established two new policies regarding billing.

First, instead of quarterly meter reading, water meters will be read only twice each year due to recent reductions in water department personnel.

Second, a new procedure for bill collecting was approved by the commissioners which allow the water department to cut off service to customers who have not paid their bills after 60 days. Payment will be due in 30 days. In the past customers were subject to disconnection if payments were not made within 90 days.

The 60-day payment limitation is scheduled to begin with the October bills. Water Department Supt. Ben Curley said the computer has to be reprogrammed to satisfy the new billing regulations.

"We hope to get this into operation by October 1. We're hoping it will work," said Curley. The new shutoff schedule was established to help speed up collections, said Curley, to "help our money come in quicker."

Due to the constraints of Proposition 2½ and the personnel outlook in the water department, meters will now be read every other quarter. "The off-quarter people will be receiving an estimated bill based on the reading of the previous quarter," said Curley.

Meter reader Diane O'Brien left the department June 1 and the commission voted not to fill the vacancy. There are only two roadmen working for the department currently since the commission also opted not to fill a third position. "That will mean that some of the roadwork will be backed up," said Curley. "But we're going to continue to give it our best effort."

He said jobs would have to be assigned on a priority basis with emergency work assigned first.

Actual readings were completed for the months of April, May and June. The July, August, September quarter will be estimated with actual readings scheduled for October, November and December.

Though staffing has been reduced Curley is grateful for two CETA employees from the youth program who will work for the department during the summer. Curley said the two schoolboys will help with cutting tall grass around fire hydrants and painting them.

Selectmen demote Rhodes to patrolman

Selectmen demoted Police Sgt. John Rhodes III to patrolman last Wednesday after finding him guilty of neglect of duty and conduct unbecoming of a police officer.

If Rhodes is to continue to serve on the police force, selectmen said he must seek psycological counseling on a regular basis at his own expense.

Selectmen found Rhodes, 37, guilty of contributing to the waywardness of a 15 year-old girl from April 1981 until March 19, 1982. Evidence showed that letters and phone calls were exchanged between the two that an intimate relationship developed. Selectmen wrote in their findings, "During this time her academic record changed materially in that she no longer was on the honor roll. She was physically and mentally affected by this relationship.

"His actions have caused her to turn away from what is right and proper; has caused her to be disobedient; has caused her to become devious with her family and take certain willful actions; has promotedemotional stress and has taken advantage of the confusion that is part and parcel to the adolescent state."

Rhodes was also found guilty of charge number two — neglect of duty. Selectmen said evidence showed that the young girl often met Rhodes at the police station; talked with him on the station's phone and met him places while on tour duty.

"This proves he was improperly involving himself in personal matters while on police duty," selectmen wrote.

Selectmen cited evidence brought forth under the first and second charges as reasons for declaring his conduct unbecoming of a police officer under charge, the third charge. "Evidence...under charges one and two clearly show conduct unbecoming of a police officer wherein a man in his middle thirties encourages intimate relations with a child half his age especially after agreeing to cease such actions."

The demotion from sergeant to patrolman also results in a reduction of pay. Selectmen said Rhodes should continue counseling until evidence is submitted that it is no longer necessary.

☐Navy Airman Recruit Francis Mahoney Jr., son of Josephone Digirolamo of 468 King St., has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.

GenevieveGuimond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Guimond of Marshfield, was recently named a second vice president in the Commercial Banking Department at The Northern Trust Company, Chicago. She serves in the Agriculature and Commodities Division and is responsible for develpopment and maintenance of agribusiness customer relationships.

Guimond graduated from Dartmouth College in 1977 with a B.A. degree in mathematics and economics and is currently working on her M.B.A. at the University of Chicago. She joined the Bank in October of 1981 as a Commercialk Banking officer in the Commercial Banking Department.

She is a former president of the Dartmouth Club of Boston, and Director of the Dartmouth Alumni Association of Eastern Massachusetts. She lives in Chicago.

☐Larry Fone dropped off some ideas in my mailbox and Mary Jeanette Murry (MJM) and Nancy O'Toole (MJM's legislative aide) called...so I guess Mariner advertising really does work! Really would like your news. Out-of-town guests dropping in to eat all your munchies? Inpromptu neighborhood parties... birthday parties. I'd like all of it!

☐First of all, a very important listing of great dates! This Thursday, July 22, from 8-10 on the David Brudnoy show (WRKO) you can hear MJM on guess what...casinos. Call her and tell her what you think! She already knows what I think.

☐Another important party which you're not invited to (unless you graduated from the Cohasset High School Class of 1962) will be held this Friday at Sally Ann and Clark Chatterton's house (cocktails for operers) and then Saturday the group will descend upon Bassing Beach where they will laugh about old times, catch up on new times and fill their collective tummies with clams.

According to reliable sources, Sally Ann Chatterton, Dick Ainslie, Susie McCarthy Reardon, Andrea Murphy located 60 out of 80 Cohasset grads for this reunion. Maybe they should think about starting a detective agency.

☐There will be a super party happening in a week or two...but you'll have to wait to read about it in Around Town. It's a surprise.

☐The public is invited to festivities from noon to midnight, right in the smack of the Cohasset Village, Aug. 7. The Cohasset Village and Harbor Association is doing its annual downtown stroll...complete with a 'Miss Cohasset" contest, three bands, drawings, hay ride, evening block dance and various other ongoings. Volunteers are needed. Anyone able and willing to donate his time should contact: Ellen Morrissey at 383-9623; Larine Stover at 383-0004; or Tinka McLain at the Linen Chest.

☐Returning recently from a visit to Scotland with their Dad were Eric and Douglas Drysdale. We couldn't catch up with any of these seasoned travelers for the details but we know they had fun visiting the relatives.

☐Evelyn Pearson recently returned from a visit to England and the Chelsea Flower Show. The real purpose of her visit was to visit with her busy daughter, Margit Pearson, who was on business assignment with the McKenzie Corporation. When Eric Pearson was asked what he did while Evelyn was gone, he said, "That's none of your — — business." If you're acquainted with Eric in any respect it shouldn't be too hard to fill in the blanks.

In other Pearson family news, Cousin Ed Grening from Winson, Conn., recently visited the family. Eric took him flounder fishing in Quincy Bay, which event produced a number of fish stories, etc., but we stopped taking notes at that point, not particularly being interested in fish unless they are on a plate at Hugo's or the Red Lion Inn.

☐Caroline Wampole is waitressing at the Cape this summer.

☐Welcome to Cohasset, Betty Madden, a new arrival from Houston, Texas. Betty moved here to be closer to grandchildren and daughter, Sally Avery. She lives at the lovely Lilac-House in the village proper, and I already knew ner name only because I ended up doing Chiper Weier's Patriot Ledger paper route recently and dropped off a paper at her door. Hope you're reading the Mariner, too, Betty!

☐Austin "Bud" Ahern recently retired from the jewelry business. His shop has been sold and he is apparently making good use of his retirement because I couldn't reach him for any details. Friends says he will have no trouble finding things to do, being an expert stone mason and expret carpenter.

☐More new arivals...the Frederick Koopman's and daughter Caroline, all the way from Alaska. Frederick is Liz Koopman Wyman's brother.Liz recently orchestrated the lovely art show on the common. The Koopman's are residing on Aaron River Road.

☐Why is it that all of Marie and Eugene Price's kids have initials and not real names? Caught the Prices last week as they were returning from a visit with J.T. Price at Mt. Allison University wrestling tournament. He won one and lost one. J.T. will be entering Mt. Allison as a frosh this September. E.T. (not of movie fame) Price is presently in Portland, Maine, working for John Hancock.

☐Poor Scott O'Toole is washing dishes at Hugo's. As far as we know he never particularly excelled at dishwashing at home, but is reportedly doing a good job for his employers.

☐Presumably, Doug Mitman is still painting away.

☐And Larry Fone thinks some enterprising young man could make a bundle at the bus stop shining shoes. "'Twould only be a two hour stint for an early riser — 6:30 -8:30. A good shine costs about 75 cents to $1 in Boston and only takes minutes. An enterprising youngster could earn $4 to $5 daily plus tips. They could also offer grooming aids — splash of after shave, kleen-pads, Rolaids, etc." There are probably a number of items one could add to that list — aspirin being one. And just think about the times the bus doesn't comes!

Alas, it would probably take years to get planning board and selectmen approval for a little enterprise like that.

☐Larry also sent news of my grandcats BoBo and Bink. "They are just the best kids I ever had, but tiny, only weigh six pounds (each, that is!) But Flower was tiny as I recall!"

☐If you've been just dying to go to St. John for a vacation, here's an inside tip. Eric and Evelyn Pearson will be renting their main house (50' x 40") beginning in 1983. It's on the top of Bordeaux Mountain, and your nearest neighbors would be 7,050 feet away. Eric and Evelyn bought the St. John property 20 years ago and in 160 weeks (eight weeks every year) completed the construction themselves. Call Eric for details at Highway Motors or at home.

☐Just about everybody in town is threatening to run for selectmen next year.

☐Mary Farrell, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Farrell of Deep Run, recently graduated summa cum laude from Providence College. A 1978 graduate of Cohasset High School, she graduated fourth in her class from Providence College, and was first in the psychology department. She is presently working as an accountant at Leggat McCall and Werner, a commercial real estate company in Boston.

Petition circulating for five selectmen

As of Tuesday morning, it was a grassroots movement, with no spokesmen, or at least reluctant ones.

The petition circulating around town this week asks that the next annual or special town meeting, whichever comes first, vote to create a five member board of selectmen, which would mean that three new selectmen would be elected at Annual Town Elections 1983...a group which would comprise the majority of the board.

In the meantime, another group is expected to submit the required number of petition signers (200) at this week's Selectmen's meeting calling for a special town meeting to amend the procedure in which fire chief candidates (finalists) were selected.

Both the newly circulating petition and the fire chief selection article deal with major department heads, Police and Fire.

Although the new petitioners were relucant to have their names appear with their comments, three individuals agreed that "The Ainslie Issue" had certainly sparked the petition, which is definitely "DeBassio-related."

One individual said: "Finally we've got a superb Police Chief. Frankly, we're a little worried he might not be around after his contract runs out. Obviously, if three new openings were to appear on board in 1983, that freshly elected group would comprise the majority of the board. And hopefully that majority would be DeBassio supporters."

In 1979, a group of petitioners also tried to create a five-member board of selectmen. The issue that sparked that attempt was also police-related, and involved selectmen appointments.

That 1979 Special Town meeting voted the issue down on a voice vote. At that time the Town had recently voted to create the position of Executive Secretary, and many voters felt that position should be dealt with for a year or two before new members were added to the board.

Septuple fault

Sometimes it seems that the liberties arduously won from King George III a few years ago are about to be surrendered to a contemporary tyrant: King Ridiculous.

A case in point is the recently concluded litigation between the town of Cohasset and the Bells of Gammons Road. At least we hope it's concluded.

It seems that back in the year when the hostages were still in Iran, the Bells wanted nothing so much as a tennis court in their yard. And odd folks, these, they decided to build a fence around their court. Perhaps they strung their racquets with funny hemp, or something, to want a fence around their court, but they did.

Anyway, the Mazzas across the street thought the fence itself was funny. After the Bells had gotten the requisite permits for their court cum fence (a feat that itself probably deserves a medal), the Mazzas persuaded the town to revoke the permits and, as it came to pass, to fight the Bells in court.

It is important to understand that the Mazzas were completely within their rights to object to the Bell's fence if they found it offensive and if they thought the fence presented a legal violation.

It is equally important to understand that the town had more than the right, it had the duty, to support the Mazzas if town counsel Blake Thaxter believed the Bell's fence presented a violation. Zoning restrictions that have been written into law ought to be observed, and zoning violations, even small ones, ought to be contested if zoning is to have any meaning.

So the town and the Mazzas set out on their legal journey to stop the Bells — we assume with the highest of motives. They packed their canoe, they did, and set out across the Gobi Desert.

And that's the problem, if you get our drift. Canoes have a hard time in deserts, and you would think that the intelligent paddler would in due course invest in a camel or else turn to a more productive pasttime, such as following the Chicago Cubs.

But not Cohasset. Seven times the town went into court against the Bells. Seven times the Bells won and Cohasset lost. When (as we pray) the case was settled by the State Appeals Court on June 30 with a 7th decision favorable to the Bells, Cohasset had frittered away $13,777 of our precious dollars in legal fees.

The Bells had spent considerably more than that, and have sued the town to recoup their costs. Thus the town may end up having to pay the Bell's legal fees.

We have just three questions, two for the plenipotentiaries who allegedly run the town, and one for the Bells and the Mazzas.

One. Town fathers, why when you lost in court the first couple of times didn't you "pack it in," "cut your losses," and let the Bells have their tennis court cum fence?

Two. Town fathers, in the era of Proposition 2½, can't you find better ways of spending $13,777 of our dollars than seven trips to court over a fence?

Three. Bells and Mazzas, why couldn't you have settled this over a martini?

Don't fool with this royal highness

By Claire McDonough

Elizabeth Regina is one classy lady. Confronted with an intruder who invaded her bedroom in the middle of the night, Her Royal Highness offered him a glass of whiskey, engaged him in royal small talk, and, under the guise of getting him a package of cigarettes, summoned the royal intruder-removers.

Well, in case there are any would-be intruders out there who contemplate invading my chamber, I just want to serve due notice that you're in for a much rougher time than that English bloke.

For one thing, before you get to disturb my slumber, you have to get past three dogs and two cats. Some are more aggressive than others (and if you think I'm going to tell prospective housebreakers which of my animals mean business and which are marshmallows, you're out of your felonious mind) but they're all noisy. Long before you could engage me in a midnight tete-a-tete, the dogs would wake Jay, Kevin, Larry, Breida, Skipper and Tanya.

They would not wake the Dragon, because they could not be heard above his snores — another factor that mitigates against conversational chit chat in my lady's chamber.

Assuming, however, that you could get into my bedroom without generating more activity than the Green Bay Packers pursuing a pigskin, the last thing in the world you would be advised to do would be to wake me. My husband and children would not think of disturbing my sleep for anything less than a fire in my own bedroom or the birth of a grandchild. They know better. The sweet, fun-loving Claire McDonough that the world knows and adores does not put in an appearance until coaxed to the surface by a long shower and at least two cups of coffee. Any housebreaker who has thoughts of nocturnal small-talk would be well advised to approach my bedside with a cup of coffee in his outstretched hand. Then duck.

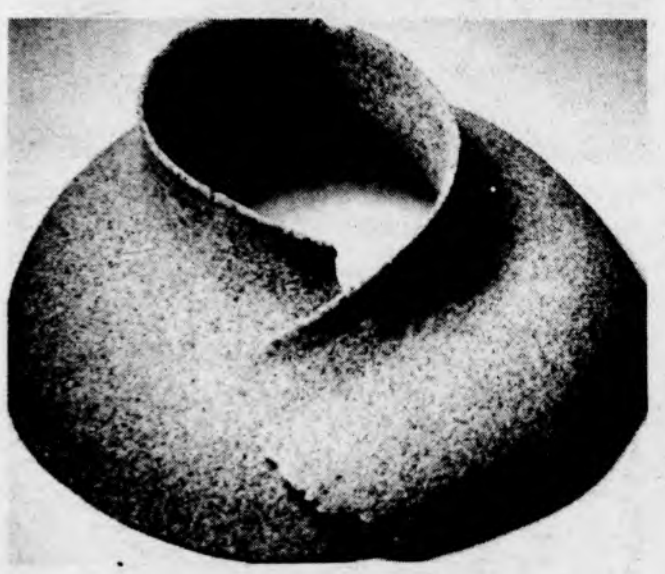
You can forget about the glass of whiskey, too. I don't know if most hostesses keep a well-stocked bar at the ready for these occasions, but the best you could hope to get from me would be the remains of a glass of Tab, gone flat and warm by the side of my bed, if it hasn't been knocked over by a cat or a dog.

You might get some conversation, though. As the Dragon can tell you, my late night and early morning vocabulary consists of an extensive assortment of grunts, snarls, and expletives, delivered in compelling tones to anyone who ventures near my darkened chamber.

Bear in mind, though, that the chamber will remain darkened. Her Royal Highness may rise from her bed looking queenly, but this commoner does not face anybody — family, friend or cat burglar without a prior encounter with a blow dryer, Oil of Olay, and Max Factor. I look every bit as good as I ever did, but these days it takes a heck of a lot longer.

Your quiz of the week: What's this?

By Karin Bartow



Was this created by a Sea Serpent?

Is it a clay sculpture? Could it be a sand doll shawl? Perhaps it's a sandy remnant from a tossed away plastic bottle.

It is none of the above and probably not the novelty to long-time beachcombers that it is to new beachcombers like me.

Called a "sand collar," it once belong to the moon snail. The collar surrounds the gelatinous egg mass of the 'gastropod carnivore' and gets left behind when the new snail emerges and crawls away (I presume). The protective collar is formed when the eggs are deposited and its shape depends on the particular species, and the shape and size of the female's shell. My "Guide to Field Identification to Seashells of North America" doesn't explain (in any form I understand) which moon snail left the collar pictured here. Maybe some smarter science-shell person knows and can enlightened us at the Mariner.

Last week when the afternoon tide was low, we picked up a dozen from the shallow water off Sandy Beach. They're soft, like jelly fish and dry, brittle, hard and fragile. No one (including two life guards) at the beach knew what they were, but Julie Hoogeveen did. She explained that they're "usually farther out, but due to a low course tide, show up at the low water mark."

They're purported to be quite active and consume up to three or four small clams a day. That means there's alot of clams at Sandy Beach and if it weren't for the five year ban on digging clams in Cohasset, that no one knew about, we could probably find dinner while cooling off at the beach.

Be sure to look for the "sand collars." They'd probably make great Christmas tree ornaments. And perhaps it will be a longwhile until we find them so easily again.

Ainslie cleared by selectmen...

damaged by the chief."

Selectman Ainslie added that he doubted that "we've heard the end based on the chief's last statements in the Patriot Ledger."

Police Chief DeBassio said, "I'm naturally disappointed in the decision of the selectmen...what I am doing is looking into some possible alternatives that I might have."

Meanwhile Patrolman Ainslie will be used on a rotation basis, said DeBassio. Police Officer John Rhodes III has been delegated by DeBassio to assign permanent intermittents to private details.

If a regular police officer is not available for private details, then the permanent intermittent officers are called to provide these services, DeBassio explained. June through Sept. 15 are the busiest months for details, he added, particularly on weekends.

Patrolman Ainslie was disturbed that one statement of testimony by DeBassio was not included in a local newspaper report. When questioned by Attorney Mark Fitzsimmons at the last week's hearing, Ainslie said DeBassio admitted telling him on March 4 that he would be a good police officer — but somewhere else.

Patrolman Ainslie said the statement was contradictory to others made by the chief saying he was unfit and unsuitable for police work.

"I just want to get back to work and to hopefully get my permanent appointment when the time comes," said Ainslie who plans to apply to the force once an opening arises. Ainslie said he wants to work as a police officer in a small town, preferably, Cohasset, the town he was born and raised in.

Selectmen dismissed the charges against Ainslie as being unsubstantiated following a four-hour open hearing. They also dismissed three charges against the patrolman Thursday which were brought forth by Police Chief John DeBassio.

The Board also ruled the five-day suspension given to Patrolman Ainslie by Chief DeBassio earlier this month was without "just cause."

The first charge of falisification of an official police document regarding an application-questionnaire which was submitted by Patrolman Ainslie was disregarded by selectmen. They said "The evidence presented showed that the application referred to...was not an employment application nor was it an official police department document."

Charge number two of neglect of duty while assigned to a police stake-out at Hugo's Lighthouse restaurant was also dismissed because Patrolman Ainslie was not given instructions as to stake-out procedures to follow.

Lawrence Ainslie, Jr. receives a certificate of commendation for outstanding service in the performance of duties as a special police officer from Boston Police Commissioner Joseph Jordon (L) and Frank Walsh (R) the manager of Security Services at the Prudential Center in Boston.

DeBassio alleged that Ainslie caused protracted deployment of police resources and delayed capture of one suspect and permitted the escape of a second at Hugo's Lighthouse on Dec. 21, 1980. DeBassio told selectmen that Ainslie was nearly 20 minutes late in reporting to the police station.

Patrolman Ainslie testified that he had the suspects under surveillance and that as soon as they entered the building he reported the same to the station. Selectmen also stated that further evidence showed that Ainslie personally identified the suspects and as a result of his testimony they were convicted of breaking and entering in the night time.

The third charge, conduct unbecoming of a police officer, was dismissed because evidence wasn't presented to show that Officer Ainslie worked the alleged incident at the South shore Music Circus, July 14, 1980. Patrolman Ainslie showed employment records which indicated that he was working in Boston on that date.

Selectman Henry Ainslie did not participate in his nephew's hearing and his name was not signed under the board's written decision. He did attend the hearing Tuesday and tape recorded much of the session.

Beating the heat is the game

By Bucky Yardume

Beating the heat became the name of the game with the tropical blitz gripping the area.

If one could beat the heat literally, the temps would have been knocked right back to the Sunbelt whence they came. Unfortunately, clubs aren't much use for the purpose.

Instead, efforts ran the usual gamut: cold drinks... ice cream...dunking in pools, ponds and the Atlantic. Cold showers. Well, cool, anyway. Fans and air conditioners. And salads. Lots of salads!

The electric companies will show a hefty profit for July with cooling devices working non-stop. They'd love to figure a way to collect somehow for the air conditioning in cars. There are a lot of them judging from all the vehicles with windows tightly shut.

If there was any doubt how oppressive the heat and humidity were, the dogs made it clear. Usually they can't wait to get outdoors. Instead they looked reproachful at the suggestion, turned tail and fled to the coolest corner of the house as if it were time to go to the vet's.

There's the plus side. The grass finally stopped growing so fast.

People stopped cussing the torrential rain and chilly temperatures of June and instead lambasted the heat and humidity.

Some folks constantly check thermometers. Bad idea! Just makes you feel worse.

Meteorologists vied in coining phrases to describe the weather, beaming all the while. They grin in the middle of a blizzard.

Traffic was tied in knots as people tried to get away from it all. But that happens in the dead of winter. Can't blame it all on the weather. The DPW for so many simultaneous projects, maybe.

Tempters matched the temperatures. Governor King was steaming at Mike Dukakis. Iran at Iraq and vice versa. Israel and the PLO.

Advisories were out all over the place on how to stay alive, if not actually cool. Those with respitory or heart conditions were advised to stay indoors with the air quality rotten. Avoiding exertion was recommended. Few needed any coaxing in that regard. Still, the joggers were out, if not in quite as many numbers. Also no-no's: overeating and boozing which raises body temperatures.

There even was a recommendation to tennis buffs to play singles instead of doubles because it takes less time on the court. Actually, dominoes was too strenuous. Still, they played at Longwood where it hit 108 degrees on the courts. And the Red Sox played. Well, they showed up and took a 9-0 lacing from Kansas City Sunday. Guess they heard they shouldn't exert themselves.

There was one big plus. Nobody asked, "Is it hot enough for you?"

Beacon Hill report from Rep. Murray

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, reports that as the House and Senate move toward an anticipated summer recess many bills finally emerged from committee for debate.

Among these bills was the Surtax Repeal. The State Budget for Fiscal 1983, which begins July 1, reached the Governor's desk last week amid continued controversy over the possibility of repealing the surtax or state income tax.

Though the final budget passed by both the House and Senate did not provide for surtax repeal, many argue that repeal can and should be accomplished now. During debate on the floor, Murray said, members were reminded that Republicans now advocated the surtax repeal since 1979 when they ran the Tax Ax petition drive to put the issue on the ballot.

Rep. Murray voted for the discharge of the Surtax repeal bill from the Committee on Ways and Means.

Rep. Murray also reported on two new ballot questions considered at a session of the Constitutional Convention, a joint meeting of the House and Senate to approve proposed amendments to the State Constitution. Two proposals were given final approval and both will be on the November ballot.

One would reinstate the death penalty in Massachusetts. The other provides for state aid, in the form of books, materials and supplies, to private and parochial schools.

Pac Person

By Lois Martin

How it captured the hearts of millions I'll never know. The dumb thing is circular with a gap for a mouth on it and a nothing eye of sorts.

Pac Person. Zilch personality compared to someone like Goofy, or Clarabelle the Cow, or the Road Runner, Bugs or Mickey Mouse...Minnie in her nifty little heels, for Heaven's sake.

The music that goes everywhere with Pac Man is better than he is. And that gets on your nerves after a while.

The weekend of the fourth, we sat in a new lounge, accoutered with the finest in lighting fixtures, expensive carpeting, and everything they thought would accessory the place properly. Next to us was a Pac Person table. It hadn't attracted my attention until a young woman sat at it. Tongue betwixt her teeth she had at the game, turning on the little music that wears on you like a repeated Jack in the Box used to when an entranced child did it 12 times in a row.

PATCHES

This girl, how she loved that game. She sent the stupid pink Pac Person around the triangle guiding him so he could gobble all the little dots and then sending him to swallow the globs. I later read on the machine that gobbling the wrong colored globs scores you down. She played it beautifully. Her gobbler got about all there was and she went off to return later.

Sunday I stood close to someone who played it again, this time in a pancake place (blueberry ones, with whipped melted butter and the proscribed amount of syrup on top).

He only got 880 points. No bonus. No extra game. What do you get with the dumb thing and who'd want a tee shirt with a sliced circle on it?

The thing is, I'm confused and I'm late. Everyone else has been all steamed up about video games and I haven't been. I can't get fist-pounding about wanting them or not wanting them. And if you'll forgive me, I don't see the difference between Atari games, all those home television things and the store-bought kind. One you pay a quarter for. The other you've already bought or you charged it.

Moralists decry the use of the games. I'm not pounding them. But it's up to us to keep our moderation going in all our games, right? And as parents we oversee the kids, right? We don't make laws to assume that responsibility. And tell me how a short television addict is different from a little Pac Person addict? One needs quarters and the other doesn't. Also I find the absorption with the old pinball machines similar along with a baseball card fanatic...and comic books, stacks of them.

No I don't think any of those are classy in restaurants. But then I don't fall apart with moral indignation when I see a video game in a lounge either. If I wanted to play one, I'd feel no compunction about it. I suppose the kids would start to worry if I zoomed to the machine right after work and didn't come home till I'd managed to get Pac Person to gobble all the dots.

Yet if I were to ban the use of quarters for video games, I wouldn't be able to understand how I should tolerate Atari and I might come to question pool or to limit the use of juke boxes.

No, I don't want to see them all over town. But I have seen them a lot and they have neither added nor subtracted to my quality of life. I've adapted to the looks of Rte. 53, the reality of a combat zone's being in Boston, never mind nefarious bars and massage parlors that some say are sprinkled here on my South Shore. So are many wholesome things. We make our choices.

I don't equate Pac Person with dope. I suspect some people who use drugs also play video games. That's probably true of beer or vodka users but I haven't run tests. And I bet non-smokers play Pac Man.

I have no answer for people who find themselves in strife against Pac Man. But then I haven't had answers for those who have problems with other excesses either. And goodness knows we all deal with them from food, to drink, to horses to Pac Man. Personally one of my problems is trying not to play the candy machine out back. And if they make a bar that has Sheena Queen of the Jungle's picture on it, I'll be in real trouble.

Chapman sails to another victory

Skipper Peter Chapman sailed to victory Saturday in the Flying Scot race. He was assisted by crew member Jeannie Baccari.

There were a mixture of winds present during Saturday's six-mile race. Moderate to very light winds accompanied the seven sailing boats that afternoon.

Chet Ellis and Roger Porter clinched second place. To date, this summer, the Ellis-Porter duo has accumulated the best finishes with a 1.4 average. Chapman has the second best average of 2.2 in finishes.

Peter Goedecke and Joe D'Onofrio made their move during the fourth leg of the race and wound up in third place for the day. During that fourth leg the wind died down and Goedecke was fortunate to capitalize on wind which had shifted to the southwest.

Ray Kasperowicz and Bob Davenport sped to a fourth place finish. They are the third leading sailing team of the Flying Scots with a 3.6 average in finishes.

Gerry Schultz and Dick Horn are considered the most improved sailors in Flying Scot races this year. This week Schultz and Horn finished fifth which was their best finish of the season.

Sixth place belonged to Skipper Terry Young and his crew of Regina Schultz and Martha Soule. Steve Bartow, his daughter Felecia, and Letitia Linsley completed the race in seventh place.

Parfait softball men slug Hull, 23-15

The Strawberry Parfait men's softball team outslugged Hull Sunday for a 23-15 victory. The Cohasset squad has a 9-2 record and a hold onto third place in the South Shore Civic Softball League.

Strawberry Parfait has won the past two league championship titles. With two weeks remaining in regular season play the Marshfield Benchwarmers are in first place with the Hingham "A" police squad in second.

Center fielder J.O. Murphy led Cohasset with four hits, three runs and three RBI's. Player-coach David Pomarico scored four times and contributed three hits to win with four RBI's. Left fielder Robert Swain had two hits for Cohasset and knocked home three runs. Sunday's heat did take its toll on players with tow Cohasset batters striking out at the plate.

The Strawberry Parfait team is scheduled to play Hingham Fire on Sunday, away.

A child's room can incorporate ideas that allow for growth. Adult sized furniture can be used early and utilized throughout high school years and beyond. Wallpapering one wall can ease future changes. A trundle bed allows room for a multi-functional approach. There is adequate room for play, study and an overnight guest. There should be enough storage space to free the floor for play. In fact, treat a child's room as a studio and enlist the young one's help in its deocration. Juvenile wallcoverings and furnishing may slow down a young person's maturity.

We all dream of the perfect room for our child but the room should be decorated to grow with them and their tastes. Do you need to paint your child's room? Wallpaper? New window treatments? BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE is here in N. Scituate at 736 Country Way to help you whether you have a large or modest budget. Call us at 545-3624 or stop in Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs & Fri. 8-8:30, Sat, 7-5. We look forward to serving your every need and welcome MasterCard and Visa.

Decorating Tip: A child's room should be a refuge and castle, not just a sleeping place.

This workshop is for beginning through advanced levels with individual attention to suit each participant's needs.

One-Week Landscape Painting with Margaret Dillon will meet daily Aug. 16-20 each morning from 9:30-12:20 at two scenic Cohasset locations. The workshop will focus on how to handle the many competing landscape elements so they create an exciting and cohesive painting in whatever medium the student chooses.

One-Day Watercolor Workshop with Murray Wentworth on Aug. 24 is for artists who already have their basic drawing and watercolor skills and who want expert guidance in developing an individual style.

Exploring with Paint and Pencil for Children (ages 7 to 11) with Serena Brundige will take place on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 2-4 starting Aug. 3 with creative guidance on drawing and painting nature and using ideas from the imagination.

Intermediate Photography with Paul Fortin will meet on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7:30-9:30 starting Aug. 4 where photographers will explore how to make the best photographs of people, sports events and landscape. Photographers may use black and white or color film and may use the Center darkroom for black and white processing. Individual Darkroom is available for indepdendent work in black and white; photographers may register at any time with time in the darkroom scheduled on a first-come basis. The fee includes all chemicals.

Monoprint Workshop with Louise Kalish will meet for two sessions, Aug. 25 and 27 and is the last two sessions of the Color and Design class. It is suited to advanced or professional artists who want to learn a new technique, but is also excellent for beginners who want to explore the excitement of direct printing.

Materials are included in the children's class only; supply lists for all other classes are available at the Center office or by telephone.

Photography workshop at the Art Center

Photographers can advance their skills this August in a special workshop taught by Paul Fortin at the South Shore Art Center on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30.

The class is geared to the intermediate level and will concentrate on learning specific skills in making good photographs of people, sports events and landscape in color or black and white.

Discussion and demonstration will be on the aesthetics of image-making with technical advice for each photographer on how to advance individual talent.

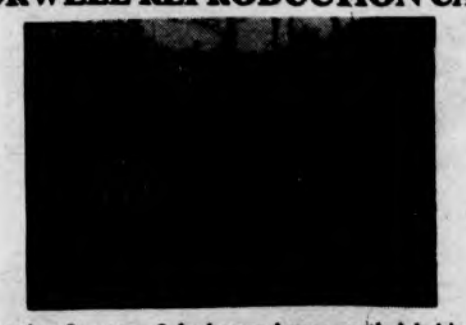
The workshop will meet for eight sessions and the Center darkroom may be used to process black and white work. Enrollment must be made in advance of the first class Aug. 4. Mr. Fortin is a free lance photographer, lecturer and reviewer who received his BS from the University of Rhode Island and Diploma from the New England School of Photography.

For photographers who want to work on their own, Individual Darkroom is available at any starting date. The darkroom is equipped for black and white processing and includes all chemicals; photographers sign in for two or three hour use on a first-come basis.

Telephone 383-9548 for detailed information Monday through Friday between 10 and 2 p.m.

Family story hour at the Pratt Library

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library invites school-age children and their parents to a Family Story Hour Monday, Aug. 2 at 7:30 p.m. This program is the third in a series of five evening programs for family enjoyment.



Ms. Anne Hayden, Children's Librarian from the Ventress Library in Marshfield, will tell a group of folktales from opposite ends of the world.

Ms. Hayden will begin her program with a folktale from Turkey entitled "The Three Fridays." Other stories which Ms. Hayden will include are "Burnt-face," a native American version of "Cinderella," "Two Old Women's Bets," an American folktale, and "A Modern Ghost Story" from Appalachia.

An accomplished teller of tales, Ms. Hayden has performed at her own library, and she has been a guest story-teller at many South Shore festivals and Story Hours. Her program will last about 45 minutes.

Meet the Whitney family, they make stained glass

By Laura Doherty

What started about five years ago as a hobby for the Whitneys of Smith Place is now on its way to becoming a family business.

Russ, an electrical contractor by trade, began working in stained glass in his kitchen and was soon joined by his wife, Eleanor, and their daughter, Dawn. All of the Whitneys are self-taught. "I really admired stained glass," recalls Russ, "so I read some books. It looked fairly easy and I decided it was."

Their interest soon expanded to the point where they outgrew their kitchen and they now are located in a pleasant shop behind Cushing Plaza. Reached by a country-like dirt road, one would never expect that such an idyllic and tranquil location could be so close to Route 3A.

With Dawn and Eleanor there full time, this summer, and Russ in whenever he gets a chance, the shop is a busy place — full of evidence of their creative projects. Presently, all three are planning and developing two windows they have been commissioned to do for King's Castle in Whitman. The windows are being designed with the King's Head logo for a new entrance which will be a miniature castle for the childrens amusement park.

In discussing this and other works, it is obvious that the Whitneys compliment one another in their talents and abilities. Russ, the craftsman, will explain the three different types of stained glass and their different surface textures and how they can be used separately or combined for different effects.

The two different ways of assembling, he continues, by either copper foil or lead are "more of a matter of taste than anything else." Copper, however, is stronger and so would be used for such items as hanging planters such as the ones they are currently making up for custom orders or to place in gift shops.

Eleanor, an accomplished artist who has exhibited in area galleries, enjoys choosing the colors for their work. "I have to see what moves," she explains "and I have to see it in my mind first."

Many of their ideas, Dawn says, come from books and magazines of which there is a variety on hand at the shop. "There are so many things to make that there just is not enough time to make them all," she says enthusiastically.

Working together appears to agree with the Whitneys. When asked if there are any problems in the arrangement, Russ will jokingly respond, "Why should there be? I'm easy to get along with as long as things are done my way."

Both Dawn and Eleanor underline the need for self discipline in their work."Whenever I'm not here I feel guilty," Dawn remarks. "We have to see that some sort of quality gets out into the world," adds Eleanor. Both agree that the demands of their work are quite different from punching a time clock.

They also have had to learn to think of their time differently in making the transition from a hobby to a business. The cost of their work is figured either by the hour or at $35-$100 per square foot depending on the amount of design and work required.

Right now, despite summer heat, the Whitneys are planning a line of Christmas ornaments. They experimented with some, last year, and according to Dawn, had everything on their family tree from ducks to reindeer, owls to angels.

Russ is also enthusiastic about installing a kiln so he can paint and countour glass. He encourages any would be a hobbyist noting that the expense in doing stained glass really depends on how deep one wants to get into it.

Town spent $13,777 on Bell suit

To date the town has spent $13,777 in legal expenses for the Bell's tennis court on Gammons Road. Lowry Bell reports his legal costs as totaling more than what the town had officially reported.

Diana Bell said, "We've spent thousands of dollars in legal costs." She declined to say how much for two reasons: 1. We're extremely private people — we've been forced into this situation. We've heard comments around town that the Bells' don't have anything better to do than throw their money and the town's money away on a tennis court. She said, "It was the town that caused us this."

Secondly, she said revealing the amount spent in legal costs might hurt their pending civil rights case.

Diana said, "It's the most depressing thing everytime we get a bill from Charles Humphreys, our attorney. To pay out that kind of money is just phenomenal. We still owe him."

Our only way of recouping costs is to sue for legal costs and to ask for punitive damages, she said. This civil rights case decision is expected to be handed down any day now.

A court clerk told the Bells that a judgement had been made (the Bell's don't know what the judgement is) and they are awaiting a written decision.

The irony of the case is that even if the complaintant, Peter Mazza, won — the tennis court would still remain and only a small portion of the fence would be taken down. Diana said tall shrubbery would be put in place of the missing fence.

Thousands of dollars have been spent in legal costs by the town which could have been better spent on streetlights. Lowry Bell would liked to have seen that money spent toward streetlights.

If the town won this case — what would it have proved? asked Lowry Bell. Who would have benefited by that? What would the townspeople have gained? "There's nothing for them to win," he said. Twenty other tennis court fences would also be in violation of the zoning code.

"We've spent money in the town's behalf in the beginning when we successfully defended the town and ourselves on four different occasions in Superior and the Appeals Court, when the Mazzas were attempting to get a restraining order, stopping us from building and canceling the permit the town had issued," said Lowry Bell.

"But somehow the Mazzas got the town to change its position and side with the Mazzas in order to fight us. Obviously the town picked the wrong team because we've been proved right in the full trials at the Superior and State Appeals Courts," he said.

The Bells have won at least seven decisions before some ten judges regarding their tennis court.

Exploring with paint & pencil

The relaxed days of August are a perfect time for children to explore the fun of painting and drawing in the South Shore Art Center class Exploring with Paint and Pencil taught by Serena Brundige on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 2 to 4. The class is for ages 7 to 11 and will meet outdoors, weather permitting, using both nature and ideas from the imagination to spark the children's own imagination. All supplies are included in the class fee and registration must be made in advance either by mail or at the Center office on 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset. Class starts Aug. 3 for eight sessions.

Ms. Brundige uses an imaginative approach to art by giving basic instruction while encouraging the child's individual talent and enthrusiasm. She received her BFA in Art Education Special Ed from Mass. College of Art and recently taught in the Hingham Public Schools where she planned creative enrichment programs.

Contributions pour in for Celebrity Auction

By David H. Wadsworth, Society Curator

In the early 1930's the Cohasset Historical Society kept its collection of the town's historical artifacts and memorabilia at the Town Hall. This summer, on Saturday, Aug. 7, the Society returns to the Town Hall auditorium beginning at 1:30 p.m. to hold its second gala Celebrity Auction.

Guest Auctioneer Nick Mills of WITS radio, Boston, and his assistants Norma and Norm Nathan will preside over a collection of useful and collectable auction items contributed by the great and the near great from all over the United States and Canada.

Recent arrivals are additional interesting items including an L.P. record album by Tennessee Ernie Ford; a book on art in the Nation's Capitol, from Representative Gerry Studds; a photomontage of the planet Saturn from astronomer Carl Sagan of P.B.S. T.V. show "Cosmos;" an autographed photo of former football player O.J. Simpson showing him in action; and a set of Doonesbury books from author Gary Trudeau.

Publishing companies such as Harvard University Press, Johns Hopkins University Press, Yankee Incorporated, Down East Books and Christopher Publishers have sent fine selections of their publications. Included are such notable volumes as books about New England's Wild Mammals, and New England Fishes. Cookbooks, recent fiction and non-fiction, pictorial histories, including one of the wars between Greece and Rome in Ancient times, have been sent and will be auctioned. Locally, the Christopher Company has donated books including "I Remember Southie," "Old Nantasket," and books of local history, including a travelogue by Cohasset resident Jack Conway.

Former President Gerald Ford has sent a book of collected testimonials, Senator William Cohen of Maine has donated a book of his own poems and Senator Alan Cranston a print of his painting of the Potomac River. From author Noel Gerson has come a copy of his "The Great Rogue," a biography of Capt. John Smith, who, incidentally , discovered Cohasset Harbor in the year 1614.

Gift certificates of exceptional value from area businesses and restaurants have arrived and will be auctioned off to the fortunate high bidders. Hugo's, Kimball's, Howard Johnson's, the Satuit Bowling Alleys, Eugenio's Pier 44, the Hyatt Regency, York Steak House and Top of the Hub restaurant are but a few of the distinctive groups having contributed certificates; there are literally too many to list.

Johnny Appleseed's has sent a fine pewter bowl. These and numerous other outstanding items will be auctioned off by the Society's guest auctioneers at the 1982 Celebrity Auction. Aug. 7 promises to be an eventful day at the Town Hall; so make your plans to attend and participate in this unique event.

Proceeds from the Auction will go to the Historical Society's museum restoration and improvement project, a truly worthy cause.

Connie Parker, Historical Society president, Drexal Gibson, advisor to the auction and David Wadsworth (right) the auction chairman display items for the upcoming celebrity auction.

By Donna Cogliano

A vibrant Connie Francis returned to the South Shore Music Circus last week after a seven-year layoff. Thursday was opening night for the singer and she told the audience she wanted to stay and sing requests straight through Tuesday.

Francis clearly let it be known that she was glad to be back. At one point during the show she turned to the orchestra and said, "Just think, we get paid for doing this."

The highlight of the show was when Francis sang, "Mama" and the audience responded accordingly with a standing ovation.

Francis, 43, is the all time number one best-selling female recording artist. She has collective sales now exceeding 80 million copies, including 16 gold records.

While performing Thursday through Saturday at the Music Circus, Francis stayed at the Kimball's By-The-Sea Inn.

During a reception Thursday evening for the media, Francis stopped to chat with the Mariner for about 15 minutes. With her busy schedule of interviews and meetings Francis explained that she would not have much time to enjoy Cohasset. However, she did hope to bring her eight year-old son, Joey, to Cohasset's Sandy Beach and to Paragon Park in Hull on Saturday. Francis also hoped to take in a meal at a restaurant in Boston's North End.

While in Boston last week Francis met with John Volpe to discuss legislation to protect the rights of rape victims. Volpe, a longtime friend of Francis', attended the opening night show and reception which followed at Kimball's.

Seven years ago Francis was raped in a Westbury motel room on Long Island and held at knife point for 2½ hours. In 1977, Francis discovered that because of cosmetic surgery from 10 years earlier she had literally lost her voice. She was sensitive to air conditioning and was treated and cured at Massachusetts General Hospital by Doctor Richard Webster.

Most of Connie's free time is spent writing her autobiography these days. "I'm enjoying writing this book," she said. The writings are scheduled to be completed for mid-September.

Three writers have tried their hand at writing Connie's biography but Francis felt the writers could not capture the warmth and humor, etc. of her life. Even after five months of recording her life on tapes, Francis was not happy with the progress of the biography and decided to write an autobiography which is scheduled for publication in December.

"When you sit down to write about your life, you remember things that in six or eight months you have forgotten...until you sit down to write," said Francis.

Chapter three is devoted entirely to Bobby Jerris with reference to more than 200 letters Francis has saved from him. The book also includes letters from Connie's brother. In her writings Connie outlines her start in the entertainment business and tells the reader about her first contract of seven shows for $50.

Originally the autobiography was planned to total 300 pages. Today Francis estimates the book will amount to about 500 pages. She is anxious to complete the writing so that a screenplay can be done for a movie based on the book.

Francis said she is taking the month of August off to finish the book.

Whether dining at the Ritz, or lunching at the Whiton House in Hingham, ask for their classic "pate du Chef." You will probably find to your liking the production of a little, out-of-the-way enterprise in Hanover. Gourmet Francais on Rockland St. is the spotless, gleaming plant where Jacques Bonnichon and his wife, Solange, produce 1500 lbs. of pate each and every week. When they first began in 1979, they only made 500 lbs. But they don't aim to be big, preferring a select clientele which includes the Maison Robert, new Meridien Hotel and, "up the road a piece" in North Abington, Vin and Eddies. "Gault et Millau" is regarded by the food and restaurant industry as the most severe, yet most respected, critical reviewer of foods and they write of the Bonnichon's pate: "The Gourmet Francais does not sell retail, but you can find its pates in most better stores in Boston, one of which is Bloomingdales" and they go on to list other outlets from New York to Houston. If you don't want to travel that far afield, scoot over to the Village Cheese Shop in Hanover, or the Wine Depot in Duxbury. The country pate is a classic recipe, but most of the others are originals, with the ingredients and proportions a carefully guarded secret. Which explains why I had to scour my cookbooks to find in "Cohasset Entertains" this recipe for

LIVER PATE GLACE

1 can consomme
1 1/2 tsp. Worcestershire Sauce
1 env. gelatin
1 3 oz. pkg. cream cheese
1/3 lb. liverwrust
Few drops onion juice

Heat 1 can consomme, add 1 tsp. Worcestershire and dissolve 1 env. gelatin in ¾ c. of water. Add to hot soup and stir till blended. Cream liverwurst with cream cheese and onion juice and add another 1/2 tsp. of Worcestershire. Pour half of the soup mixture into a mold and allow to set. Add liverwurst mixture and pour chilled consomme over all. When jelled, unmold and sprinkle with toasted slivered almonds. Garnish with watercress. Jean MacDonald's recipe.

Both Bonnichons are from the Loire Valley in France and he learned the art of making pate when he was 14 and came to Boston in 1972 where he worked at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, then became chef at Au Beauchamps on Beacon Hill. Deciding to do something different resulted in the birth of Gourmet Francais. This fall they'll be opening a store in Hingham Harbor to be named "Le Petit Gourmet," featuring cheeses, entrees and, of course, pates. Till then, we'll have to struggle along on our own, making our own cheeses such as Linda Halloran and Marrion Garhart's

IMITATION HOMEMADE BOURSIN

8 oz. cream cheese, softened
4 oz. farmers cheese, or cottage cheese
2 lg. garlic cloves, mashed
Salt to taste
1/2 c. finely minced parsley
Fresh ground black pepper

Season with a little salt and a lot of pepper. Chill. Makes 1 1/2 c. As a gift, pack in small crocks with instructions to keep chilled and to serve with crackers, or to fill mushroom caps for hors d'oeuvres.

So much for the more exotic things in life. Here's an easy, quick summer night's meal suggested by Connie Carney and called

GROUND BEEF STROGANOFF

1 lb. ground beef
1/4 c. chopped onion
1 can (10½ oz.) mushroom gravy
1/3 c. sour cream

In skillet, brown beef and cook onion until tender. Stir to separate meat. Pour off fat. Stir in gravy and sour cream. Heat. Stir occasionally. Serve with noodles. Top with parsley.

Take a tour of the Maritime Museum

Where in Cohasset can you find two glass chimneys from the oil lanterns once atop the first Minot Lighthouse? Or the rusted hatch ring from one of the many sailing vessels wrecked along the Cohasset shores during the 1800's?

Perhaps a finely carved American eagle with wings spread in flight, exquisitely made by Cohasset ship's woodcarver Lot Nichols Stoddard, would be of interest, or the dented propellor of a 1930's rum-runner that sank at the Collamores Ledge of the Cohasset Rocks.

Where in Cohasset can you see a collection of fishnet floats, including floats made of glass, once used aboard the fishing boats sailed by Cohasseters, and the figurehead of the last Cohasset built family-owned fishing schooner of the 19th century, the Henrietta Francis? The answer, of course, is the Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum.

Originally belonging to the shipowning Bates family, and used as their ship's chandlery, this late 18th century building holds a collection of artifacts, documents, paintings and prints relating to Cohasset's seafaring past.

It is unique among museums in this area. Until recently, most of the collections on display related to the town's "Age of Sail," a period of history extending from circa 1750 to 1895, a time when Cohasset-built and owned schooner fleets fished Canadian maritime waters each summer for mackerel,and Cohasset's "Deep Sea Captains" sailed large mercantile square riggers from Boston to ports in many parts of the world.

Now, however, the Maritime Museum is expanding into more recent history with accessions dating from the early 20th century. The demise of the schooner fleets and replacement of the square riggers by modern steam and diesel powered ocean going merchant vessels brought about a change in New England's waterfront. The schooners were replaced by fishing boats having internal combustion engines, and the full-rigged ships were replaced by steamers. Cohasset's modern fishing and lobstering boats are the direct descendants of the schooner fleets, and the "Tall Ships" are a reminder of an age long past. In Cohasset, however, the memory of that era of "wooden ships and iron men" (and there were seafaring wives as well) still lives on.

But the early 20th century itself now is history, and the maritime Museum seeks to preserve it. The rum runner's propeller reclaimed from the ocean bottom near the Collamores is an example. So is a early one-cylinder marine engine now owned by Society and on display at the Museum. Called a "one lunger," it is representative of the first gasoline engines used by Cohasset boatmen. The canvas sail of an early sailboat of the Merreshoff "12" class of day sailers is on display.

It bears the label of Cousens and Pratt, sailmakers of Boston. The owner of that sailmaking company was Charles Cousens, a resident of Cohasset, and the boat for which the sail was made belonged to a Cohasset yachtsman. Also on display at the Maritime Museum is the tiller of an early Herreshoff "12," dating from the early 1900's, and originally Cohasset-owned. An early 20th oar, used and owned in Cohasset, graces the maritime Museum's display, and is unusual because of its seven foot length.

The Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum, while seeking to preserve the history of Cohasset's "Age of Sail," also is moving ahead in its efforts to show the evolution of seafaring technology and the transition of the town from a fishing village to a modern community.

On your next rainy day, tour the Capt. Wilson House

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Historical Society's Captain John Wilson House at Cohasset Center is a museum house in the great tradition of Historical Houses maintained by preservationist Societies throughout the United States.

The concept of "Historical Houses" is not new; Cohasset's effort began in 1936 when local contractor and merchant William McGaw graciously donated the building to the Historical Society for use as a museum.

Built in 1818 by Housewrights of Cohasset's Nichols family, the building was deeded in that year to Capt. John Wilson, a local seafarer. His descendants lived there for more than a century. The original building was long and narrow, apparently only one room deep from front to back, with the back wall squeezed right up to the ledge of Bourne's Rocks, that granite outcropping surmounted by St. Stephen's Church.

The ledge itself is visible just behind a panelled door on the first floor. Some years later, the Wilsons extended their second story further back, building over the ledge itself.

One of the unique features of the Capt. Wilson House is the location of the large cooking or kitchen fireplace; found on the second floor rather than on the first floor. The reason was simple, Capt. Wilson maintained a small Ship's Chandlery or marine supply business downstairs, while the family's residence was upstairs.

Another unusual feature of the house is the configuration of glass panes in the front or streetside windows. Instead of the common "6-over-6" or "12-over-12" panes usual in the early 1800's, here we find the unusual number of 10 panes in upper sashes above 15 in the lower sashes. Old window glass still exists in the Wilson's windows and its uneven texture sometimes plays tricks with the outside world. Here and there, the old glass shows a noticeable tint of green or violet.

Unlike some Historical Houses, the Society's Wilson House doesn't seek to comemorate a specific person or family. Instead, it is intended to represent an era of American history. This is an early 19th century home of a type once common in Cohasset. The antique furniture and furnishings have been donated by Cohasset families, and many of them come from the oldest houses in the town.

For instance, on the first floor is an old spinning wheel and an early high-backed bench or "settle," the settle itself unique in having a small folding shelf used as a candlestand. Here too is found Deacon Abel Kent's own chair, perhaps the very one that august early Cohasseter used as he frequently pondered the wonders and mysteries of the Holy Scriptures.

In the Wilson House, paintings of local origin adorn the walls of both floors. Scenes of early Cohasset can be found, painted by, among others, the well known 19th century artist Frank Shapleigh. His picture of Bassing Beach and the entrance to Cohasset Harbor hangs in the first floor, and there is one of Thomas James' 1704 farmhouse at Cohasset Center, now known as the "Red Lion Inn." A gift to the Society some years ago has provided one of its three primitive watercolors done by local artists, this one by Suzanna Stoddard; it is a "mourning" picture and currently hangs on a wall in the Wilson House.

Of a more romantic nature is the large painting of upper New York State origin, one of the well-known "Hudson River School," decidedly not local in nature, but of striking colors and of placid subject. Upstairs in the Wilson House one finds the old cooking fireplace with its collections of early kitchenware. "Spiders" or skillets are stacked nearby as though waiting for use. From the fireplace's iron crane hangs an old cooking pot, and close by are numerous utensils used by the typical 19th century housewife. Through a doorway is the bedroom, containing an old "trundle" bed having a cover made of Cohasset-grown flax. Here too is an unusual wall clock made by Samuel Bates and originally found in his house across the street.

The clock is built in to a corner of the room and has an old Grandfather's clock movement hidden behind its panelling. Next is the Children's Room, in which are to be found many kinds of early dolls and toys. Featured here are an entire Noah's Ark and a complete "Brownie Band," typical child's playthings a century or more ago. In the hall of the second floor hangs an old quilt having been decoarted with sewed-on pictures taken from a children's book made of cloth.

Finally, the Wilson house has its "borning and dieing room," a small room set aside for those who were ill or were about to have children. Altogether a charming example of an early Cohasset home, the Historical Society's Capt. John Wilson House offers a unique chance to get a glimpse of life as it was almost two centuries ago in this small New England village.

Out-of-town trash dumped at the dump

While discussing proposed regulations Health Agent Eliopoulos repeated Monday that a considerable amount of out-ot-town trash is being stashed at the town dump on Cedar Street.

"I can't prove this but I think that trash is coming from other towns," Eliopoulos told the Board of Health.

Board member Dr. Michael Bliss wanted to know if the out-of-town trash amounted to anything significant. Eliopoulos responded, "Anything is significant for our landfill. We're pretty full."

Health Board member Barbara Kern was worried that the dump was in a current state of emergency and asked that only residents be allowed to use the Cedar Street landfill.

Member Marilyn Sweeney said, "I feel strongly that before we go into an emergency situation and close people out, we should go into mandatory recycling to preserve the landfill. It would be better to demand that people recycle rather than to close out commercial haulers."

The Health Board is considering a yearly $10 flat fee to be charged for each client of commercial haulers versus payment for each load dumped at the landfill. Though the flat fee would be more simplistic Kern said the board would be faced with allowing commercial haulers to police themselves. She argued that it would be difficult for the board to check on how many clients each hauler did business with.

Bliss said the individual sticker fee for each dumping would be a hassle that could not be implemented easily. The sticker proposal requires that each commercial hauler be assessed a flat fee based on load capacity for each dumping. Commercial haulers would be charged a fixed rate of $1 per yard of loose trash and $3 per yard of compacted trash. The proposal suggested by a private hauler requests that haulers be assessed a $10 annual fee for each client.

Bliss said that the sticker policy would chase the commercial haulers out of business and wind up hurting the elderly and poor people most of all. "It's unfair to the elderly," he said.

Eliopoulos said she also was also sympathetic to the elderly but felt that the town was being taken for a ride by some of the haulers.

Eliopoulos said that by putting a financial burden on the haulers the board would be able to monitor the out-of-town trash situation. "There is trash coming from other towns and there's no doubt about it," said Eliopoulos.

Kern said, "My major concern is that we are going to overflow." Eliopoulos said, "We're in trouble but we've been in trouble for a long time." The future of the town dump would be better understood next week once the bids for closure and expansion of the dump were opened," said Eliopoulos.

Health Board members disagreed on whether small businesses should be charged less than large businesses when dumping. Members also maintained that it would be difficult to determine who was dumping personal trash versus small business trash.

Discussion on the proposed landfill regulations are scheduled for next week's, Monday, July 26, Board of Health meeting at 8 p.m.

Special warrant closes Wednesday

Dump, fire, selectmen articles in works

Three groups in town are considering articles for next month's special town meeting.

Last week selectmen set a special town meeting for Monday, Aug. 30 to ask voters to expand the list of fire chief finalists from three to eight. The eight candidates would include local candidates such as Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln and Captain James Gurry.

Selectmen were presented with 504 signatures calling for the special town meeting last Wednesday from Atty. John Ridge. Under April 1981 town meeting vote, selectmen were required to choose their next fire chief from a list of three finalists picked by the fire chief search committee.

Only 200 signatures were required to call for a special town meeting. Once the petition was turned over to selectmen, a special town meeting would have to be held within 45 days or by September 4.

While the warrant was to remain open until today (Wednesday), 4:30 p.m., two groups were preparing to submit articles for the special town meeting. The board of health voted Monday to write an article asking for additional monies for closure and expansion of the town's dump in the event that Monday's bids were not acceptable.

In the third round of bidding Monday, the health board received a low bid of $235,000 which was below the $240,000 which had been appropriated for the dump project by town meeting. However if specifications are not met an additional appropriation might be needed since four other bids were above the town meeting appropriation amount.

Health board member Barbara Kern also suggested that an article be included to formulate a hazardous materials committee to study and monitor various situations in the town.

There's another group in town circulating a petition for an article which wold ask that a vote of town meeting create a five-member board of selectmen instead of the present three. Though there is no spokesman for the group, active petitioners in the group say there are some 10 to 12 people seeking voter signatures. The petition

Selectmen's fence-mending needs repair

Police Chief John DeBassio met with selectmen last week in an effort to begin a reconciliation over their recent differences.

With the close of patrolman Larry Ainslie's hearing and his being cleared of all charges two weeks ago, Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie wanted to, "start working on mending fences," between the board and chief.

However the peace talks had an unsteady start last Wednesday as DeBassio complained that he was not notified of the topic for which he was to appear before selectmen. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur was surprised at this and insisted that any town employee being called to future selectmen meetings be informed as to why.

Regarding recent newspaper reports Selectman Ainslie asked DeBassio if the issue concerning his nephew had been resolved. "Yes, I think the matter

'Grudge of the year'

DeBassio & Fasciano to meet at high noon

The police chief and a local contractor are scheduled to square-off Saturday at high noon in a running dual at the High School track.

The Milliken Field track will set the stage for a 50-yard sprint between 52 year-old Police Chief John DeBassio and 47 year-old Tony Fasciano, a contractor.

The grudge match came to be Sunday following a friendly golf match at the Pembroke Country Club. Firefighter Linwood Davis said DeBassio sparked the challenge as he teased Fasciano about his weight and intake of hot dogs and hamburgers.

Though Fasciano admits he can't beat DeBassio at golf he is convinced that he will triumph over the chief in a sprinting dual. Fasciano boasted that he was an extremely fast runner in high school and the fastest on foot in his army battalion. Davis said Fasciano is so confident that he is willing to give DeBassio a one-yard head start if he wants.

At about 5'10" Fasciano confesses to weighing 226 pounds but others disagree. Some nameless firefighters contend that Fasciano really tips the scale at 235 or 240 pounds. DeBassio weighs in at 185 pounds and stands 6'3".

DeBassio played football in high school but doesn't consider himself an expert runner. He did challenge Fasciano to a half-mile race. Davis said Fasciano maintains he has more speed than DeBassio but not more endurance.

When the Mariner phoned the Chief's wife, Ginny on Monday she had not been informed of the race. Ginny said, "They'll both pass flat out...they're out of condition." And furthermore, Virginia said, noon-time was a "dumb time for a race...no wonder they didn't tell me about it."

Chief DeBassio said he's not sure if there will be a photo finish for Mariner photographer Greg Derr to capture on film. One thing for sure, DeBassio said, "They better make sure there's an ambulance ready."

Though the race idea emerged from a casual conversation and the winner was to receive a six-pack of beer, focus has now shifted to the possibility of attracting enough townspeople to raise donations for muscular dystrophy. Firefighters are thinking of ways, this week, to raise money surrounding Saturday's race.

In case anyone's interested in Sunday's golf results, DeBassio and Davis teamed up for the victory over former Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink and Fasciano.

Gerard Keating: a popular postmaster

By Donna Cogliano

During his 42-year career with the Cohasset Post Office, Postmaster T. Gerard Keating, has witnessed a 17 cent postage hike while the three mail delivery routes in town have expanded to nine.

When Keating joined the post office in 1940 it cost three cents to mail a letter. Today a 20 cent postage stamp is required for mailing. Keating served as a mail carrier in 1940 when there were two foot routes and one mounted route in town. He walked the foot route. Today there are seven mounted mail delivery routes inCohasset and two foot routes.

Though the days of the penny post card are long gone, Keating maintains that the U.S. Postal system is the best run business in the world. Despite a reduction of employees during the past ten years productivity has increased, said Keating. "The postal service is one of the most successful businesses in the world," he said.

Keating, who is set to retire on Aug. 6, said, "If I had to start out tomorrow, I'd take the same job." He descirbes himself as happy, satisfied and enthusiastic about retiring. "I'm leaving with a sense of fulfillment and enthusiasm as I assume a new role in life...there's no sadness," he said.

The 62 year-old resident of 10 Blackhorse Lane hadn't intended to retire for another two years. But since January Keating was sick on several occasions and while recovering at home he decided there was a lot of work he wanted to do around the house.

Keating confessed that one of his secret longtime desires has been to learn the art of needlepoint. "It might not match up with my background," said Keating,"but the desire has always been there."

Besides his job as postmaster, Keating has always been active in the community. He has had little time for himself and hobbies between attending his sons' football games and lecturing at St. Anthony's Church. One of Keating's first goals as a retiree will be to develop a hobby — which may range from knitting, or crocheting to needlepoint.

After one year as a letter carrier, Keating joined the Coast Guard for three years. He became clerk

Cohasset's week...

Health agent schedule

The Board of Health reminds developers and contractors that the Health Agent in Cohasset will not be available for inspections on Fridays.

She will be in the office at 43 Elm St., to accept phone calls, and discuss problems with residents.

Routine inspections will not be performed, so please plan accordingly. Fridays are a good time to request permits/licenses, as the Agent will be available to sign them.

Town unemployment benefits

The town paid out $34,312 in unemployment benefits this year. Seven former employees of the town are currently receiving benefits from the town.

According to Town Accountant Bill Signorelli two town employees were terminated from their positions because of Proposition 2½. In the school department five staff members were dismissed and were receiving unemployment benefits as of last month.

The schools have paid $21,668 in unemployment benefits while the town expended $12,644. Signorelli said the town had budgeted $15,000 for their unemployment benefits line item.

Police labor negotiations

Selectmen were scheduled to meet last night (Tuesday) to discuss labor negotiations with police. The meeting was expected to take place in executive session at town hall.

Pool statistics

Pools bring in about $302,000 in taxes for the town each year.

According to records at the assessors office there are about 108 inground pools and 19 above-ground pools in town. The above-ground pools are the least kept track of and there are probably more than 19 in town today.

An average installation price for a pool is about 10 to 12 thousand dollars.

Only a couple of permits to build pools were taken out from the building inspector's office this year. Building Inspector Jim Litchfield said the big year for constructing pools in town was 1979 when about 25 permits were granted.

Landfill bids

The Board of Health opened bids Monday night for expanding and capping the Cedar Street landfill. The board received five bids and all of them were passed in after 4 p.m. on Monday.

Sealund Corporation of Marshfield was the low bidder, $235,000 and was the sole contractor to bid below the $240,000 which was appropriated by town meeting for the project.

Other bids were: Albert Winslow of East Weymouth, $248,000; Sylvester Ray of Marshfield, $252,000; K.R. Rezendi, Inc. of Assonet, $267,000 and Marshfield Construction Corporation, $310,000.

The health board voted 2-0 to take the bids under advisement. Member Marilyn Sweeney was absent from the meeting.

Fred DeFeo of the E.J. Flynn Engineering, Inc. will review the bids and make a recommendation to the board Wednesday or Thursday of this week.

Health Board member Michael Bliss was pleased with the third round of bids which were closer in the ballpark to the town meeting appropriation. "We're getting there," he said.

Marshfield youth sentenced

William McDermott, 17, of Marshfield was sentenced to life in prison Monday for the first degree murder of a Cohasset Golf Club manager.

He had been convicted July 1 of shooting Robert Kemp, 38, of Pembroke in the kitchen of the Cohasset Golf Club, on November 21, 1981.

Rhodes appeals decision

Patrolman John Rhodes III appealed to the state Civil Service last week to overrule selectmen's decision to demote him from sergeant.

Selectmen found Rhodes guilty of conduct unbecoming a police office, neglect of duty and contributing to the waywardness of a minor. Rhodes was demoted to patrolman and ordered to undergo psychological counseling at his own expense.

The appeals hearing date is expected to be set by next week for some time in December.

Health Board briefs...

NEWTON-WELLESLEY HOSPITAL TRASH

Health board members want to know what kind of trash is being dumped from the Newton-Wellesley Hospital at the Cohasset Heights Landfill. Board member Michael Bliss instructed Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos to find out if clinical trash is being deposited from the hospital's chemistry laboratory.

The health board is concerned that chemicals from clinical lab trash might be transported into Cohasset's water table.

TOWN DUMP LOOKS GOOD

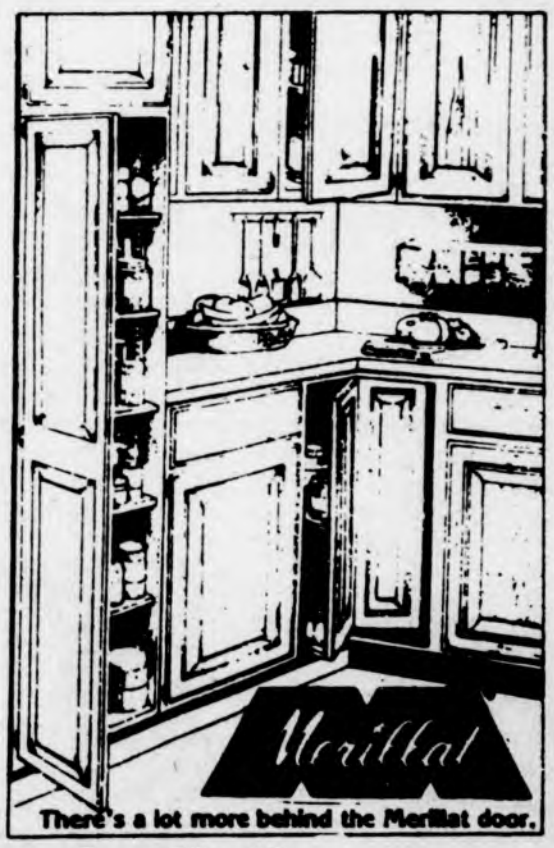
Health board member Barbara Kern announced Monday that Tom Clougherty, an official from DEQE, commended the health agent for recent improvements at the Cedar Street Landfill.

Kern said Clougherty had never seen the landfill look so good. Clougherty was happy with conditions at the dump and was very complimentary, said Kern. Board member Michael Bliss visited the dump Sunday and said, "It looked pretty darn good."

HEALTH BOARD REQUESTS TRANSFER

The board of health is set to request two separate transfers from the advisory committee. Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos reviewed the landfill's operation budget recently with Town Accountant Bill Signorelli.

The health board is asking for $305.60 to pay for repairs to the glass recycling crusher and for fuel surcharges.



The board needs an additional $4,884.28 to operate the town's landfill to meet the last year's expenses.

The board will be seeking approval of nearly $5,200 in transfers from the advisory committee.

HEALTH BOARD'S SUMMER MEETINGS

The board of health is scheduled to meet August 2 and 9. On August 2 at 8 p.m., the board will meet with Fred DeFeo of Flynn Engineering to discuss the situation at the town dump. At that time the bids for expanding and capping the dump will be reviewed.

Golden angered over Ainslie's document

Doris Golden, a former school committee chairman and 19-year resident of Cohasset registered her disapproval with selectmen last week regarding an 11-page letter that was sent to her from Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie.

Golden said she simply signed a petition in support of Police Chief John DeBassio and consequently found an 11-page response from Selectman Ainslie which she called highly irregular. "I think it was in poor judgment," said Golden.

"I thought the people would be happy to receive a letter," said Selectman Ainslie who addressed some 32 letters to various leaders in the community. He said the letter was meant to be an informative one and not a criticism of the issue regarding his nephew's work as a permanent intermittent police officer.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur complained that the letters were sent out on selectmen's town stationary. Any letter that goes out on town stationary should be voted on, she said. Selectman Ainslie maintained that if it has to do with town business it should go out on town stationary.

South Shore to ask for chemical trespass legislation

Residents of a dozen South Shore communities, which were involved last spring in scattered, local pitched battles over the aerial spraying of chemical pesticides for gypsy moths, have agreed to pool their resources in pushing for tougher state controls over such massive spray programs in the future.

At a three-hour meeting Thursday night in Marshfield, a coalition of citizen groups representing towns from Braintree to Kingston set up the South Shore Environmental Association (SSEA), and laid the ground work for their part in a statewide campaign to limit broad-scale, indiscriminate use of potentially hazardous pesticides and herbicides. Organizers have already met with several state officials and other conservation groups to help coordinate the effort.

"We have a common purpose in keeping these chemicals off ourselves, our children, and our land," said Peter Fossel of Duxbury, an SSEA steering committee member and spokesman for the group. "No town has the resources to face this problem alone."

The momentum that spawned this drive may, it turns out, be one of the more noticeable effects of this year's gypsy moth outbreak in southeastern Massachusetts. A more serious outbreak in 1981, when the larvae defoliated thousands of trees in a binge of gluttony, prompted scores of town to pay for expensive aerial spraying programs with the controversial pesticide Sevin (carbaryl). Opposition, and several court actions, arose this spring from are citizen groups who said the chemical affected a broad spectrum of wildlife, was potentially harmful to humans, and in any case provided no long-range solution to gypsy moths.

"Towns are locking themselves into a perpetual, and increasingly costly, annual spraying program in which Nature's own, highly-effective controls are kept from stopping these periodic outbreaks," Fossel said. He cited a recent Dartmouth College study which showed that oaks develop tougher leaves and even a toxicity to gypsy moth larvae after an infestation. Broad-spectrum pesticides also kill natural predators which prey on gypsy moth larvae, he said.

Towns represented in SSEA include Braintree, Quincy, Weymouth, Rockland, Hingham, Scituate, Cohasset, Pembroke, Norwell, Duxbury, Hanson and Kingston. Members are working closely with the Massachusetts Pesticides Council (a coalition of local conservation groups from across the state), and with several national environmental organizations.

The South Shore group is taking its campaign to both the state legislature and state regulatory agencies, including the Department of Environmental Management, Massachusetts Pesticide Board, and the Department of Public Health. Legislation protecting residential areas and wetlands from aerially-sprayed chemicals is already being drawn up for introduction in the next session of the legislature, and Fossel said the group is also researching the possibility of a law establishing the right of individuals to be protected from chemical trespass.

"Maybe even more importantly, we want to put together a citizens' guide to gypsy moths and pesticides, summarizing what is known of various chemical and biological controls, and how these obnoxious bugs can be handled with less hazardous means," he said.

Meanwhile, local anti-Sevin groups which sprung up this spring in response to town spray programs are continuing work on their own to raise funds for past legal fees, monitor the effects of this year's spraying, and collect information to help property-owners get through future gypsy moth infestations.

"Every town is unique, but we decided to work together on this one," Fossel said.

"Probably the best way to control gypsy moths is to control ourselves, and our hair-trigger desire to spray some chemical on every nuisance bug we find. Better, and cheaper, to let Nature work. She knows the rules."

For information call Peter Fossel, 934-0455.

Studds kicks off reelection campaign

Congressman Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass. this week officially kicked off his campaign for reelection to the U.S. House of Representatives by announcing the opening of his South Shore Campaign Headquarters at 650 Plain St. (Rte. 139), Marshfield.

Studds, a resident of Cohasset who has represented the 12th Congressional District since 1973, said that his reelection campaign would focus principally on his record as a U.S. Congressman. Studds will face Republican Jack Conway, also of Cohasset, in the November election.

"I am very proud of what we have been able to achieve over these past 10 years. Not only with respect to our legislative accomplishments, which have been significant, but in terms of the close relationship and mutual respect which has developed between the people of Southeastern Massachusetts and their Congressman," he said.

Studds, an outspoken advocate of reforming campaign financing laws during his five terms in Congress, said that his 1982 campaign would again be run by an extensive team of volunteers in each of the 45 communities in the district.

"Over the years we have assembled an impressive number of troops in each of our towns and will be relying heavily upon them once again," Studds said.

He said the committee would not accept individual contributions over $500 this year (one-fourth of the amount allowed by Federal law).

Studds said this week's opening of his Marshfield headquarters would be followed shortly by the opening of one in New Bedford to coordinate campaign activities in the Greater New Bedford area, and one in Hyannis, to coordinate efforts on Cape Cod and the Islands.

He urged anyone interested in learning more about his campaign to call his South Shore campaign office at 837-5031 or visit the office at 650 Plain St. (Rte. 139), Marshfield 02050.

was resolved," said DeBassio, "We understand each others positions. We may never agree in terms of everything."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle asked DeBassio if the board ever got involved with the day-to-day operation of the police department. DeBassio responded, "No."

DeBassio further stated, "The order to use Officer Ainslie under the circumstances at the time...affected the day-to-day operation of the police department." Laugelle said the board's vote was not an order but rather a decision that civil service rules be followed regarding patrolman Ainslie's work schedule.

McArthur suggested that the issue not be "rehashed." Selectmen agreed that they wanted to work with DeBassio in establishing a police department manual.

requires 100 voter signatures to appear as an article in the town meeting warrant.

The group expects to collect well over the required 100 signatures and submit the petition sometime today (Wednesday).

One source from the small group lobbying for a five-member board of selectmen said the group feels people with good business management skills are needed on the board. And at least two people have already expressed an interest in running for office, said the source.

Cohasset High School's student government day legislators Senator Justine Hoffman and Rep. Paul Johnson met with Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray at the State House for the Annual Student Government Day. Justine and Paul were elected by their classmates as the most honorable representatives of the Cohasset class of 1982.

☐The neighbors noticed...they realized something wonderful was about to happen for some time now. But it wasn't until this past weekend that many of them understood something very wonderful had happened to some very nice new neighbors. At the corner of Forest Avenue and Old Coach Road there was a sign proclaiming the event: Meagan Katherine Leahy, born June 27, 1982. Congratulations to Trish and Daniel C. Leahy! Dan is the General Manager of Hugo's. Meagan was, reportedly, christened this past Sunday.

☐Good news from the Yacht Club kids: Skipper Kurt Weisenfluh pivoted his crew (Caroline Ford, Dicky Keane and Chris Hublitz) to a third place finish in the Hull Finley Championship this year. Scott Duncombe was too busy working to defend his first place Finley finish last year, but Weisenfluh and crew certainly gave it a good Cohasset try! They sailed an Ensign.

☐In other Yacht Club news, Amy Duncombe and Aidan O'Connell, 10th and 9th graders respectively, placed 5th in the Charles Trophy Competition last week. They competed against 13 boats. Good show!

☐The week of August 16 through 20 the Cohasset Yacht Club will host the National 210 Championship. It is predicted that 40 to 50 boats will compete in the "open" event. Last year John Keane of the Cohasset Club placed second in the Nationals. Susie Duncombe reports that unlike most sailboat races, this one will be a colorful one to watch from your boat or from Bassing Beach.

☐Clive O'Rourke recently graduated with honors from the Cohasset Recreation's Dog Training Classes on the Common. Heidi Chapman will be participating in the soon-to-start eight week class. These classes really are very worthwhile and very funny to watch. A few years ago a trainer looked askance at spectators on the sidelines when they started distracting dogs and their owners with their belly laughs. Funny, unless you're a dog-owner.

☐Candy bars cost seven cents a bar in England. That little bit of news from Alison Doherty who is now back from England, along with Joy, Julie and Robbie Manns, who took her there. She brought her mother some lovely mashed potato cubes and lots of literature to share with her fourth grade classmates this fall.

☐Nancy Clapp and her family recently had the unique experience of donating a goat to the Heifer International Organization. Marlisa Clapp has been invited to write an original article about the details of the donation for the Mariner, so we won't spoil her upcoming article with too many details. Heifer International has a holding place in Plymouth (1-746-7141) which will take goats, heifers, chickens, cows, sheep, but no cats or dogs. If you're overstocked, or just want to make a donation, call the above number. The animals are given to people who need them and their products, to live.

☐From Marlisa Clapp comes the news Sandy Beach lifeguards are conducting salt water swimming lessons for toddlers through August 19. Before you run your tot up there, talk to a lifeguard for more information.

☐Charlene Burns of Jerusalem Road was recently elected to the Board of Directors of the Cohasset Community Center. She will serve the center in the newly created position of Historian.

☐Up until the third week in August you can view the lovely primitive paintings of Jeanne L. Replogle, whose paintings were selected to be "The President's Choice Show" exhibit this year. Jeanne studied at Northwestern University in Illinois and at the Chicago Art Institute. She became accomplished in primitive art paintings during her partnership in the former Sea Heather Antique Shop, in Cohasset. You can see and buy her paintings also at the Tides Inn and the Green Gage Plum. Summer South Shore Art Center gallery hours are 10-2 p.m., Monday-Friday.

☐Dr. and Mrs. Steven Golden along with Justine (1½) and 5-year-old Rebecca and their dog, Tika, recently returned from a week-long vacation in Maine where they celebrated the birth of a cousin. Amy Golden is an auntie eight times over!

☐Recently, there was a Cohasset orgy at Re-play in the Rialto Zone of Paragon Park. We saw them, with their little eyes gleaming like aliens. When it came time to go home, they were glued to their machines. The adults who accompanied them couldn't pull them off. "They" were: Tony Morgan, Alex Knox (wearing a green-feathered Deeley-Bopper), Colin Knox who said he couldn't leave until he played the "rest" (15) of his Re-play tokens (parents beware, you can't cash your tokens in for money, you can only cash your money in for tokens), Ian Knox, Jacob Powell and the Kasperowicz Kids. Kathy Morgan (who was wearing a Star Deeley-Bopper) and I agreed we would never accompany or be responsible for any such group of aliens again. At least not in the Rialto Zone of Hull.

Airport '82

By Suzanne Diaz

What is there about airports that has such a strange effect on children? Could it be something to do with the ozone layer, or the sound waves of jets taking off and landing? Or perhaps the radiation from all those television sets showing arrivals and departures . .

We were simply going in to Logan to meet a friend arriving from Seattle with her son. We got there in plenty of time, made it to the coffee shop and fed everybody in comparative peace. When we got to the indicated gate of arrival, we discovered our friend's plane would be 20 minutes late. As one person, we all moved toward the sign that said Restrooms.

My husband went into the one with a little man above the door. I went into the adjoining counterpart, and was inside for 3 and 3/4 minutes. When I emerged, I discovered that my four-year-old son had stopped an escalator. He pressed one of the funny buttons. It seemed that an alarm had rung and the escalator stopped, leaving incoming passengers standing immobilized with their suitcases. But nobody seemed to care, so as a group we moved off toward some seats.

There was only one available seat left next to an ashtray built like a potty chair. My husband did not care to sit there, so he simply retired behind the row of seats (occupied) and lay down on the floor with his hands behind his head. The children were now into the race-around-and-fight syndrome, and the baby fell over in her stroller. I looked at them all, and said calmly, "Come on, children, let's go see if we can locate your parents."

I led them over to a large viewing window where incoming planes could be seen. The two boys raced over, and the four-year-old screamed bloody murder because the 11-year-old beat him. My older daughter leaned against a rail and moaned that nobody loved her, especially me, who always favored the other three. The baby kept roaming into areas plainly intended for airport personnel only.

Finally, I left the one to her grievances, and herded the other three back to the arrival gate, where my husband had headed from his cozy berth on the floor. Our friends arrived, to great rejoicing. They are the only, and I mean only, incoming passengers I have ever met who managed to carry all their luggage in backpacks on the plane, and did not need to go through the agony of baggage claim. No need to stand for half an hour trying to keep the younger children off the baggage carousels.

My maligned older daughter having joined us, we headed to the elevators which would take us to the garage. In went 11, 10, 4. Somehow, the doors closed before the rest of us could get in. The wails of 4 came eerily up through the shaft until finally the elevator returned for the rest of us.

Well, we all had a wonderful 10-day visit, and on the day of departure for Seattle, we left Boston in plenty of time to get to the airport. I mean it only takes about 15 minutes to get to Logan from downtown, doesn't it? Except there was this pickup truck that broke down in the right lane of the Callahan tunnel . . . oh, well. They made the flight with seconds to spare.

Fire chief selection

The question of expanding the list of finalists for fire chief, which will come up at the August 30 special town meeting, is a tough one to call.

In the first place, we were never happy with binding the selectmen to picking one of three candidates recommended by the selection committee. We think appointing a new chief ought to be the selectmen's exclusive responsibility.

If townspeople don't think the present crop of selectmen is qualified to make such an appointment, the proper place to express their sentiment is at annual town election. While the incumbents are in office they should have the authority to make major appointments — and be answerable for bad appointments.

The trouble in principle with restricting selectmen to picking one of three is that the board is thereby relieved of its proper accountability. At the same time it is as a practical matter quite possible for them to influence the search committee.

We well recall when former Gov. Dukakis much wanted to appoint one Paul Liacos to a high judicial position and found that Liacos was not being considered by the Judicial Nominating Committee. It swifty came to pass that not only was Liacos considered by the committee, he emerged with a highly favorable recommendation...and got the appointment over all others.

So in our view it is a mistake to make any search committee's recommendation binding on duly elected, duly accountable officials.

On the other hand, we think "process" is important. Ongoing procedures ought to be followed. We may have disagreed with creating a binding search committee, but the deed done we do not in principle approve of doing an end-run around the selection committee's charge.

The time to alter procedures that are found wanting isn't in the middle of a selection process, it is afterwards. What are we to say to the three finalists who have applied in good faith for the fire chief's position? They have been told they are the final three, and now we're going to tell them, "Well sorry, fellas, we're rerigging the selection process so as to include some good ol' local boys!"

That's not the way a classy town does business!

But as we said, this issue is a very tough one to call. Both the "pros" and the "cons" for expanding the list of finalists are strong. What we think ought to be the decisive consideration is one thing:

Let's get Cohasset the best possible fire chief.

Our judgement is that the best way to do that is to expand the list of finalists to include all eight semi-finalists. Our judgement is that the fire department and the town will be better served if the strong feelings of many firefighters and many residents that the selection committee acted too quickly in eliminating some candidates is taken into consideration by the selectmen — even if the appointment finally goes to one of the three current finalists.

We therefore — reluctantly — recommend a "yes" vote to expand the list of finalists at special town meeting. Not only do we think that's the best way to get the best chief, we think the new chief, whoever he is, will have an easier time of it if he doesn't have to confront a segment of the department and a segment of the town that is disgruntled over what they believe was a cursory selection process.

A few more words on 'E.T.'

Dear Breida and Skipper:

Let me make one thing perfectly clear. I enjoyed taking you to see "E.T." The creature, bless his scaley hide, was adorable. I haven't taken to a cinema character this way since I fell in love with Dumbo.

Nevertheless, much as I loved the cuddlesome pachyderm, at no time did I consider harboring a baby elephant in any closet I own. I confess to a similar prejudice against sheltering alien beings.

Let's face it, kids. The movie left a lot of questions unanswered. Was E.T. housebroken? If not, who cleaned up after him? Did anyone? And don't bother swearing you'll train your pet extra-terrestrial. That's what Larry told me about his kitten.

Other matters were not left to the imagination. They were spelled out in glorious color. Appealing though he was, E.T. was a slob. He could reduce any room in the house to a shambles in less time than it takes to rattle a sensor. Further, as one of the characters in the epic pointed out, he ate "like a pig."

I will say one thing for E.T. He was willing to try new gustatory experiences. His habit, however, of spitting food he didn't like on the floor was not, in my opinion, socially acceptable. It had been my hope that I would not have to cope with this type of behavior after my youngest child reached the age of three. I also strongly object to space creatures who raid their hosts' refrigerators and swill beer.

I was alarmed to note that when an extra-terrestrial sickens one does not call a veterinarian or even a pediatrician. It's necessary to call in an entire N.A.S.A. medical team. They arrive wearing white space suits with American flags on them, set up enough gear to equip Skylab and take over the house. The expense alone boggles the mind. I mean, we're talking house call, for heaven's sake.

And while we're on the subject of expense, I'd like to point out that any lonely visitors from another galaxy who experience a desire to "phone home" had darn well better not charge it to my bill.

What's more, should a clever little alien feel impelled to collect enough spare parts to build himself a walkie-talkie, our Sears charge is strictly out of bounds. Understood?

I guess what I'm trying to say is this: Remember how I always assured you that your friends were welcome in our home at all times? Remember all that stuff I said about "Mi casa, su cass"? Well, this did not include hospitality to extra-terrestrial beings. Frankly, I never thought the question would arise.

I am not without compassion. Should you happen upon a homeless wanderer from a distant planet I will be happy to offer advice. Let me strongly recommend registering at the Clipper Ship. I even have some discount tickets for the pool. E.T. is welcome to them. That is, if he's housebroken.

Love,
Mom

In this instance "Mom" is none other than the Mariner's own, Claire McDonough. Who else would foresee the danger or ask the question: "Was E.T. housebroken?"

School Committee 'dragging' on drugs

Letters

To the Editor:

The School Committee's delay in approving the complete Drug and Alcohol Abuse Guide is inexcusable. If the Committee desired some rewriting of the Guide it was their obligation to have a meeting prior to their July 20 meeting where the guide was on the agenda for approval. For months the policy or the guide have been on School Committee agendas only to be postponed or given minor lip service at the latest hour of School Committee Meetings.

Treating the approval of the Drug and Alcohol Policy and Guide in this manner is an insult to the intelligence and dedication of the members of the committee who worked for over a year to prepare the draft. School staff, a member of the School Committee, Chief DeBassio, members of the medical profession, Town counsel, parents, and interested citizens gave a great deal of time to this project.

With the new school year approaching it is not wise to be scurrying to finalize what could easily have been done several months ago. The newspapers have carried large sections of the draft and there has been repeated mention of the subject being on School Committee Agendas. Citizens have had their chances to react to the draft. The time is long past for many further delays for input or bringing in new reviewers. Many school systems have had written policies on drug and alcohol abuse for a long time. It is time Cohasset has their policy so staff, students, and parents will clearly know the rules. The complete Drug and Alcohol Guide needs to be completed and approved now.

Dukakis should focus on 'his' philosophy

To the Editor:

In answer to the shocking disclosure that his campaign chiefs play demeaning tapes for media people about Ed King's family life (including his wife's bout with polio), Mike Dukakis has refused to apologize saying, "The same thing probably goes on at King headquarters."

The fact is, the same thing does not go on at King headquarters, and as one who works there several days a week as a volunteer, I will tell you why. The people at Ed King's headquarters reflect the same decent, hard-working ethic as the candidate they support.

The snide and arrogant group who would engage in such perverted behavior as was exhibited at Dukakis headquarters would find no support among the folks at Governor King's headquarters. This type of behavior is of another world — one which as a housewife and mother, I will probably never understand.

Hopefully, Mr. Dukakis' campaign will turn from these perverted and demeaning activities and debate philosophical differences. The voters deserve more substantive discussions than they are getting from the Dukakis side. I believe a continued subversion of the issues indicates a weakness in Dukakis which will not go unnoticed by the voters on September 14, 1982.

Selectmen briefs

TRASK APPOINTED FIRE CAPTAIN

Firefighter Mark Trask was appointed captain by selectmen last week. The board voted unanimously to petition Civil Service to certify Trask as captain.

At age 26, Trask has served the fire department for five years. After a brief meeting with the board Trask told selectmen he was looking forward to serving the department as captain.

PATROLMAN COGILL COMMENDED

Patrolman Brian Cogill was commended by both Police Chief John DeBassio and selectmen last week for his participation and professional performance in the recent homicial investigation which was undertaken by the police department in November at the Cohasset Golf Club.

Selectmen agreed last week to send letters of commendation to both Cogill and the police department recognizing their fast work in solving the Robert Kemp murder.

A popular postmaster...

after he served in the Coast Guard and was appointed postmaster in 1948 as one of the state's youngest in charge at age 27.

He received several awards and appointments for his outstanding contributions to the postal association. Keating served as the editor for the "Baystater," a postmaster's publication, for the past three years. He was past-president of the Norfolk County Postmasters Association and a member of the Plymouth County Chapter of NAPU's.

Keating was one of three postal representatives for the state who traveled to Washington's District of Columbia twice a year to meet with Congress.

Keating has seen many changes within the postal system during his 42-year career. In 1950 a nationwide change was implemented of cutting back from two deliveries per day to one delivery. Despite one less delivery each day, "We still had plenty of work but expanded the length of the route," said Keating.

The most revolutionary change was in the distribution concept, said Keating, where small post offices sent their mail to Boston for sorting. "We surrendered clerk hours to realize a savings," he said. All out-of-town mail which is mailed in Cohasset still goes to the Boston offices for sorting today.

Keating says the postal system is moving toward automation. Labor makes up 85 percent of the postal costs and to stabilize postal rates Keating said new methods and concepts need to be developed.

In order for automation to be effective four numbers need to be added to each home's zip code, said Keating. Congress has o.k.'d a nine digit zip code to be implemented in 1983 for citizens. Keating repeated, the zip code would not be nine new numbers — only four additional numbers.

The nine digit zip code would help to stabilize postal rates, said Keating. Though a number of postal employee positions would be reduced the efficiency in service would remain.

People shouldn't fear the new nine digit zip code because it's not meant for the average homeowner, said Keating. The four extra digits are for businesses to use. "If businesses will use it, it will be successful," said Keating.

Big companies will realize a big savings by using the nine digit zip code, he said. Some magazines and publications from big businesses are already using the four extra digits on a voluntary basis and individual homeowners might not have noticed the difference. Last Friday, Keating showed the Mariner a piece of mail which was recently sent to his home with the nine digit zip code.

During the past year Keating and his postal workers have developed and assigned four extra zip code digits for each Cohasset home. "It was a time consuming job," said Keating. Maps and the proposed zip code numbers were sent to Tennessee officials twice for upgrading and review, he said. "We're pretty much ready to go now," said Keating.

With the reduction of some 70,000 postal workers since 1971 the system's productivity has increased by 38 percent, said Keating. And while the rubber, automobile and steel industries are attempting to adopt methods and ideas from Japan, "It is the Japanese who are looking to the United States Post Office to steal some of our methods," Keating said. The U.S. has a 75 percent better production rate than the Japanese postal service. Keating said, "There isn't an industrialized business in the world that could match the production cost efficiency of the U.S. Postal system...I say that with pride...my work has been a small contribution to the whole effort."

Keating was a 1937 graduate of Cohasset High School and a three-sport athletic standout. He captained the football and track teams and also played on the baseball team. In his senior year, Keating received one of the town's first athletic awards from the school committee for "Athletic supremacy and good sportsmanship."

Keating, a lifelong resident of Cohasset, has been involved in the following community activities: Little League Baseball coach and first Farm League director, scoutmaster for the troop at St. Anthony's Church, past Rotary Club president, vice-president of the Cohasset Community Center, grand knight of Cohasset's Knights of Columbus, lector usher and choir member at St. Anthony's Church, Chairman of Cohasset School Committee, chairman of the personnel board, member of town government study committee, civil defense director, president of hockey boosters club and one of three men to form the club, director of veteran's services. member of James Brook committee, town recreation study committee.

On Sundays Keating often attended three meetings. He arranged staggered starting times so he could participate in all meetings. During his hectic schedule of community meetings, Keating said he was fortunate that his wife Margaret (O'Connor) was cooperative and patient.

Keating has seven children including six sons who have met with much success in sports especially football. Though Keating says sports is not the number one priority for his family he said his children's sports participation has kept them out of trouble.

Gerard and Margaret Keating have seven grandchildren also. Joan Bowman, 36, is their daughter, who has two children, and is living with her husband at Parris Island in South Carolina. She was a teacher overseas, in Hull, and in New York before moving to South Carolina.

Larry, 34, is the eldest son of Gerard and Margaret. He lives in Hull and works as a clerk at the Cohasset Post Office. He has five children.

Keating's second oldest son, Allen was killed while serving the army in the Vietnam War. Keating spoke of Allen as an excellent left-handed booter and quarterback for the Cohasset High School team. In fact it was Allen who predicted that the Skippers would upset unbeaten Hull in a Thanksgiving Day game in the 1960's.

Tom, 31, still holds the school record for most pass receptions at Cohasset High School. He captained the CHS football team and majored in Journalism at the University of Maine. He is currently working as a salesman.

Brian, 29, was selected to the all-scholastic football and baseball teams while in High School. He attended St. Frances Xavier College in Nova Scotia and was selected to the All-Canada football squad.

Brian was heavy weight wrestler champion of the Maritime Provinces for three years. At the University of Ottawa he was a member of the undefeated football team which was hailed as the best college football team ever assembled in Canada. He was a free agent with the Baltimore colts. He recently earned his captain's license to take command of 110 vessels.

Chris, 24, is linebacker in his fourth year with the Buffalo Bills professional team in the NFL. He is captain of the special teams for the Bills. During the off-season, Chris works in the advertising business in Buffalo.

Stephen, 22, is a senior at the University of Maine and is majoring in communications. This fall he will captain the football team for the second year. Stephen has already been contacted by three professional football teams.

During the fall season, Gerard hopes to attend many of Stephen's and Chris's football games. And don't be surprised if you see the former postmaster sitting in the stands tending to some needlepoint.

Fran Walton and Fergus attended last week's session of dog obedience school which was sponsored by the recreation department.

McKinnon bill to investigate the MBTA

Sen. Allan McKinnon (D-Norfolk and Plymouth) and Rep. Thomas Gallagher (D-Boston) have filed legislation today to set up a special commission to investigate the mismanagement of the MBTA.

In a joint press conference at the State House, both legislators cited a recent report issued by the MBTA Advisory Board which documented instances of flagrant mismanagement of the "T" system.

"In filing this resolve," they stated, "we are voicing the overwhelming frustration of the public with the MBTA. That public is crying out, 'No more! — No more waste; no more political patronage; no more graft!' "

They continued, "In 1981 was the third year of the King Administration, and those of us who said things couldn't get worse, and the "T" had no where to go but up have been proven wrong by the King Administration. Things did get worse! The managers of the "T" aren't fooling anyone. Commuters are not about to take public transit if it's not reliable and does not provide the service they need to get in and out of Boston. This is illustrated by ridership figures released last week by the Advisory Board which indicate a drop in ridership from 3 million average weekly riders in February, 1981 to a low of 2 million weekly in December of that same year. Despite this drop, costs in December were 61 percent higher than usual. This is clearly indicative of wasteful transit management and a deliberate attempt to spend the approved budget in order to justify a request for even more money for the next year."

According to the report, absenteeism is up 20 percent from 1980 levels, with industrial accident hours per person up 45.2 percent. To cover these absences, 443 additional employees were needed.

He added, "The people of Massachusetts in general and the taxpayers of the MBTA district in particular are paying through the nose for an ineffi cient and scandalously mismanaged transit system. It's adding insult to injury when the citizens of the South Shore have to read how poorly the "T" is run. Firstly, many South Shore towns pay assessments and have no direct service whatsoever. Secondly, the money which they pay without receiving any service is squandered on this bloated "T" albatross."

McKinnon and Gallagher said the public should not have to put up with this blatant inefficiency day after day.

Both legislators said the report confirms what their constitutents have been telling them about the ineffectiveness of the mass transit system in the Commonwealth.

SPEED LIMIT POSTED ON KING ST.

Selectmen voted last Wednesday to ask the state department of public works to survey King St. and post a 30-mile-an-hour speed limit. The board based their vote on Police Chief John DeBassio's recommendation.

DeBassio had received several speeding complaints in the area and said several property damage incidents were reported during past months. He hoped the posted speed limit would help to reduce the present hazard. Selectmen said the survey would be done at no cost to the town.

FIREFIGHTER RESIGNS

After 31 years of service to the town, firefighter David Marks will be retiring from the department next month. Selectmen accepted the resignation of Marks at their meeting last week and agreed to send a letter of appreciation to him. Marks' resignation becomes effective Aug. 31.

Elderly Services, Inc. seeks spending priorities

South Shore Elder Services, Inc., the Area Agency on Aging serving the South Shore, this week issued a request for proposal for high priority elderly community services for 1983.

According to Eileen Kirby, Executive Director of South Shore Elder Services, the agency may lose up to 18 percent of the Federal funding made available from the Older Americans Act to help develop a system of elderly community services.

"Federal funding cuts for elderly community services are expected, but allocations for 1983 are not yet final, so we don't have a sense of exactly how much we'll have to cut back," Eileen Kirby explained.

Priority areas for funding include: in-home services, transportation, nutrition services, energy, health, and senior centers.

Decisions on funding awards will be made by the agency Board of Directors in November of this year. Funding guidelines are listed in the Request for Proposal packet available now through Aug. 6. To obtain a copy, contact Anne Connolly, Planning Coordinator at South Shore Elder Services, 430 Main St., Cohasset 02025. The telephone number is 383-9790 or 335-1310.

Summer soccer boys fare well

Three area South Shore all-star soccer teams including players from Marshfield, Cohasset, Scituate and Hanover, are faring well in summer league action.

The' boys 15, 16 and 17 year old squad, coached by Jeff Chandler of Duxbury, is 0-1-1. Dennis Sullivan of Marshfield knocked in the tying goal against Norfolk to lift the team to a 2-2 tie Sunday.

Judd Schollin of Scituate opened the scoring for South Shore as he knocked in a loose ball in the penalty area. Sullivan's goal tied the score with 10 minutes left in the game. Coach Chandler said his team dominated the game and was impressed with the short passing game. "We have a lot of skill here. We're just missing the post."

Earlier this summer, Chandler's team lost to Pioneer Valley 3-0 and will meet Essex County in an away game Sunday.

GIRLS UNDER 14

Coach Sean O'Malley of Scituate has coached his girls under 14 years old squad to a 1-1-1 record. The team scored a victory over Essex 4-3, lost to South Shore 4-1 and tied Middlesex 1-1 Sunday.

Becky Morrison of Hanover scored the tying goals as her boot was directed into the net by an opposing player.

Outside of the loss to South Shore, O'Malley said his team is doing well. He is pleased his team beat Essex, one of the better all-star teams in the state. O'Malley's team will face Essex in a return match Sunday in Topsfield.

BOYS UNDER 14

Scituate Selectman Constantine Constantinides' team is 1-2 after three weeks of play after losing 4-1 to a strong Middlesex team Sunday.

The lone goal was scored by Chris Kirkendall of Cohasset who scored unassisted in the second half on a breakaway goal.

Strawberry Parfait boys take Hingham

A sensational third-out catch by Cohasset's J.L. Murphy in centerfield paved the way for Strawberry Parfait's 14-8 victory over the Hingham Fire Department's softball team Sunday.

Murphy was the key to Cohasset's win, said Coach David Pomarico. He made a diving catch, rolled over and came up with the ball in his glove just when Strawberry Parfait needed it most — in the 8th inning with Cohasset leading 9-8. If that ball had gone through two runs might have scored, said Pomarico.

Murphy's glove-save boosted his team in scoring five runs in the ninth inning to secure the win. The Strawberry Parfait softball squad had a record of 10-2 and could conceivably finish in first place if they beat the Hingham Police "A" team.

The Strawberry Parfait softball team is in third place in the Men's South Shore Civic Softball League.

Against Hingham Fire, Ned Nista was on the mound for Cohasset and had an equally impressive performance offensively at the plate. He had two hits including a triple. Danny O'Connell, the catcher, had three hits and first baseman Peter Laugelle added two.

Murphy slugged two hits for Cohasset and Brian Noonan smashed an important single during Cohasset's five-run rally in the last inning.

The Strawberry Parfait squad had 15 hits and three errors. The Hingham fire team collected eight bloopers in the field.

Cohasset will be without shortfielder Donny Cahill indefinitely because of a hand injury.

Strawberry Parfait, the defending league champions, will play Hingham Police "B" this Sunday. Cohasset will meet Hingham Police "A" in a make-up game the following Sunday.

APPOINTMENTS

The school committee unanimously appointed Dennis Walsh as coordinator of the computer and science and math league.

The following extra compensation appointments were also voted last week: David Infusino, boys' varsity basketball coach; Patricia Wunschel, yearbook advisor; Kenneth Ross, varsity wrestling coach; and Garret Reagan, assistant ice hockey coach.

GJESTEBY DELEGATED

School committee member Martha Gjesteby was chosen last week as the board's delegate to the M.A.S.C. Convention Nov. 5. Member Joseph Nedrow was chosen as the committee's alternate.

RESIGNATION

The resignation of Nancy Gilmore as an aide at the Deer Hill School was accepted by the school committee last Tuesday. Because of the constraints of proposition 2½, Gilmore was assigned as a special needs aide but said she would have been more comfortable teaching in the regular classroom.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said, "This is a fine teacher and we will miss her." The committee accepted the resignation with great regret.

SOCCER TRIP APPROVED

The school committee gave the go-ahead last week for a two-day overnight trip for the boys' and girls' soccer teams. The soccer teams are planning to travel to Nauset on September 30.

The committee voted unanimously to grant permission for the overnight trip saying that it was their understanding that the trip would be well chaperoned. Member Joseph Nedrow was concerned with the fundraising efforts and hoped that both the boys and girls contribute equally. The teams will sponsor a car wash this Saturday, July 31 from 9 a.m. to.2 p.m. at the High School.

P.E. TEACHER NAMED

William Fallon was named last Tuesday to succeed Everett Dorr as the Junior-Senior High School physical education teacher in September. Dorr retired this year.

Fallon has taught as long term substitute for the past two years in the Cohasset school system. He has coached the girls' soccer, basketball and softball teams. School Supt. Crowell said Fallon is more than a good coach. "I find in Mr. Fallon a good background at the University of Massachusetts. He is well certified and qualified." "I've seen him in his teaching duties and I have a hard time looking at anyone else." Crowell said he enthusiastically recommended Fallon for appointment by the school board.

The committee's vote to appoint Fallon was 4-1 with member Martha Gjesteby opposed because no other candidates were interviewed for the position. Gjesteby said she was bothered that 26 other resumes were submitted yet no others were interviewed by high school principal Richard Streeter.

Fallon was appointed at a Step Two level rather than Step One because of his two years of service to the schools. Member Joseph Nedrow said the Step Two appointment would be a nice way to recognize Fallon's excellent service to the schools.

COMPUTER USE POLICY

The school committee voted 4-1 last week to allow computer equipment to be used at home by teachers during non-school time such as summer vacation.

School board member Martha Gjesteby said she was opposed to the policy and had received several complaints on the topic. She maintained that teachers should have time to practice on the computers but only in the school buildings.

Supt. Crowell said teachers should be encouraged to further their education on the computers as part of the inservice program which has been offered. The computers should be made available for use by the teachers in their homes and "not to allow my teachers the use of computers — is not right. You certainly would not withhold textbooks," said Crowell.

If computers were lost or damaged they would have to be replaced or repaired by the teacher, said Crowell. He said that any repair or damage costs could be taken out of the payroll checks at the central office.

School committee member Joseph Nedrow said the teachers' familiarity with computers "will benefit our kids."

However Nedrow said the school should be held responsible for normal breakdowns of the computers.

Said Gjesteby, "These computers are not ours, they are owned by the town. We are the custodians of the equipment."

She argued that the computers should be used by teachers in the school buildings. The computers should also be open for use by townspeople, said Gjesteby.

At this time, Crowell said, teachers need to get a little bit ahead of the kids. Nancy Clapp asked that in future years that the computers be offered to students for use during the summers.

The committee voted to allow the school supt. to oversee utilization of the computers until such a time that a new policy is needed. For now the computers will be lent out to teachers on a rotational basis.

POSSIBLE RELEASE OF SCHOOL LAND

The school committee is open for discussion concerning the release of some land at Rte. 3A and Ripley Road for a new Art Center. It was the consensus of the committee that the South Shore Art Center should continue their research on about three parcels of school land.

If an agreement were reached the schools would release the land to the town and a vote at town meeting would be required to allow the South Shore Art Center to build.

Committee Chairman Diana Kornet said the location of the Art Center in Cohasset would be an educational asset for the school children. Member Joseph Nedrow said the committee should encourage the Art Center to explore possibilities. The release of land for the proposed Art Center to explore possibilities. The release of land for the proposed Art Center involves about five to eight acres of land.

Famous media people to participate in Cohasset auction

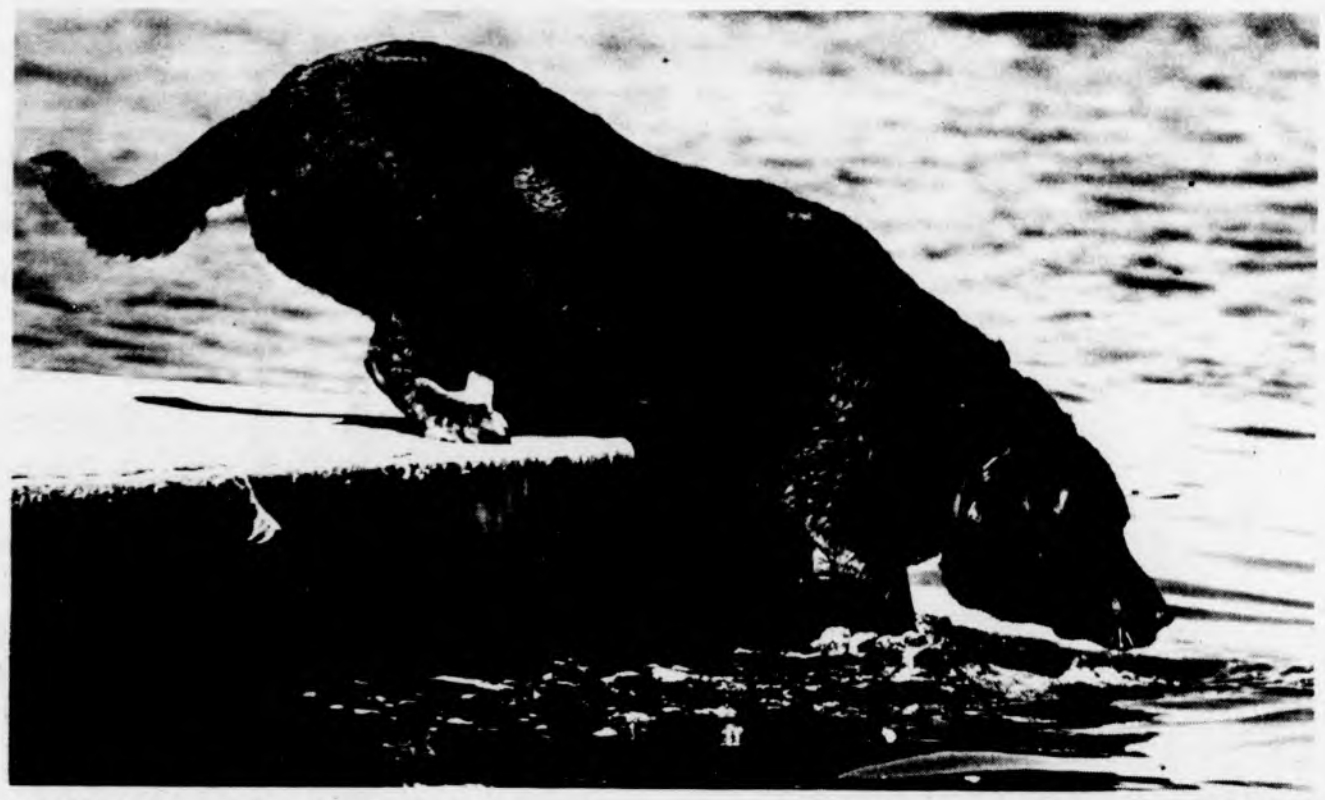
By David Wadsworth

With the date of the Cohasset Historical Society's gala Celebrity Auction fast approaching, the individuals and committees planning the event are busier than ever to ensure its success.

Scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 7 at 1:30 p.m. in the Cohasset Town Hall, the Historical Society's major project for this summer will see Nick Mills of WITS radio acting as the Guest Auctioneer with assistants Norma and Norm Nathan; she is a columnist for the "Herald American," he a familiar figure on WRKO radio.

Working to plan the Auction have been numerous Historical Society members. The original Auction Committee, which began its work last winter, includes Messers Drexel Gibson (he headed the first Society Auction two years ago), John Campbell, John Mullet and Mrs. Eleanor Cooney.

In addition, working on the advertising and catalog end of the project have been Messers Fred Howe, Osborne Ingram and Raymond Remick. Volunteer cataloging work has been done by Mrs. Charles Moebius. Mr. Burtram Pratt has assisted in the production of the Auction posters and catalog.



The Town Hall sign has been designed and produced by Sheldon Ripley. Society President Mrs. Constance Parker has asisted in all phases of the Auction project.

As for the Auction itself, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wood will head a team of volunteers to do the vital clerical work and recording so necessary to this type of event. Mrs. Ellery Highland will preside over a table of her famous baked foods made by a committee chosen by her. Also at the Town Hall you will be able to purchase raffle tickets for the Society's fabulous 1982 quilt, the all-new version of the popular Bicentennial quilt made by talented members and friends of the Society in 1976. Be sure to see the new quilt on display during the Auction and pick up some tickets for next November's raffle event.

This year's Celebrity Auction is the result of many hours of preparation by enthusiastic volunteers. Their goal is to raise funds for the Historical Society's museum buildings and the continuation of the Society's community activities. New Auction items still are arriving; for instance, an autographed golf glove from Arnold Palmer and a valuable gift certificate from the Whiton House in Hingham. More items may arrive, so be prepared for some surprises not listed in the Auction catalog.

Not even the Auction Committee can hazard a guess as to what intriguing items may finally be included. Plan now to participate in the Historical Society's Celebrity Auction at the Town Hall on Aug. 7 and bring the whole family, there will be fascinating things for all ages.

Conway says Cohasset is a 'magic' name

By Jane Lane

The office manager of the Cohasset branch of Jack Conway Real Estate, agreed with last week's Mariner article which painted a bright picture of the town's realty market.

Muriel Desmond described the past year as "very good" for the local Conway branch, and added that there were two and one-half more sales in June than a year ago.

She attributes the continually good real estate market to "the magic name of Cohasset."

"Cohasset has always been a magic name in real estate," she said. "It is considered one of the most unique towns in Massachusetts. Whenever we advertise a Cohasset property, we always get a lot of response."

Conway, which has been in Cohasset for 25 years, had a "very good" business year, despite the faltering economy.

"The real estate market within Cohasset has not seemed to be as negatively affected as in other towns. Most often we find a more sophisticated buyer in Cohasset, someone who has purchased three or four homes in the past and can use that as equity," she noted.

As many other realtors explained, the bulk of their business in this town is due to the executive who is transferred by his company and purchases property in town.

"Many executives throughout the country have heard of Cohasset, especially if they are fond of oceanfront property," Desmond said. "The name of Cohasset is familiar to many corporate executives." And for those special executives who decide to relocate into Cohasset, his or her company may often be willing to pay the difference between his old mortgage interest rate, and the new, larger rate.

Desmond explained that because Conway Realty belongs to RELO, the world's largest relocation service, most of its business pertains to the executive transferee.

"Being a member of RELO, plus being the largest real estate chain in New England, and owning our own mortgage company, has combined to make it a successful year in Cohasset," Desmond said.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

If sugar provides energy, why do you suppose young and old alike indulge in the costly habit of buying cereals already coated in sugar? It really doesn't take that much effort to sprinkle a little sweetening over a bowl of corn flakes. Advertising that lures you to buy the cereal that is "sugar frosted and fortified" neglects to add that it may be 35 to 50 percent sugar, before you even add your own. Hardly the way to start your day and certainly unlike a Kentucky breakfast in 1882 described as "three cocktails and a chaw of terbacker." Instead of sugar, sweeten cooked cereal with honey, fruit juice, or pure maple syrup. Stir in a handful of raisins, or serve with plenty of milk and add a topping of chopped nuts, sunflower seeds and a spoonful of wheat germ. Just about as easy as opening a box of cereal is this mix which you can store in a cool, dry place to have on hand for a sumptuous breakfast:

BUCKWHEAT PANCAKE MIX

1 c. light buckwheat flour
1 c. whole wheat flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. sugar

Mix all ingredients together and store. To make pancakes, combine 1 heaping c. pancake mix with 1 egg yolk, 2 T melted butter, 1 c. sour milk. Beat egg white until stiff and fold into batter. Cook pancakes on hot griddle or lightly greased heavy skillet. Brown on one side; turn when edges begin to brown and bubbles form on surface. Cook until golden on second side. Yield: Mix makes 4 to 4½ doz. 3" pancakes. Single recipe makes 20.

Kids who have watched the Saturday morning cartoons are quite entranced when cuddly dancing bears urge them to join them in munching on a bowl of sugary cereal. A juicy, thick hamburger served by a grinning, singing waitress seems most tempting and pop, colas or powdered fruit drinks far tastier than milk. But television offers much more interesting fare to mothers who watch programs dealing with cooking. As we all agree, Julia Childs is as amusing as she is clever, so when she suggested adding a blowtorch to ones cooking ware, it came as no surprise. Only she could come up with some legitimate uses, namely; using it to peel tomatoes and peppers, as well as to singe a plucked chicken. Carmelize the top of a dessert, says she, or brown the meringue for a Baked Alaska and "unmold an aspic with a blowtorch by turning the aspic mold upside down on a serving dish and waving the blowtorch around and around it and voila! But when you buy yours, be sure to get the kind with a flexible hose or automatic lighter; otherwise, you won't be able to circulate it freely as you work."

When you wrench your child away from cartoons, another pitfall awaits in the supermarket. The seeming hodgepodge of goods on display is all part of a grand design to get you to spend. When it comes to buying staples, costlier brands are displayed at eye level on the shelves and arranged so that you have to pass them in order to get to the generic products in their drab wrappers. Designed to tempt junior are the sugary cereals, cookies, candies and drinks arranged on lower shelves to catch his hungry eye. If the label says fruit drink, ade, nectar, punch, don't read any further, just continue along the aisle. A "juice-drink" is 50 percent juice, an "ade" 25 percent juice and a "drink" only 10 percent juice. All contain added sugar, water and almost always artificial color, flavor and preservatives, in canned, bottled and frozen concentrate varieties. It's cheaper and safer to buy fresh fruit and make:

ORANGEADE

2 c. orange juice
1/2 c. lemon juice
1/2 c. honey
1 c. water

Combine all ingredients and stir or shake to dissolve honey. Serve over cracked ice and garnish with orange slices.

MELON PUNCH

1 medium cantaloupe (2 c. diced pulp)
1 banana
Juice of one orange

Combine all ingredients in blender and puree until smooth. Serves 4 with lots of ice.

It's happening...

Landscape painting workshop

Margaret Dillon's annual Landscape Painting Workshop will take place this year from Aug. 16 through the 20th in two Cohasset locations chosen for their exciting pictorial potential.

Enrollment must be made in advance at the South Shore Art Center for this half-day workshop that meets from 9:30 to 12:30 each day.

Artists should come equipped to work outdoors in the medium of their choice and should be on an intermediate or advanced level. The workshop will focus on the joys and pitfalls of creating strong paintings from a wide variety of subject matter; individual attention will be given throughout the week and the workshop will close with a group critique.

Ms. Dillon is represented in Boston by the Helen Shlien Gallery and is an award-winning exhibitor in both Boston and New York. Her work is in the corporate collections of Hay Associates and the Charlestown Savings Bank. She received her B.A. in painting from Pomona College and also studied at the Art Institute and the Art Students League.

For further information, telephone 383-9548 Monday-Friday between 10 and 2.

Family story hour

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library invites school-age children and their parents to a Family Story Hour Monday, Aug. 9 at 7:30 p.m.

An accomplished teller of tales, Ms. Adelson has told stories throughout the Boston system and at the Boston Globe Book Festival. Her program will last about 45 minutes.

Save Saturday for the Mid Summer Stroll

The Cohasset Village and Harbor Association put the finishing touches on festival events planned for Saturday's Mid Summer Stroll.

Merchants were seen sprucing up the village area this week for Mid Summer Stroll which will feature activities and entertainment for all ages.

Local business will kick off the day with a softball game versus the police association at the Little League Field at 10 a.m. Musical entertainment, sidewalk cafes and good food will be available throughout the day in the village.

A lobster bake will take place in the afternoon with a special chowder booth sponsored by the Red Lion Inn. Horsedrawn firewagon rides will be given from 2 to 5 p.m.

A carillion concert will be performed by Earl Chamberlain at 4:30 p.m.

The winner of the Miss Cohasset contest will be crowned at 6 p.m. in the Historical Museum Courtyard. At that time Miss Cohasset and her court will be introduced to the public.

Single women, ages 15 to 21 are invited to enter the Miss Cohasset contest. Applicants should submit a photo, brief history, education, special interests and career plans by today (Wednesday). Materials should be delivered to the mail slots at the Tides Inn, 3 South Main St. or the Linen Chest on Brook St.

A panel of six judges will choose the winner of the Miss Cohasset contest Thursday evening. The judges are: Clark Chatterton, Irwin Cone, Mort Snead, Joseph McAuliffe, Ronnie Goodwin, and Mariner Newspaper Publisher David Cutler.

Following the Miss Cohasset ceremony, gift drawings will be announced in the Museum's Courtyard.

A block dance with music by "The Gist" is scheduled for 8 p.m. in front of the Texaco Station.

Including Fire Chief & Selectmen articles

Ten articles on special T.M. warrant

Selection of fire chief finalists won't be the only issue at special town meeting August 30.

Nine additional articles, including one calling for a five-member board of selectmen, have been reserved in the warrant for a vote at town meeting on the last Monday of the month.

The school committee has submitted an article requesting a $50,000 appropriation for renovations to the junior-senior high school auditorium and to repoint the high school walls.

A citizens' petition of more than 160 voter signatures is seeking approval to expand the board of selectmen from three to five members. The petition was submitted by residents who were unhappy with the way selectmen handled a dispute with the police chief concerning use of permanent intermittent patrolman Larry Ainslie, Jr., the chairman's nephew.

A previous town meeting article will be reworded so that both the North Cohasset fire station property and building would be put out for sale.

An article will ask special town meeting to accept Mass. law which would allow the town to tow vehicles from tow zones. And another article requests an appropriation for health insurance for the town.

Selectmen have reserved an article to pay for raises negotiated in this year's police contract in the event that a collective bargain agreement is ready before special town meeting.

Police Chief DeBassio has reserved an article for a

White (out) is in around the Common

Sometimes it takes more than a color chart and a paint brush to paint your home, particularly if you live near Cohasset Common.

Nearly 26 homeowners near the Common are members of the Cohasset Historic District Commission and as such are governed by rules stipulating what kind of exterior changes they can make to their homes.

Witness the case of Dr. John Martin and his wife, Carol, of 43 North Main St., who want — and apparently need — permission to change the color of their house on the common from white to beige with brown shutters. They've been waiting for permission since the end of June.

A decision on their request is expected early next week after the request is considered by the commission.

Through a four year-old bylaw, the District Commission has control over any visible change which residents might plan to make on their homes...color of mailbox, windowboxes, shutters, anything publicly visible. And according to some residents, Cohasset Town Meeting gave them that control.

In the meantime, the Martins feel their peeling, chipping home is in dire need of repair and paint before the rainy months set in. In a phone interview Tuesday morning, Carol Martin, a four-year resident of Cohasset, said she wasn't sure whether her current contractor could accomplish the work in August, as he was contracted with in July.

The Mariner did not attend the District Commission's meeting Monday, but according to residents, there were three or four letters of objection with

The Cohasset cable TV race begins

The preliminary round of bidding is set to begin next month as step one in bringing cable television to Cohasset.

The town's cable television committee is scheduled to open cable TV bid proposals Sept. 14.

The committee will then have 90 days to review and redraft specifications before advertising for final bids. Once final bids are reviewed, the committee will recommend one firm to selectmen who will in turn award the town a cable TV license for 15 years.

At last week's cable committee meeting, the members received information regarding normal and abnormal line extension hookups. Apparently most cable TV companies charge an extra fee for home connections beyond 150 feet.

Normal home connections, requiring less than the 150 feet of cable line would be free. Committee Chairman Joseph McCool told members that Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield estimates that 75 to 80 percent of Cohasset homes are within 50 feet of the road.

An engineer representing American Cablesystems of Boston, told the committee that an extra 100 feet of aerial cable would cost about 20 to 30 cents a foot. And an hourly labor rate of $15 to $30 might be charged also. Most abnormal hookups could be completed for less than $50, he said.

For the few homes affected in Cohasset, McCool said the town shouldn't have to pick up the tab. The committee wants contractors to specify their rates for extra line extensions to homes. Committee member Terry Farrell said that anyone with a setback of more than 200 feet can generally afford the extra fee.

The committee also decided at last Tuesday's meeting that the entire town should be served with cable. McCool noted that some companies in other towns had only offered to service 85 percent of the community.

In some towns, parts of communities would not be serviced because of a smaller population density.

It was estimated by the American Cablesystems engineer that most of Cohasset could be connected within nine months while 100 percent of the town could be served in about 15 months.

the committee said they want to look closer at companies which supply lock control devices or key boxes to shut off certain channels that parents don't want their children viewing.

Recycling business better

Business is better than last year at the town's recycling center. The recycling committee reports that after only six months of accepting glass and aluminum, the town has surpassed the amount of money raised last year.

The committee is studying possibilites for recycling of large appliances, oil and cardboard at the town's Cedar St. Landfill.

Newspaper recycling brought in $895 last year. Newspaper intake has decreased this year and only $187 has been raised to date.

The recycling committee would like to broaden their membership. Anyone interested in publicity or working with the school system should contact John Hubbard, 383-0586 or Arthur Lehr at 383-0388.

Selectmen to meet

The board of selectmen will meet tonight at town hall, 8 p.m. The board is scheduled to appoint Ubaldo DiBenedetto as Director of Civil Defense and Emergency Preparedness and to open bids for painting the Government Island house.

Selectmen will meet with Police Chief John DeBassio, Patrolman John Rhodes III and his attorney, John Ridge, at 8:30 p.m. The board is also expected to discuss parking rules and regulations for the town.

Contract renewal

The Board of Health and the Social Service League this week announced a renewal of contract for public health services for the people of Cohasset.

For seventy-one years, the Social Service League has provided excellent nursing services for residents of all ages.

This year, the League will provide services in the area of maternal and child health, senior keep-well clinics and extensive work in disease control. League members will distribute all vaccines to the local physicians, organize immunization clinics and investigate reports of communicable and contagious diseases.

In addition, home visits and consultations will be provided to handicapped individuals and those with chronic diseases. Health promotion is also an important concern of the League's nursing staff.

Weekly hypertension, diabetic screening is performed by the League staff. Additional screening clinics are planned throughout the year to meet the needs of the Townspeople.

If you have any particular questions about the services provided, call the League at 383-0771 or 383-0821, or stop by the office at 16 Highland Avenue.

Margaret Loud, R.N., Public Health Nurse, is available Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. The office is open every day from 8:30 to 3 to answer any questions.

School committee meeting

The school committee is scheduled to meet Monday, Aug. 9 to review and adopt guidelines for the schools Drug and Alcohol Abuse policy.

The committee will also vote to adjust non-union personnel salaries at that meeting.

New bids for the wharf

New bids for the second round of bidding on preliminary engineering designs for the extension of the Government Island Wharf are due Aug. 12. The harbor study committee will review the bids and narrow its choice to two firms.

The harbor study committee went into a second round of bidding after Coastal Zone Management received complaints from two firms in the first round of bidding. One company complained that their bid was lower than the one awarded and a second company charged that minority companies were not considered.

CZM ordered selectmen to rescind its award to Anderson-Nichols and Co. The firm had bid $16,900 which was $100 below the $17,000 grant appropriation from CZM.

Twelve companies originally bid on the project and all will be reconsidered all along new ones. CZM required that the harbor study committee write to small and minority businesses looking for bids and informing them of the wharf specifications.

Contract awarded for Cedar St. dump

The health board has awarded the bid to cap and expand the Cedar Street landfill site to the Sealund Corporation of Marshfield.

The Sealund Corporation was the low bidder in the third round of bids last week. Theirs was the only bid below the $240,000 appropriated at town meeting for the project. Sealund bid $235,000.

Last week the board received five bids for the four-acre expansion of the dump and capping of the existing landfill site. In the first two rounds of bidding, the town received no bids at or below the $240,000 appropriated for the project.

Other bids in the third round were: Albert Winslow of East Weymouth, $248,000; Sylvester Ray of Marshfield, $252,000; K.R. Renzendi, Inc. of Assonet, $267,000 and Marshfield Corporation, $310,000

Fred DeFeo of E.J. Flynn Engineering, Inc. reviewed the bids last week and recommended that the board accept Sealund's bid. The board's vote to accept the bid of the Sealunc Corporation was 2-0 with member Marilyn Sweeney absent.

DeFeo said the Sealund Corporation indicated that they might start the project by Aug. 16. The first-phase expansion of the dump is expected to take about six weeks to complete. DeFeo said that contractors estimated the project could be completed in five months.

Once notified of the bid award, Sealund Corporation will have five days to sign the project's contract.

Before awarding the bid to Sealund the Corporation Monday the health board considered a packaged proposal from Cohasset Heights Limited landfill which would allow the town use of the private dump. Ernest Stevens, a member of the dump study committee, reported to the health board that about $300,000 in dump operatiang costs could be saved over ten years for the town. Health board member Dr. Michael Bliss said that the proposal called for a two-year waiver of a scale requirement and expansion of the Cohasset Heights Limited landfill.

Bliss said the proposal was very preliminary and would require some hard negotiating. It's an interesting proposal, said Bliss, but it's unfortunate that there's not enough time to negotiate. The proposal might have been further considered by the board had it been brought forth in January, he said.

DeFeo said bid awarding could be held off for 30 days and the contractors would be required to hold their prices. "Personally, I would award this bid as soon as possible because we've had tremendous trouble getting a bid this low," he said.

In related action Monday the health board voted unanimously to contract with M & M Solid Waste Equipment, Inc. of New Hampshire for $8,386 which calls for the construction of three bin containers at the town dump.

The bins are expected to be set up in about six weeks for residential trash.

No problem with hospital trash at Heights landfill

The board of health reported this week there is no problem regarding the type of trash being dumped at the Cohasset Heights Limited Landfill from the Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Last week the board instructed Health agent Elaine Eliopoulos to determine what kind of trash was being dumped from the hospital at the landfill. The board wanted to know, specifically, if clinical trash was being carted to the landfill from the hospital's chemical laboratory.

In a letter to the health board, the hospital's Hazardous Waste Coordinator Sheila Cram reported that only routine, compacted trash was trucked to the Cohasset Heights Landfill. Routine trash includes materials discarded from the bacteriology laboratory.

Newton-Wellesley Hospital has separate contracts for disposal of pathological and hazardous waste with St. Elizabeth Hospital of Brighton and Chemical Waste Management of Massachusetts in Natick.

Cram reported that, "Neither laboratory chemicals nor tissues would ever be incorporated into trash." All tissues, if not fixed and saved, are incinerated or occasionally interred in a cemetery.

After autoclaving has been completed materials from the bacteriology laboratory are discarded in the trash which is sent to Cohasset. These autoclaved materials include: blood or serum contaminated tubes, pipettes, infusion bags and bottles.

"We use very few hazardous chemicals in the laboratory. Empty chemical containers are rinsed if necessary and disposed into the trash," wrote Cram.

Other trash brough to Cohasset Heights Ltd. from the hospital includes needles, syringes, gloves and masks used to prepare medication for I.V. administration.

Medication is never thrown away and out-dated medications are usually returned to the pharmaceutical distributor for credit, Cram explained.

John Barry asked health board members at their Monday night meeting to address problems directly to his company regarding concerns with his customers. He said the action of the board could have jeopardized an account.

Health board member Michael Bliss said the hospital trash rasied a legitimate question and that the board was correct in discussing the matter at an open meeting.

Bergin is a candidate for court clerk

William G. Bergin, 108 Fairfield St., Needham, has announced his candidacy for Clerk of Court, Norfolk County.

Bergin, a lifelong resident of Norfolk County, 54 years, holds a Bachelor of Arts Degree from Northeastern University in Law Enforcement and a Masters Degree from Anna Marie College in Criminal Justice. He is a veteran of World War II and a member of Sigma Epsilon R1o Honor Society, Northeastern Association of Criminal Justice Educators, Norfolk county Prosecutors Association, past member, Mass. Police Association, and has been awarded the Medal of Merit from the Commonwealth of Mass. in 1978, the highest award given to a State Police Officer.

Bergin has worked within the Court system for the past 32 years, first as a Brookline Police Sergeant (19 years) and more recently as a State Police Detective Lieutenant Inspector with the District Attorney's office for 13 years.

"The Clerk of Norfolk County should represent the interest of all the cities and towns with the county, not just certain areas of groups." Mr. Bergin stated, "Furthermore, it's time we moved the clerks office into the main stream of modern technology."

"It is my feeling that it is time for the people of Norfolk County to elect an experienced, dedicated clerk who will represent all the interests of the county, move the office toward modern, efficient methods by implementing the use of computers and word processors. Bergin said, "The backup of cases, both civil and criminal is terrible. This is not fair to those seeking civil relief from the court nor to the attorneys representing them. I have made this my top priority."

Bergin is married to Mary T. (Leary) of Brookline and has four children.

Common color coordination...

regard to the Martins going from white to beige...a beige which some sources say is a lesser beige than the "pinky" beige of Commissioner Charles Wheelwright's home in the historic area. The Wheelwright home's color, however, was in tact before the creation of the Cohasset Historic District Commission.

According to the town bylaw, the District Commission has the authority to look at each case for change which comes before it, but Commissioner Betsy Stevenson questions whether the bylaw pertains to changes "architecturally in keeping" with the historic district, and/or color control.

Another resident of the district said there is a definite move on to interpret the bylaw as having color control. According to several residents, Commissioner Charles Wheelwright has sent literature to commissioners that details how similar commissions in other towns deal with color of homes.

There are at least two homes in the historic area at the present time which are not white. The James Murphy home is off-white...just slightly. Two years ago, after several weeks of deliberation, the commissioners did in fact approve the change. And then there is Commissioner Charles Wheelwright's home.

Mrs. Stevenson, who must vote as an impartial commissioner early next week, said she feels the Historic Commission has been acting as an obstructionist in the case of the Martins, who are attempting to maintain their dwelling.

"I feel the commission should be more of an incentive group with respect to homeowners attempting to make "timely" repairs to their properties. We should not be stopping people from doing their own thing."

Since the Historic Commission became a legal body per town meeting vote, there have been approximately 25 applications for changes in the common area. Commissioners have voted down only three. One was an application from the town, through Parks Commissioner Peter Laugelle, who suggested providing more benches in the duck pond area.

The biggest charge against the District Commission is that its decisions are untimely; it has held up contractors during good painting and repair weather.

And now there is a new fear that commissioners may attempt to expand its power by dictating color choice, mainly that residents paint their homes white.

At least one resident raised a very interesting point.

"The colonists used a variety of interesting colors in painting their homes. What era of Cohasset is the Cohasset Historic District Commission pointing to when it tends to favor white? It tends to get a little confusing."

Charles Haley, (left) of Jerusalem Rd. is the associate dean of student affairs at Northeastern University's Boston Bouve College of Human Development professions. NU president Ken Ryder recently presented Haley a certificate of appreciation after 25 years of service.

Northeastern retiree Charles Gainor (center) of Sohier Street, receives a certificate of appreciation from NU president Ken Ryder (right) "in recognition of loyal and efficient service." Gainor is retiring as professor emeritus in the College of Arts and Sciences biology department after 19 years of service. Professor of biology Fred Rosenberg also congratulates Gainor.

☐The Town's Oldest Living Teenager and Most Outrageous Prankster finally had one pulled on him. He was feted at a "real" surprise 50th birthday party at the legion two Sundays ago. Poor Skinny Laugelle... he sulked Around Town and the Dump for days on end thinking no one had remembered...sort of like Eyore in Milne's Pooh.

☐Chet Ellis, who has the body of an 18 year-old, turned 47 Saturday. Who would believe it? Congrats, Chet!

☐Harry Ritter, beloved Cohasset Harbormaster, turned 58 (we think) last Thursday. There was probably a wild party somewhere, but we didn't hear about it. It really would be nice if you people would drop me a note or give me a call when these things happen.

☐Big Surprise Birthday Party for Tom Cook last Saturday. Do you think Debbie Cook would call to tell me about it?"Thanks," Debbie. I heard about it at Central Market.

☐Two Saturdays ago Peggy Litchfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Litchfield, turned 16; approximately 175 persons attended a party at the Litchfield home, complete with friends, relatives and neighbors. Vinny B. Productions of Braintree acted as official D.J. for the event and according to one source, "Peggy got enough jewelry to open a jewelry store." The theme of the party was Rainbows, but the Litchfields had a tent, "just in case." Mrs. Litchfield said, "The weather couldn't have been better, even the bugs cooperated." Peggy's cousins, Bobby (12 years) and Steven (9 years) Patterson from California also attended the party.

☐From the Sailing Class Crew... Laura Doherty and Tony Finegan "turtled" recently during a class. The top of the mast got stuck in the mud, they looked mean when they came in. Keep a stiff upper lip, guys. There isn't one sailor out there who hasn't turtled. Ask Roger Porter, Rob Henry, Bob Smith, Terry Young...

☐More interesting boating news... according to Harry St. Onge, Tom Hamilton recently received a $50 speeding ticket from the Mass. Maritime Patrol (registry) for sailing too fast in his Ensign. However, at a Sailing Club Tact Party last Saturday sailing experts said Harry owns the Ensign and is trying to lay the ticket on Tom. And then Bill Adams hailed me at Curtis, "I hope you know what really happened!" But I still am not sure how anyone gets ticketed for speeding on a sailboat.

☐Thirteen year-old Marika Fisher, presently of Madison, Conn., and formerly of Cohasset, spent last week visiting her old (not so very old) friend Amy Mitman. Marika is the daughter of Jean and Peter Fisher, formerly of Joy Place and very much missed by their Cohasset friends. Marika and Amy learned that it is illegal to fish off Cunningham Bridge. Not to worry, Jean and Peter.

☐Former Police Chief Randy Feola says all's quiet on Beechwood. He and his wife returned from Florida the first of June only to be greeted by a downpour.

☐Ran into John Kuhn getting his fifth poison ivy shot at Doc Golden's a couple of weeks ago...he looked terrified. Those shots are big and ugly and they hurt! (Note, Doc Golden only went for three days, not a week.)

☐Jason Marsac returned from Championship Basketball School at the Mass. Maritime Academy last week... it was a rough five days. He slept all the way home in the car. Jason's mother, Lucy, is preparing to attend her first session of the "bull market" on the waterfront in Boston.

☐Lucy Marsac knits acrylic ski hats...she can make five a day...in 50 lovely patterns. One size fits all unless you have unusually large or small proportions. They make lovely gifts. If you're preparing your Christmas gift list, give Lucy a call at 383-9845 and order several! Cohasset Good Sport will have a selection of her goods this fall.

☐Frances Keating of Cedar Acres Lane became a great grandmother at 73. This was made possible by the cooperation of her grand daughter, Lynne Joyner of Texas. The baby's name is Cody Allen Joyner.

☐Congratulations to Kathy Croninger, who was named a $1 million broker for Jan-May by Rick Fuller Gallery of Norwell! She did it in nine transactions.

☐From Sally Davenport the news there will be a Junior Schooling Hunter Horse Show on Aug. 18, from 8:30-12 at Wheelwright Park. Tom Gormley will be judge for the non-registered show. Audiences are always welcome!

☐We get them coming and going in Around Town. Heather Davenport is already packing her suitcase for her trip to Chicago to visit her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brockett and Mrs. Martha Davenport.

☐Recently returned from eight glorious days in Southern Ireland are David and Kathleen Croninger and Frances Keating. They toured all of Southern Ireland by car and found it to be divine.

☐Also recently returned from a visit to Ocean City, N.J., and the Pennsylvania Poconos are Diana and Peter O'Loughlin and their daughter, Linda.

☐This past Tuesday night four ladies from Cohasset attended the infamous All-Male Stripper's Club in Stoughton. Wouldn't you just love to know who they are? This has real possibilities as a Community Center bus trip.

☐Late last week Donald and Dennis Mulligan (12 and 11 respectively) met their new baby brother, Daniel Scott Mulligan, 9 pounds, 8 ounces. Grandparents Ruth and Edwood Mulligan of Florida reportedly had everything under control at the busy household of DeAnna and Dennis Mulligan when we called. Maternal Grandmother is Dorothy Thelen of California.

☐Bob and Carol Cissiot (do these people live in Cohasset, what is the story?), Pam and Rob Henry and Alma and Ken Ekberg recently returned from a sailing trip to Nantucket. The Ekbergs and the Henrys sailed to Nantucket where they were met by Bob and Carol.

☐Mr. and Mrs. Mark L. Friedman, M.D. (Mary Gabriel) of Cohasset announce the birth of their son, Adam Gabriel, July 17, at Mount Auburn Hospital, Cambridge.

☐Dr. Soo K. Choi of Cohasset has joined the medical staff at Brockton Hospital.

A native of Korea, Dr. Choi received his medical degree from Yon Sei University. He completed his residency training in radiation oncology at Hahnemann Medical College in Philadelphia, PA. For the past seven years, Dr. Choi has been associate radiotherapist at Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital in Binghamton, N.Y.

He was certified by the American Board of Radiology (Therapeutic) in 1975.

Dr. Choi and his wife Jenny have two children, Alex and Lina.

budget transfer of $1,500 for police department custodial services. Another article would pay an amount of money for police matrons. An article was submitted from Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln to pay for old medical bills.

The special town meeting warrant of ten articles is scheduled to go to the printer on Friday. The warrants must be mailed to voters by August 16, two weeks before the special town meeting, said Selectmen's Executive Secretary Arthur Clark.

Selectmen were presented with a petition from Atty. John Ridge of more than 500 signatures, July 21, calling for a special town meeting. Only 200 signatures were required to hold a special town meeting. The board set a special town meeting for August 30 to ask voters to expand the list of fire chief finalists from three to eight.

The eight candidates would include two local candidates such as Acting Fire Chief Roger Lincoln and Captain James Gurry. Under April 1981 town meeting vote, selectmen are required to choose their next fire chief to replace retired Charles Peipenbrink from a list of three candidates picked by the fire chief search committee.

The Hanover Mall will hold a "sneak peek" at fall fashion shows this Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

There'll be a fashion show each of the three days, by the fountain at the center of the mall. From knickers to nightgowns, a vast array of both mens' and womens' wear will be modeled on stage, with a special feature for Back-to-School fashions.

The shows are scheduled for 2 p.m. this Thursday afternoon (Aug. 5) and Saturday afternoon (Aug. 7), with a 7 p.m. show Friday evening (Aug. 6).

Five selectmen

We note that 160 citizens have signed a petition calling for enlarging the board of selectmen from three to five. We reserve judgment for the time being, but we are prepared to oppose any constitutional change that comes about simply because of dissatisfaction with the current board.

We have been as vocal as anyone in disagreement with the selectmen over such issues as their vote concerning the duty assignments of the nephew of one of the board by the chief of police. We may have more to say on that issue in due course.

But we are convinced that the way for town government to work properly is for the elected selectmen to be given complete responsibility for running the town, and to be answerable at the end of their terms for their overall conduct in office.

If a controversial selectman, Henry Ainslie for instance, can face the voters and prevail as he has in the past, then those who oppose him should make peace with him or they should move to Guatemala or some such place where losers have other recourse than to abide by the decision of the electorate.

They shouldn't be able to do an end-run around Mr. Ainslie's well-demonstrated electability. Make no mistake about it: Mr. Ainslie's and the other selectmen's critics are losers, literally; and they will remain losers until they run candidates who are capable of beating the present selectmen.

Any consideration of enlarging the board of selectmen ought to be based on issues other than the personalities of the present board members, members who, rumors to the contrary aside, will not govern forever.

Is the workload too great for three people? Are there other ways in which a five-man board might function better than a three-man board? Such are the questions the proponents of enlarging the board must be prepared to answer.

We will eagerly await their answers, though, if we will be forgiven, we are presently skeptical. We are skeptical among other reasons because we have had occasion in our far travels to visit a place called Scituate.

Scituate (it is to the south of here, as we recall) has a board of selectmen of five, and we assure our esteemed readers that beyond the whisper of a shadow of a doubt no miracles accrue by dint of the number five.

There are cliques and intrigues and irate citizens demanding recall — much as in the dear town of Cohasset. In fact, we suspect that if we got up before the Scituatites and suggested that their board of selectmen be cut from five to three, that the inhabitants there would think, "Well at least that'll get rid of two of the clunkers!" — and we would be declared patriots for thinking up the idea.

So you see, the argument can be sliced both ways. Going from three to five could create a new majority of the absolute swellest, or it could tack on a couple of screamers.

In the long run it would probably do both of the above at different points in history. It was James Madison who pointed out that institutions should forever be prepared to house the best and the worst in human nature. That is why we say that the board of selectmen should be constituted on the basis of what is more workable in the long run, not on the basis of momentary disenchantment with a group of incumbents.

But as we say, we will keep a skeptical open mind, and we look forward to hearing the arguments of the signers of the petition to enlarge.

When do they outgrow it?

By Claire McDonough

Dear Ann Landers:

Have you seen the newspaper pictures of that adorable two year old? The one who's bankrupting her parents by destroying all their possessions with a power drill? Ann, I just don't believe it. How come they still have a power drill?

Ann, I happen to be the mother of one of those human wrecking machines, and by the time he was two, every power tool his father owned had been sent to that great hardware store in the sky.

As a matter of fact, it was when he was two that he broke the cast iron heat register in our bathroom. With his bare hands. I was so suprised I forgot to get mad. I stared at the broken metal and said, "Jay, how on earth did you do that?"

He raised his big, round innocent blue eyes, wiped a tear from his chubby, rosy cheek and replied, "I did try, and try, and I did do it."

When he was three he hit the big time. He woke me at two one morning holding a butcher knife — and he had had to put one chair on top of another to reach the upper shelf where I hid all our sharp instruments.

"Mommy," he lisped beguilingly, "how do you take out 'pendixes?"

Life with Jay has been a series of good intentions and broken possessions.

I remember the time my mother gazed admiringly at his physical perfection.

"Jay," she assured him, "when you grow up you'll break all the girls' hearts."

Nothing if not realistic, he rebutted, "No, Nana. I'll break their arms." It was enough to restore your faith in Maxwell Anderson's "Bad Seed."

As a matter of fact, I was actually relieved that it was Kevin who took me aside one day when he was four to whisper urgently, "Ma, this is important. How do you get a frog back out of a sewer?"

Jay would have found a way. It wouldn't have been pretty.

Over the years Jay has managed to make our suburban home resemble Georgia after Sherman. Would you believe the testing grounds at Yucca Flats? He always means well, but things happen in his presence. If he walks casually through a living room and leans against a wall, chats for a minute, checks out the TV, and leaves, there will be black grease on the wall, the floor, the sofa and the television. The coffee table will have crumbled at his approach. Three plants will see him coming and die. (Given two weeks he could kill a Central American rain forest.)

Ann, this is important. All parents who have given birth to children with Atilla the Hun's Syndrome wants to know: At what age do they outgrow it? He's 26 now, and I can't last much longer.

Studds praises T.M. action on freeze

To the Editor:

I am writing to congratulate the Town of Cohasset on the passage in Town Meeting of a resolution in support of a mutual nuclear weapons freeze between the United States and the Soviet Union.

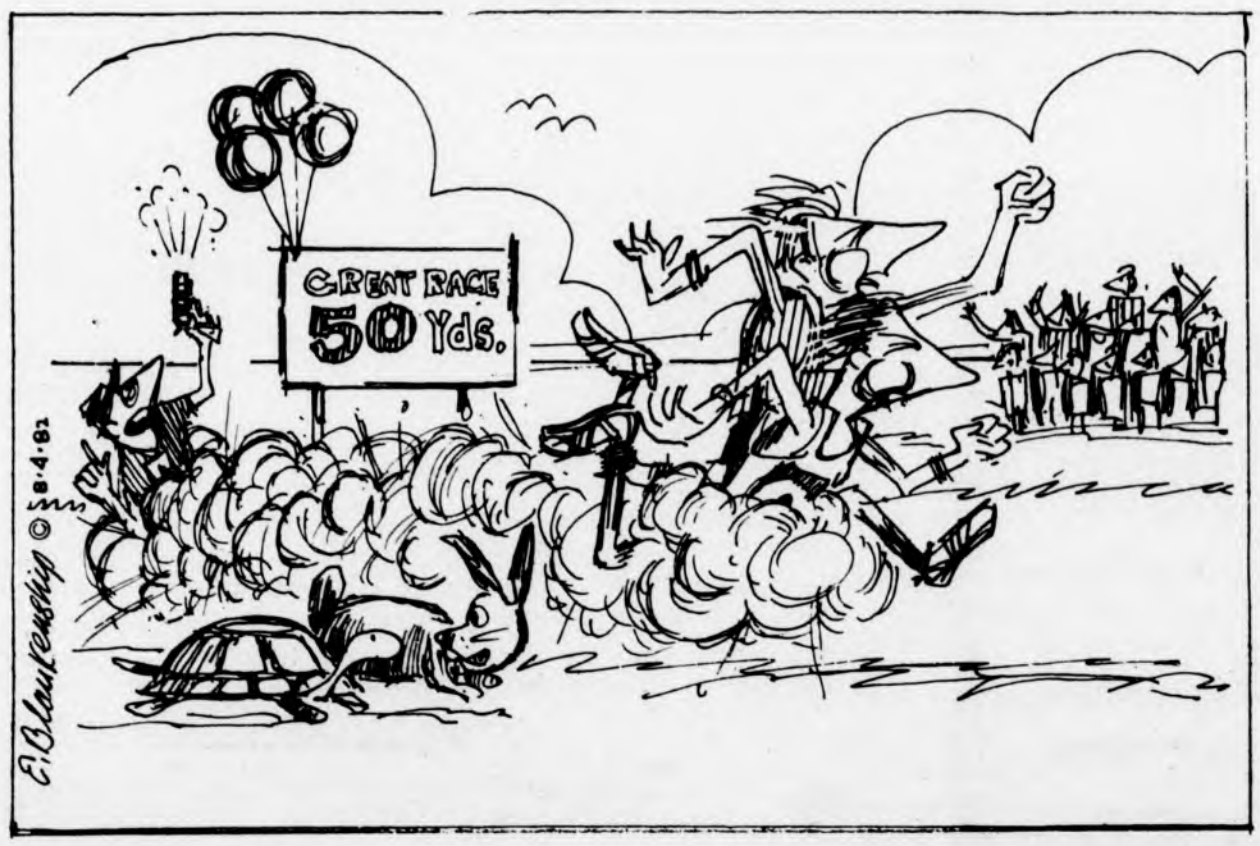
The support which this plan has received in Cohasset, elsewhere in southeastern Massachusetts, across the country, in other nations around the globe, and in the Congress, where I have joined with 138 other Members of the House, makes it clear that this effort to bring about a nuclear weapons freeze has become an event of potentially historic proportions.

It demonstrates as well that the American people expect a considerably more imaginative and energetic approach to nuclear weapons control than they have witnessed thus far. There can be no higher priority for any leader or any citizen anywhere in the world.

Sincerely
Gerry E. Studds

FISH will miss the spirit of Pauline Sestito

To the Editor:



Cohasset FISH lost one of its oldest and most loyal volunteers with the death on July 23 of Pauline (Polly) Sestito.

There are two people on duty for FISH each day from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., seven days a week. One is a driver and the other is a back-up: i.e. she stays home all day and fills any calls that may come in, when the driver is out, with a driver from the emergency list.

Polly was a most dependable back-up and cheerfully filled in with extra days of duty when crises arose. Because she was house-bound, we tended to overwork her, but she never complained and was unrelenting in locating emergency drivers at short notice.

NEWS ITEM — Cohasset: Police Chief and contractor match up in foot race to settle wager. Fifty yard sprint at Milliken Field scene of duel at high noon. Grudge match is result of chiding about food, fat and figure

"...What say we give them a couple of minute's head start...?"

Back to basics at Bassing Beach

It's called getting back to basics each summer as 19 families in town take time out to camp at Bassing Beach.

Bottled gas and running water are the only utilities supplied at the two Bassing Beach campsite cottages which are owned by the conservation commission.

The vacationing islanders have neither electricity nor telephone service. Vacationing tenants don't miss the telephone one bit. In fact they agree that the absence of a telephone ringing is one requirement to insure a peaceful week.

With the two cottages deteriorating nearly five years ago, a group of 19 families got together and formed the Bassing Beach Tenants Association. The Cohasset Conservation Commission agreed to rent the two Bassing Beach cottages on a rotating basis to families that would maintain the facilities.

Five years ago the two cottages were deteriorating and required some heavy duty repairs. Two years ago, the families completed roof repairs. More recent maintenance projects consist of painting, replacement of window screens, and construction of porch decks, etc.

Each Bassing Beach Tenant Association family rents a cottage for one or two weeks during the summer. When the association formed, membership was open to all applicants interested in improving and maintaining the Bassing Beach facilities. Today there is a waiting list for any families wanting to join.

Without television or telephones the families relax with horseshoes, swimming, badmitton, clamming (before the flats were closed), cookouts, sunbathing, boating, and reading during their stay.

"It's a relaxing place to be," said one tenant. "But you have to like it, to hack it," said another.

For one woman, hacking it consisted of transporting her son to shore for work in a row boat at 7:30 one morning. While fully clothed the woman fell overboard as she returned to Bassing Beach.

In addition to the big splash which disturbed the early morning still waters, her son stood on the pier laughing loudly. Reflecting on her early morning plunge, the woman said, "The water was nice...it wasn't bad at all."

Here is one of the two cottages owned by the conservation commission at Bassing Beach. For nearly five years, 19 Cohasset families of the Bassing Beach Tenants Association have repaired and maintained the premises. (Derr photo)

Casino bills are dormant, not dead

Carol Oteri, president of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., reminds residents that casino gambling continues to be a threat to this state.

The Hull resident said, "Some people think that casino gambling is a 'dead issue' simply because the legislature took a vacation. But the casino proponents are not on vacation.

"They are employed full-time in behind the scenes maneuvers to impose casinos on the Commonwealth. It is to their advantage to avoid the light of day. By preceeding quietly they hope to lull casino opponents into a false sense of security or inactivity."

"However," she added, "we are still going strong. We have too much to lose if casinos invade Massachusetts. We all know how casinos win through the losses of betting patrons. We have no intention of letting casino interests win here at the expense of Massachusetts residents, who overwhelmingly oppose the legalization of casinos according to every poll taken."

C.A.C.G. has continued regular mailings of informational packets to legislators, and Oteri stressed the importance of letters by constituents to their elected representatives. She said, "Let them know that you are watching and that you have an informed opinion in the session that is about to resume."

C.A.C.G. also continues to funnel information to decision makers across the state.

Oteri expanded, "We remind them about the clause in the Hull bill which would allow casinos anywhere after a wait of a few years. Anyone familiar with history will understand that current legislative proposals can only be regarded as a 'foot in the door'--the first step of the actual long-term plans of casin entrepreneurs.

"You have to investigate the motives of those who push for casinos," Oteri continued. "Recently, Mark L. Wolf, deputy U.S. Attorney for Massachusetts, told a group of Boston businessmen that 'casino gambling generates greatly increased violent crim, organized crime and public corruption.' Are you more apt to believe the words of a professional law enforcement official or those of some operator who hopes to take the money and run?"

Pauline Sestito...

On alternate months, for the past seven years, Polly served as the evening reminder by phoning the people on duty next day. She enjoyed these contacts with our other volunteers. We are deeply grateful to her for her long service in this area, and it will be hard to find an able replacement for her.

Those of us who knew Polly personally found her a cheerful patient person, despite her handicaps and frustrations. Her life was not an easy one, but she faced it with humor and appreciation. We in FISH shall miss her sorely, and are thankful for her loyal friendship and service.

GOP candidate wins petition drive

Thomas Barry of Duxbury, Republican candidate for state senator, has successfully completed his petition drive to place two non-binding public policy questions on the Nov. 2 ballot in the towns of Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

Barry secured approximately 2000 raw signatures on each petition and filed 1600 certified signatures on each question. In order to place a question on the ballot in a senatorial district, 1200 certified voter signatures must be filed with the state secretary.

One question will ask voters if they would like to have all sales tax revenues returned to cities and towns. The other question will ask voters if they would support legislation to repeal utility company fuel adjustment charges which are imposed on consumers.

Commenting on the questions, Barry stated, "Naturally, both of these questions are supported by me. However, those who disagree with these questions will have ample time between now and November to argue their point of view. In the final analysis the voters of these seven towns will render their collective judgment on these issues and the senator from this district will be so directed.

"It has long been my feeling that public policy questions, placed before the voters, are one of the finer aspects of our representative form of government. This is one avenue by which the voters of a legislative district can effectively communicate their view on a specific issue. When voters are given this opportunity of expression, no politician can squirm around that particular issue. It is for this reason that I have been placing public policy questions on November ballots in various state elections dating back to 1966.

"In the future, whether a member of the legislature or not, it is my intention to continue to place public policy questions on the ballot as particular issues present themselves. It is my belief that these questions are meaningful and clearly impact on elected officials."

Fasciano drubs DeBassio

The 'fat one' was faster

Former Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink stood 50 yards away ready to declare a winner in case of a photo-finish Saturday.

But the winner of the dash between Police Chief John DeBassio and Tony Fasciano, a local contractor, was easy to call. Fasciano won an easy victory, streaking across the finish line while DeBassio shook his head and came to a stop on the track. No turtle and the hare race was this.

DeBassio, who did not finish the 50-yard sprint, said he was amazed with Fasciano's speed. "It was a fun time and I enjoyed it," he said. "Once it got started, I couldn't run because I was laughing so hard."

About 60 people gathered at Milliken Field Saturday to see these aging athletes square-off on the track. The "grudge" match came to be two weekends ago following a friendly golf game at the Pembroke Country Club. DeBassio, 52, sparked the challenge as he teased Fasciano, 47, about his weight.

But Fasciano, who weighs nearly 50 pounds more than the Chief, triumped with no trouble. One spectator said, "Two-ton Tony just blew him (DeBassio) out of the ball park — no contest."

DeBassio admitted that Fasciano was fast indeed, and as the loser, he owes Fasciano two six-packs of Tab for the win.

Retired Fire Captain George Casey was the official starter of the race. The fire department hopes to make the race an annual event to raise money for muscular dystrophy.

Home Decorating Notes
by Art Lane
Hallways are areas that can be transformed into useful space. They often serve no real purpose but to usher people from living area to the next. As examples of what can be done, wide halls can be lined with storage units. Clothing, appliances or open book-shelving can store items that cannot fit into adjacent rooms. An even larger hall may be able to accomodate a small office. Small shelves may hold papers, books and files. NArrow passageways make great art or photo galleries. Good lighting and appropriately colored walls can serve as a perfect showcase for favorite paintings, photos and collections.
Are you tired of the way your hallway, living room or bedroom looks& Is it time for a change?

'Company is coming' — how to be prepared

By Judith Montminy

One Saturday monring last month, my four-year-old stopped by the bathroom door on his way to the toybox in the upstairs hallway. "What are you doing, Mommy?" he quizzed.

"What does it look like I'm doing, honey? I'm cleaning the bathroom."

"Why? Is company coming?"

Gulp. "Company coming? We don't clean only when company comes. But, yes, company is coming and we have a lot to do before they arrive."

When company is coming I follow a routine that has weathered ten years of snowstorms, heat waves, airline delays and chicken pox. Since many of our friends and relatives are scattered across the country, most of our company belongs to the overnight variety.

The first and most valuable piece of equipment I use — the one item that keeps my entertaining schedule sane — is a paperbound, green pocket calendar. Without it I run the risk of mixing high school reunions with family anniversary parties or freethinking couples with provincial relatives. An accurate calendar is essential, the backbone of a successful weekend.

After the date is set, I always survey our sleeping facilities. That means counting beds, sleeping bags, cots, port-a-cribs, sheets, blankets, pillows and towels and matching the linen supply to the number of guests expected. (Of course, no plan is foolproof. I have had my share of understanding overnighters who cheerfully postponed their bedtime while the sheets tumbled dry. Embarrassing? You bet.)

Next comes the food list. Unless a dish can be cooked ahead, frozen, then thawed quickly, it must be easy to prepare. (In this case, "easy" means that other people help — i.e. do-it-yourself subs, corn the kids husk, or hamburgers someone else barbecues.) Menus are planned and posted on the side of the refrigerator so green peas are not accidentally left for dessert.

An updated shopping list of out-of-stock essentials is also a must. Nothing is more harrowing than racing to the supermarket fifteen minutes before a meal.

Two days before company arrives. The Big Clean Up starts. This event includes the sequestering of all the children's games that used to have a million pieces, only fifty of which have not been sucked up by the vacuum. And all the clothing that needs meding gets dumped into an attractive, checker-board cardboard storage box, never to be seen again. Also stashed is the pile of mail that needs sorting, never gets it, and is filed under "miscellaneous" until tax time.

Yet once the inviting, the counting, the shopping and the cleaning are done, only two steps are left: 1) praying for sunshine, and 2) planning amusements.

No dance now known to humankind guarantees good weather. The most I can do is plan for the best, expect the worst, and promise to be good if only the sun will shine.

Deciding what to do once my company arrives, however, is another matter altogether. I can do something about that.

Unless tickets needed to be purchased in advance, my excursions are always "if-you-want-to-do-something-besides-hang-around-the-house" adventures. Some work better with certain types of guests. Some are only possible if the guests are treating. Some activities, such as visiting the Pilgrim historical spots, sunning at the beach, or sailing, are strictly seasonal pursuits. They are the obvious choices when people come to visit. And we cannot forget at-home lobster feeds — a real treat for everyone. There are, however, some less obvious possibilities available when overnight company arrives.

1. My most successful outing was not planned. One chilly weekend last August, my brother, his friends and her sister came to enjoy a weekend near the Cape Cod seashore. The winds are blowing and the thermometer was falling. Super Simon's batteries were dying and Simon was sputtering. All of us were "nudgy" (definition: wanted to do something, didn't know what) and were trying to agree when I suggested we decide at Farfar's Ice Cream Shop. (I quickly discovered that our party of seven hid three diehard ice cream freaks.) The trip was so successful, everyday of the visit we went to Farfar's when the doors opened. (It was bit tricky trying to explain to the kids why we were eating our ice cream before lunch.) Our outing became a ritual and cost less than $2.00 per person.

There are three Farfar's on the south shore: Duxbury, open 11 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Plymouth, open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.; and Hingham, open 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.

2. Another favorite with all of our guests, including children, is the South Shore Art Center on Ripley Road.

3. Although Boston will never beat Broadway for its variety of shows, two current productions that started in the Hub belong at the top of the list of "things to do" with company. Both are reasonably priced — that is, they cost less than a montly mortgage payment — and both are lots of fun.

The first is "Dancin in the Street!" at the Next Move Theatre. I plan to go back to this one with the crowd from my high school reunion. Remember the Motown music of the '60's and the mind movies you would play while listeneing to the lyrics? With eight talented performers, the show takes those songs, acts out, sings out and dances out the story lines of each. The nonstop energy is exhilarating. When you go, brace yourself for Lewis Robinson's "The Tracks of My Tears" — it is the definitive rendition.

"Dancin in the Street!" sells out, so book in advance. Tickets are $12.00 and $16.50 and are available through Ticketron. (If someone in your party is not crazy about going to the city at night, there are performances at 6 p.m. on Saturday, and at 2 and 5 p.m. on Sunday.)

Another show company seems to love is "Shear Madness" at the Charles Playhouse. At Boston's longest running comedy, tickets are $12.00 and $15.00. "Shear Madness" played its 1000th performance last week, so they must be doing something right. Shows at 6:30 p.m. on Saturday and at 3 p.m. on Sunday may appeal to your guests.

"Shear Madness" is a comical murder mystery that incorporates topical jokes about the Boston and Massachusetts political scene. In addition, the audience gets to participate if it wants to. You and your guests sit at small tables on one of three tiers and waitresses bring drinks before the show and during intermission. It's not like sitting in a movie theatre where everyone is together but can't talk. Here everyone is together, involved, and caught up in the laughter. But don't worry, nobody gets dragged onstage. There is also a surprise twist in the show that makes the evening fun.

4. While in the theatre district, my favorite place to bring people to is Piaf's, the restaurant housed in the lower level of the Wilbur Theatre. Piaf's is as close to Europe as you can get and still make it to the show on time. Their cappuccino (definitely not just a $2.00 cup of coffee) is a wonderful accompaniment to quiet, intimate conversation before or after a show. I would call the management, however, to be sure they're not on vacation when you want to go.

5. When babysitters are available and guests offer to take us out, we rarely say "No."

Although the South Shore has a number of interesting restaurants, few accept reservations on a Saturday night. One that does is the Barker Tavern in Scituate. We recently spent an entire evening there (7:30 to 11). The service was attentive, the food was tasty, and the atmosphere was relaxed. What more could one ask for? The prices, although not for the tight-budgeted, were on par with similar restaurants offering continental cum New England cuisine. In addition to the traditional appetizers, the Barker Tavern offers an interesting variety of Middle Easter hors d'oeuvres.

Another good bet with parents and discerning eaters is the seafood at Hugo's, located in Cohasset Harbor.

6. If the weather cooperates, the South Shore Natural Science Center on Jacob's Lane in Norwell (around the corner from the Barnside) is a free attraction that is popular with our company. The 27 acres sport five trails suitable for children or for the casual walker. There is also a trail for the blind and partially sighted. Even the herb garden is marked in Braille. The Center is open 9 to 4 daily, 1 to 4 Sundays and Holidays.

7. The absolute last resort when company comes is hardly an activity. It is a trip to the Hanover Mall. We had no other choice last year when friends arrive with their five-year-old and their two-year-old twins. It rained for two days. There were more kids than adults in the house and everybody was cranky. At least at the mall all of us could stretch our legs. With a few goodies to keep the children busy, the grownups were able to hold a conversation that even included complete sentences. The trip was not memorable — few last resorts are.

Company is coming — those three words are exciting and nerve wracking, all at once. But with calendar, paper and pencil in hand, the prospect of a house full of people can be both challenging and manageable. The secret of hosting overnight company lies in the planning before the company ever arrives.

One last tip: when someone says, "I'd love to come. What can I bring?" Don't say "Nothing" to be polite. Accept all the help you can get. After all, you want to enjoy the visit too.

Diving team works hard and succeeds

This year's Cohasset Diving Team is the most talented, hard working team that coach Erin O'Brien has seen in years.

There are ten 12 and under divers, and seven 16 and under. All work hard and Coach O'Brien has seen a great deal of improvement in everyone.

Some divers are here an average of ten hours extra every week! The Diving Team practices from 5:30 to 7 to Tuesday and Thursday nights. Age groups split up and therefore dive a total of 1½ hours per week with coaching. With such a short amount of time, it is necessary for them to dive on their own.

Diving is unlike swimming. There are various other competitors, but each performance is executed alone.

Up to now, Erin is pleased with her team.

The assistant coach, Brenda Birmann is satisfied with the season as well. "Our 12 and unders are undefeated," she said. One captain, Jane deLima, has placed first in every meet that she has competed in. "I can always depend on Jane during competition. She's a hard worker and an outstanding athlete. She is on top of the league this season, and still works hard to perform new dives every time we practice."

Jane is a co-captain with Cindy Spooner. Cindy, and many others; Julie Bowdoing, Amy Hobbs, Katie Lord, Erin Powell, Cindy Dormer, M.B. McNamara, Abbie Adams and Diana Konnet are all talented and enthusiastic when it comes to the sport of Diving.

As for the 16 year-olds, they have finally met with their top competition. The 16 and under divers are very advanced. They work very hard, because they know the competition becomes tougher every season.

Captains of the 16 year-olds are Brian Bonnar and Julia Sechen. Both are top divers on the team, and have done well in meets. "I can always count on them to coach or assist at any time necessary." Said the coach, "When I judge during a meet, they always encourage the divers in competition, and help them in any way possible. They are both a great help to me."

Other top 16 and unders are Robbie Lowe, Katee Duffy, and Andrea Lowe. New to the Diving squad are Roby Holland and Susie Tehranian. Both will have a few more years on the team.

Before the roughest of competition comes, Erin feels confident in this year's team. A successful season has already been marked down in her book. She receives compliments on how well she's doing coaching the team, but hands all of the credit to her dedicated team members.

One lady asked Erin if she had received a first place ribbon for the coaching that she does? Erin remarked that the divers are doing well all on their own. They practice as much as they can and perform well because they have the ability to. "I don't deserve a ribbon for what they do. When they deserve to dive in a meet, that's when they will prove to the swimming and diving teams, as well as coaches, that they are the best divers."

This week, the Cohasset teams compete with the Boston College Eagles. It will be the biggest swim meet of the season. The week following will be the last home meet against the team's biggest diving competition — Hanover.

"Since we'r first in the league now, I plan on staying there!' rin. "My divers know how to perform, and I am sure they will do their best."

Conley wants growth for Cohasset Red Cross

Cohasset's Red Cross Chapter wants to do more for the community. Chapter Chairman Dick Conley would like to see more people get involved in the organization to bring new ideas for programs and services.

The Cohasset Red Cross Chapter, which was born more than 30 years ago, is financially stable these days. "We are active, financially stable and our problem is that we don't have enough people involved," Conley said.

"I feel there's more we could be doing if we had the people to do it," he said.

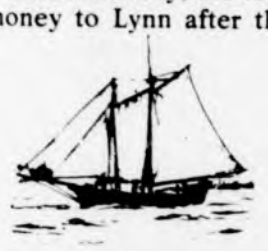
Today the two principal functions of the Red Cross Chapter in town are sponsorship of the swim and blood programs. The swimming program serves about 600 children. "I think it's one of the best programs the town of Cohasset has going," said Conley.

Through out the year the Red Cross also offers instruction for townspeople in CPR and first aid. During the Blizzard of 1978 the chapter collected and distributed clothing. In fact, Conley said more clothing was collected than actually needed.

More recently, the town's Red Cross Chapter sent money to Lynn after the big fire. "We've always been out in front when someone has needed money or services from out chapter," said Conley.

The current board of directors for Cohasset's Red Cross are: chairman Conley, vice-chairman Joan McCarthy, treasurer Bob James, James Kearney, Hugh McEwan and Al Odermatt, Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray serves the Veteran's Service Program while Cliff Dickson heads the disaster program as chairman.

Conley's message is, "Come join us. We need more people." Volunteers could help with the blood program or possibly some new safety services. There is also some paperwork involved. Anyone interested in helping the town's Red Cross Chapter grow should contact Chairman Dick Conley.



Coastal Counseling to provide advanced training

Congressman Brian Donelly has notified the Coastal Community Counseling Center of Braintree it has been selected by the National Institute of Mental Health to provide advanced training in clinical and community psychology.

The community mental health center serves Braintree, Weymouth, Hull, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate.

Students in their third, fourth or fifth year of graduate study in psychology will participate in the federally-supported program, Congressman Donnelly said. They will receive advanced training in community consultation, psychological testing, and psychotherapy.

"The selection of the Coastal Community Counseling Center for this program is evidence of the high caliber of community mental health services available on the South Shore," Donnelly said. "This training program will further enhance the quality and availability of these important services in our area."

Cohasset swimmers best Duxbury

The Cohasset Swim Team managed to sneak past the Aqua-Dux squad from Duxbury last Friday with a nine-point margin of victory. The Cohasset swimmers battled to a 288-279 win at Duxbury.

The win boosts Cohasset to a 3-1 record atop the South Shore Division "A" standings. It was the second time this season that Cohasset defeated Aqua-Dux. Earlier in the season Cohasset won, 321-246 versus Aqua-Dux.

Both teams stayed within four to nine points of each other throughout the entire meet. Coach Doug Bell said, "That's heart failure for me." Coach Brenda Birmann said the Cohasset squad demonstrated good team spirit. Though both teams were minus some of the stronger swimmers, everyone swam very well, she said.

Sara Bishop swam to four first place finishes for Cohasset. Three-time winners for Cohasset were: Stephen Camardo, Niffy Jackson, Emily Tague, Mike Cunning and Ian Knox.

Other winners of individual events for Cohasset were: Alida Dean, Eric Karcher, Topher Henderson, Laura Pompeo, Margie Wood, Cathleen Buckley, Matt Buckley, John Jackson and Greg Julian.

The following Cohasset swimmers posted their best times of the season versus Aqua-Dux: Sara Bishop, Emily Tague, Bridget Cox, Chip Anderson, Caitlin Staunton, Ian Knox, Kate Anderson, Eric Karcher, Mike Cunning, Joel Reidy, Erin Chase, Greg Julian, Margie Wood, Jeanine Buckley and Matt Corbett.

Diving Coach Erin O'Brien reports that the 12 and under divers are undefeated for the season. Brian Bonnar captured first place in diving competition for Cohasset's 16 and unders while Jane deLima won the 12 and under diving events.

Swimming "Stars for the Week" were: Julie Bowdoin, Jane deLima, Dona Tehranian, Matt Leary, Mike Cunning, Sara Bishop, Diane Thayer, Kate Anderson, Eric Karcher, Mark Sechen and Mark Murphy.

On Friday Cohasset will compete against Boston College, their only loss this season. If Cohasset beats the B.C. Seagles they will clinch the Division "A" Championship with one game remaining.

There are times — right about now — when we feel a little intimidated when zucchini plants start to produce. You can freeze it, fry it, bake it in bread and still the prolific green zucchini flourishes. You can stuff individual shells with a mixture of chopped mushrooms, onions and tomato sauce and sprinkle with bread crumbs and parmesan cheese and never tire of eating it, but I think Dot Bartlett's casserole has the added advantage of whittling away at a bounteous supply of garden tomatoes. Dot suggests one small zucchini and one tomato for two servings, increasing the ingredients to suit the number of people you wish to serve.

BAKED ZUCCHINI

Zucchini
Ripe tomatoes
Onion, diced
Butter
Parmesan cheese, grated
Buttered crumbs
Salt, pepper, paprika

Slice the zucchini thinly (do not peel). Slice tomatoes. Arrange a layer of zucchini slices in a greased casserole. Season well. Sprinkle diced onion over. Lay slices of tomatoes on top of zucchini and season again. Add more onion, repeating process until you have four layers. Sprinkle top layer generously with cheese. Top with buttered crumbs. Cover and bake 30 min. in a 350 degree oven.

You can usually distinguish a South Shore native from the summer tourist by the shade of their summer tan. New to the area is the poor soul who bears a striking resemblance to a boiled lobster, while the colorful fisherman in his yellow oilskins and rubber boots has the leathery tan only acquired after hours on the water. Now someone has suggested that while we broil in the sun, we do a little something more constructive and that is, "Sun Cooking." The technique is simple — just set the necessary ingredients in the sun and, depending on the degree of brightness, you can make Strawberry-Pineapple Sun Preserves, Spiced Solar Tea or Hot Peppered Vinegar. A hot dry day may call for half the "sun time" for baking, as a mild, humid one. Testing in the article I read was done under mild conditions ranging between 60 and 80 degrees and 18 to 55 percent humidity. To make the preserves, you may need to set the fruit syrup mixture out for a few hours each day and bring indoors at night till of desired consistency.

3 c. fresh strawberries, halved
1 c. coarsely chopped fresh pineapple
2 c. sugar
1/2 c. honey
2 T lemon juice

Combine ingredients in saucepan. Heat to boiling for 8 to 10 min., stirring constantly. Divide mixture into two 13x9x2" baking dishes so that syrup is no more than 1/2" thick. Cover each dish with clear plastic wrap, leaving one edge open slightly to allow for evaporation. Set in full sun, stirring every 2 hours, or till mixture is consistency of honey. Ladle into clean, hot half-pint jars. Cool. Store in refrigerator or freezer. Makes about four half-pints.

No summer vacation on the shores of the Atlantic is complete without lobster in some way, shape or form. I'm sure that if you keep a package of frozen langostinos on hand, your guests would never dream they weren't eating lobster in this casserole of Mary Mills which serves three and is called.

SHERRIED "LOBSTER"

1 pkg. langostinos, thawed
6 T butter
2 tsp. paprika
1/2 c. dry sherry
1/2 tsp. salt
Pepper to taste
4 T butter
4 T flour
2 c. light cream

Rinse thawed langostinos, drain, then dry with paper towels. Heat 6 T butter in fry pan, add langostinos, paprika, sherry, salt, pepper. Simmer at least 30 min., until liquid is absorbed. To make white sauce, melt 4 T butter in fry pan. Add flour, salt, pepper and blend well. Add to heated cream and beat with egg beater. When sauce is thickened, add langostinos and serve on patty shells.

Second annual Greek Taverna Aug. 14 & 15

Everyone is welcome to come to the August Taverna sponsored by Panagia Greek Orthodox Church (Pope Memorial), 817 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

On a wonderful summer weekend Saturday, Aug. 14 and Sunday, Aug. 15, from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. and 12 noon to 7 p.m., respectively, the community can again enjoy the festivities of a Taverna.

This Second Annual August Taverna is to be a traditional Greek Country Festival called a "PANAGIRI." In the Orthodox Faith, this weekend celebrates the Name Day of Mary, Mother of God. Because the Cohasset Church is named for the Blessed Mother, 'Panagia,' this August Taverna is doubly special as it celebrates Her Name Day, as well as that of the Church.

Again, there'll be offered the marvelous dishes of mousaka, spanikopita, souvlakia, and, of course, roast lamb, plus a new addition called 'Pastitsio.' Needless to say, the ever popular pastries will be offered.

A new addition to this year's Panagiri will be the Bakaliko, or Grocery Store, which will allow you to buy take-home products. Thus, you can fix your own delicious Greek dinners in your own kitchen.

So, Come One, Come All, and enjoy a very special weekend at the Panagia Church (Pope Memorial), 817 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

Some friendly advice . . . that's not interfering

By Lois Martin

Dear Tom,

I've never been one to interfere. Far be it from me to lend my mind and tongue to another person's affairs, Precious.

But it's a wise woman who knows an exception when she sees one.

The prompting behind this hug around the shoulder advice is based on my recent experience, and my first one, of having written a celebrity for his photo.

That was you, big boy. And I could have had a more meaningful response from Frank Perdue.

PATCHES

It's not for me that I say these things. I wrote a friendly personable letter to you in early May on my vacation time, inviting you to visit, see the ocean, sniff the pines, taste the lobster, enjoy intriguing people and my hot molasses cookies.

From me you got a classy invite, Tom.

From you I get a stock postcard with a Crazy Horse stamp on it.

The thing was, one of my friends is goofy about you. On and on she went about how she wanted you around for her birthday. I knew that was ridiculous. And I said as much to you in the letter. But then I asked for a moving poster or note or something.

I wouldn't have minded so much not hearing from you if I hadn't heard from Phyllis.

Who the devil is Phyllis that I've got to go through her?

Anyway, it's high time you realized what she's sending in your name.

The back of the card was portioned off in three sections, the largest of which was used for my address.

On the left, I was instructed to write to Phyllis Schooley if I want to join your fan club. I bet you that's really Phyllis Shlafley, out of a job and sick of staying home now that she doesn't have to whip the ERA movement anymore.

She'll get no letter from me.

Below in the other part of the card, I'm informed, in ever so standard type, where to send $3 for a Tom Selleck poster. No checks or cash accepted. But I'd be intrigued to see if cash got returned. Just a thought, a bit of mental meandering. Then side to on my card, "Just returned from filming in Yugoslavia."

Fine. That was either to explain why I hadn't heard for two months or to let me know you get around. I never thought of you as someone who couldn't rustle up a companion for a Friday evening popcorn session.

Then the kicker in my correspondence was a reminder to watch for you in "Shadow Riders" in September in fading black stamp. All this on the other side of your black and white photo.

You, smiling, beneath a palm tree (or flourishing houseplant), both dimples in place, lightly intertwined dark curly locks, open neck plaid shirt...and an orlon sweater (with pills) knotted around your front.

Had you not taken time to write "Thanks Tom Selleck" I might have had the feeling you didn't even get my invitation, not to mention the full description of how much good it would do you to visit the South Shore of Massachusetts.

Unfortunately, the day your response arrived I was nauseous with a stomach bug. That probably explains my response to Phyllis' name being all over my card.

My friend got a card too. It didn't have some of the stamped messages but it did wish her a late happy birthday in the faded script.

Okay. So you're a star and a busy one. And women keep trying to snag your shirt threads in their purses. I just had to let you know what Phyllis was doing about your mail. It's allright, I guess, if you like that "occupant" or "current resident" kind of feeling.

Here, though, we like real warmth, and a bargain. For a poster of my friends send 75 cents to me, (plus 50 cents handling, though I'm tempted to throw that in for nothing...).

And for information about getting pills off sweaters, we'll take care of them one by one when you get here.

School Committee adopts new drug & alcohol policy guide

By Donna Cogliano

The school committee adopted a new Drug and Alcohol Policy Guide Monday. Typing of the guide was to begin this week by an administrative secretary so that copies could be mailed out to parents and students later this month.

The guide received unanimous approval from the school committee as well as a blessing from Police Chief John DeBassio. School Supt. Eugene Crowell said DeBassio reviewed the guide and had complimented the committee and all the people who worked on it. Crowell said DeBassio hoped the committee would adopt the policy Monday so that copies of the guide could reach homes before the start of school.

The policy section was approved by the school board before the summer. Monday's vote was to accept the guide as an entire package including a policy implementation section. A few last minute revisions were made to the implementation section during the 45-minutes of discussion by school committee, administrators and parents.

As recommended by School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet the paragraph on personal searches of students was clarified. Kornet was concerned that the section requiring personal search of a female student in the presence of a school nurse might not always be by a female (nurse).

The search section was amended to read, "When a personal search is appropriate it shall be conducted by an administrator or designee of the same sex."

The remainder of the search section procedure states: The administration may search and an individual's person, locker or belongings. Such a search shall be conducted in the presence of a witness. Police shall make searches only when there is proper legal justification.

The Drug and Alcohol Policy Guide outlines procedures to be followed for problems which occur during school hours or during school related activities which might not take place on Cohasset School property.

When on school property during school hours, a student in possession of a drug should be escorted to the principals office immediately. If a student is believed to be under the influence of a drug, the teacher or other school agent should escort the student to the nurses' office and immediately notify the principal's office.

At school dances, athletic events, and other activities on the school property, Kornet said the staff doesn't want to push a problem student out the door. Students exhibiting possible use, abuse or possession of prohibited substances outside the normal school hours will have their parent or legal guardian called to remove the student from the function. If a parent is not available, the police shall remove the offender. And if an apparent medical emergency exists, the am-

Miss Cohasset...

Karen Ekberg, of 66 Nichols Road, was chosen this year's Miss Cohasset on Saturday. She was one of 15 single women who entered the pageant which was sponsored by the Village and Harbor Association. Ekberg was crowned during the Mid Summer Stroll Festivities and will hold the Miss Cohasset title for one year.

Swim team takes first with B.C. win

Cohasset's swim team beat the Boston College Seagles by one point Friday to clinch first place in the South Shore League.

The Cohasset 16 year-old and under team edged the Seagles, 282-281 and improved to a 4-1 record. The B.C. squad had defeated Cohasset the first time around in a meet earlier this season.

But the morning swimming and diving action at Boston College wasn't the only exercise for the Cohasset squad on Friday. The swim team completed a double header which included an afternoon victory versus the South Shore Country Club Squad in Hingham. Cohasset triumphed over Hingham, 242-214 in a non-league meet.

Cohasset swim coach Brenda Birmann said the swimmers should be proud of the victory since conditions were not in their favor. "We were the visiting team and had lost to them before. The water was dark and cloudy which is difficult in judging distances for turns. Plus, many Cohasset swimmers were not familiar with the electronic timing system and starting buzzer that was used," she said. "Needless to say, it was a very exciting and close meet. All swimmers did a super job."

The diving team members continually put Cohasset in the lead after the diving events are

The Stroll had most everything

Mid Summer Stroll festivities Saturday included something for everyone. There was loud rock-folk music and from St. Stephen's Church, melodious sounds from carillons. There was good food, dancing and horsedrawn firewagon rides. There were winners and there were losers.

The winners were Miss Cohasset and her court. The losers were members of the Merchant's softball team. Seventeen year-old Karen Ekberg won the Miss Cohaset title while the Merchant softballers were defeated 11-9 by the Cohasset Police Association (Strawberry Parfait).

A local band, "The Gist," performed before hundreds of people Saturday night at the block dance in the Village. The crowd included young and old and in between.

Two Cohasset men played in the band, Bill Coleman of Rustic Drive and Scott Daniels of Beach Street.

The Cohasset Village and Harbor Association kicked off the Mid Summer festivities with a benefit softball game Saturday morning. It wasn't your usual nine innings of play, with the school's Athletic Director Clark Chatterton umpiring the benefit game and penalizing Cohasset firemen and policemen for hitting homeruns.

Strawberry Parfait batters were called out for parking the ball over the fence. Each batter was fined one dollar for each homer hit. And at one point Chatterton subtracted runs every time a Strawberry Parfait player crossed home plate. With Chatterton's arithmetic, it wasn't long before the Merchants held an 8-0 lead. But after the seventh inning the umpire ruled all homers would count as real runs.

So...for the final three innings Merchant softball players were stationed behind the outfield fence, in foul territory and at the Sohier St. pool. Even though some 15 fielders played defense, in the field for the merchants, the Strawberry Parfait team managed to rack up 11 runs for the victory.

Lobster and fish chowder were available all afternoon long with face painting for the youngsters. Many young people were treated to horsedrawn firewagon rides for a cost of 25 cents each.

MISS COHASSET

At 6 p.m. a large crowd gathered in front of the Historical Museum's Courtyard to learn the winner of the Miss Cohasset Pageant. Onlookers were kept in suspense as the four finalists stood in the court

Time limit set on Rhodes' demotion

Selectmen narrowed the time limit on former police sgt. John Rhodes III demotion to patrolman this week.

At a special early morning meeting on Monday the board voted unanimously to suspend Rhodes to patrolman for a five-year period.

The board's original decision called for an indefinite demotion of Rhodes because he had an affair with a teenaged girl.

As a result of Monday's action, however, selectmen may review the case after five years and decide to promote Rhodes. Selectman Rocky Laugelle initiated the motion for the vote, saying all other provisions of the hearing decision would remain unchanged.

The board's vote was 2-0 with selectman Mary Jane McArthur away on vacation.

Selectman Chairman Henry Ainslie Jr., said McArthur was aware of the fact that the Rhodes case would be on a future selectmen's agenda. "She apparently knew they were going to request an appeal before she left," he said.

Last month Rhodes was found guilty by selectmen of conduct unbecoming an officer, neglect of duty and contributing to the waywardness of a minor. He was ordered to undergo psychological counseling at his own expense.

Atty. John Ridge has appealed the board's decision to the civil service commission. An appeals hearing is set for tomorrow (Thursday).

Neither Rhodes nor his attorney attended the Monday morning meeting. Last week they both met with selectmen in executive session to present further clarification of evidence. During the 45-minute closed session selectmen listened to a tape recording from a Quincy Court proceeding of May.

Though selectmen did speak alone with Police

Cohasset's week...

Topographic maps available

The Planning Board reports that the Topographic Maps of Cohasset are now available. The maps show 2' contours, are scaled at 100' to the inch, and are 24'' by 36'' in size. They are the product of an aerial survey made on April 19, 1981 under the auspices of Loring Jacobs Company of Norwell.

Copies of the individual sections or sheets, or of the entire set of some sixty, may be obtained by selecting those wanted from a sample set at the Selectmen's Office in the Town Hall. The price is $5 per sheet. The Selectmen's office will issue a receipt of payment noting the identification number of those sheets desired. The receipt may then be deliverd to Loring H. Jacobs Company, 293 Rear Washington St., Norwell who will reproduce the sheet designated.

Fair Share to solicit

Police Chief John DeBassio has granted "Massachusetts Fair Share" permission to solicit in Cohasset during the month of August.

Soliciting will take place weekday evenings only, between the hours of 3:30 and 8 by members of the State certified non-profit organization. All authorized participants will display photo identification cards while conducting such activities.

Comments or varification of such activities may be directed to the Cohasset Police Department by calling 383-1212.

Water testing continues

Ongoing beach samples of public swimming areas continue to reveal low fecal counts. This enables safe swimming levels. Weekly testing ensures that any rise in the counts will be quickly observed and thus, measures can be taken to eliminate any conditions which would render unsafe swimming.

Academy appointments

Congressman Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass., announced that Stephen G. Bowen, 15 Juniper Rise, Cohasset, has been accepted to The United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland.

The appointee who was first recommended for nomination by the Congressman's Service Academy Nominee Selection Committee, was offered appointment after undergoing extensive review by the academy's admissions board. The admissions board made the final selections.

Register to vote

Tuesday will be the last day citizens may register to vote or to change enrollment for the state primaries on Sept. 14.

People should register to vote at the town clerk's office in Town Hall. The office is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The office is closed from noon to 1 p.m.

Additional hours for registration have been scheduled so that residents will be eligible to participate in the state primaries. On Saturday, August 14 the town clerk's office will be open from noon to 8 p.m. And on Tuesday, August 17 the office will be open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.

For more information, call the Board of Registrars office (town clerk) at 383-0187.

Town Clerk's report

There were seven reported deaths in town during July and two births. Three couples filed marriage intentions:

Gregory Lane to Miriam Lahage both of Smyrna, Georgia; Robert Harrington, of 21 Margin St., to Marilyn Timmons of Newton Highlands; Anthony Cappello, of South Weymouth, to Patricia Giuggio of 46 Jerusalem Road.

Adult computer program

The school committee gave the go-ahead Monday for the Community Center to offer a computer program for adults — possibly on Saturdays.

The Community Center would use the computer facilities at the Junior-Senior High School. Laura Doherty of the Community Center said there have been many requests for such a program. Doherty is developing a program to begin in September.

bulance shall be called in also.

School Committee Member Martha Gjesteby asked if the schools could control drinking in the woods during school functions. Crowell said that neither the schools nor the police department had the staff to control these problem situations in the parking lot and woods. He said that once a student leaves a dance, he or she is not allowed back in, which would reduce the in and out flow of trouble.

Under the Legal Implications section, parents and the school committee considered the confidentiality rules as most important. They felt the Mass. state law should be carefully explained in its entirety to students, teachers and parents.

Under this section teachers must make it clear to students that when pupils confide in them, it is their duty to report this information to the school principal in order to further the goal of promoting the pupil's personal welfare. The pupil who seeks the teacher's help is actually asking for help from school authorities.

The confidentiality section further states, "School personnel have no protection or privileges under Massachusetts law to confidential communication, with the exception of the school physician. School personnel can be subpoenaed into court and required to reveal information which has been confided to them. Administration and teachers may also be liable in civil suit for failure to notify parents or legal guardians about pupils' drug or alcohol involvement."

Similarly, student records may be subpoenaed into court with respect to civil or criminal proceedings. Many teachers fear this will stop young people from asking for help. Reports from schools which have adopted this confidentiality section tend to indicate that it does not deter students from seeking help.

Penalties for use or possession of a controlled substance include: a five-day out of school suspension, immediate notification of parent or legal guardian, a parent conference will be scheduled within 48 hours, referral of family to a rehabilitation program.

Distribution and/or sale of a control substance would result in a 10-day suspension for the f..st offense. The student would face possible expulsion for a subsequent offense.

Maria Plante asked if the Drug and Alcohol Policy Guide was drafted to include the elementary schools also. Crowell said, "Yes," the guide was for all schools and that all teachers, parents and students would be given copies of the guide.

Crowell reminded the committee and those in attendance at Monday's meeting that the guide is not final even though it has been adopted. He said the committee would review the policy in a year.

School Committee Member Joseph Nedrow hoped that students and possibly members of the community could assist in providing illustrations for the guide for its next printing. Illustrations could not be completed in time for this summer's printing.

Kornet gave a special thanks to Nancy Clapp, Carol Sandblom and all the people who helped to develop and revise the Drug and Alcohol Abuse guide.

Bid opening

Selectmen opened five bids last Wednesday for the exterior painting of the Government Island apartment house. Low bidder was John Sadler, of Cohasset, $3,900. Executive Secretary Arthur Clark said $6,000 had been budgeted for the painting project. Other bids ranged from $4,900 to $6,580.

Students score well on Basic Skills test

Stephen Hart updated school committee members Monday on the Basic Skills and SRA (Science Research Associates) results for the past year. "I'm happy to report that the scores have improved once again," he said.

In the SRA testing Hart said that about five or six tests are usually lower than all others. However, this year was particularly satisfying for Hart since average scores were average and better. Hart reported to the committee that all average scores were above the 60th percentile with a majority of scores in the 70th to 89th percentiles.

"It's a compliment to the students and the parents, and the hard work of teachers and staff members," said Hart.

In Basic Skills testing Hart submitted the following comparison of the percentage of passing students from the past year and two years ago:

GRADE TWO:
1980-1981 — Reading, 95; Math, 98; Writing, 93.
1981-1982 — Reading, 90; Math, 95; Writing, 83.
GRADE FIVE:
1980-1981 — Reading, 100; Math, 98; Writing, 97.
1981-9182 — Reading, 99; Math, 98; Writing, 93.
GRADE SEVEN:
1980-1981 — Reading, 96; Math, 92; Writing, 83.
1981-1982 — Reading, 96; Math, 90; Writing, 84.

Because Cohasset's passing grade differs from other schools' passing grades, Hart said it wouldn't be fair to compare results with other towns. Passing scores are different everywhere and it would be misleading to compare them, he said.

Time limit set on Rhodes' demotion...

Chief John DeBassio last week in executive session, Ainslie said the board did not ask for his recommendation. Ainslie said it would be fair to say that DeBassio felt the selectmen's decision was a bit hard on Rhodes.

Laugelle added that the board had considered firing Rhodes as one of their options. "Things could have been worse," said Laugelle. Both Ainslie and Laugelle felt their decision was lenient considering the seriousness of circumstances.

According to DeBassio, even though Rhodes has been demoted he will still serve as shift commander because he is senior to most patrolmen. With Rhodes' demotion the only remaining officers for shift command are a sergeant and a lieutenant.

Ainslie announced Monday that the hearing for Francis Chafe had been postponed. Last week selectmen were notified that Chafe had appealed to the state civil service concerning a selectmen's decision to bypass him for a part-time patrolman's job.

The hearing was scheduled for Monday but was postponed at the request of Chafe's attorney, said Ainslie.

In other action at Monday morning's meeting, Ainslie requested that the Dump Study Committee review the proposal from Cohasset Heights Limited and fill which was discussed by the health board last week.

Ainslie wants the committee to study the proposal and give selectmen a full report concerning the town's proposed use of the Cohasset Heights landfill.

around town

An old horsedrawn firewagon travels downtown on Main Street.

☐First of all, a few Around Town corrections.

☐Eric Pearson does not own all of Coral Bay.

☐Roger Porter has never turtled.

☐Bob and Carol Ciciotte spell their name this way, not the other way.

☐The Marshfield news which appeared in this column recently was not my fault. Kathy did it.

☐I forget (this is not a correction) the name of the Hull shop which carries Dealy-Boppers. Ask Cathy Morgan, she might remember. They cost $2.05.

☐This week you are probably all eagerly awaiting to hear a follow-up on the group which recently went to the Male Stripper Club in Stoughton. There is none. I am never to mention it again. Sobeit.

☐Heard the Cox Estate is on the market for $25M. The agent who arranges that deal can retire for life.

☐A little note from Skinny Laugelle this week, thanking me for his birthday write-up in A.T. last week, and asking me to send his thanks to everbody who was in cahoots over his surprise 50th at the Legion. He loves his stereo radio, and sent along special thanks to "M.M. from Pond Street" for her special gift.

☐Off to see a fortune teller in Quincy recently were Pat Sargent, President of Dependable Cleaners; Kay Conte of Town hall; Priscilla Barresi and Nancy McLaughlin, who trained me in layout and paste-up at the Mariner. Apparently they were all told very good things because they didn't go out for a drink(s) afterward. Instead they ended up at KO KO Island where they further debated their futures over fortune cookies.

☐Nobles Camera is in to something new, "People Bones." Jack Antoine said they're selling like hotcakes. They cost $4.95 a box and they're for big and small people. You can send away for a personal I.D. tag for your 'person' if you enclose two box tops and some money. Jack said he had only sold one box, but they had only been in the store for eight hours at that point.

☐The Sailing Club dinner is being held this Saturday, you're invited. It costs $15 per person and the meal consists of lobster, clams and other goodies. If you'd like to attend call Joyce Conway (1621).

☐Everybody has discovered the new Bread Store in the former location of the Wee Spinnaker! The Balloons Store and Village Fabrics, formerly of Cushing Plaza and now on So. Main Street, seem to be pretty busy too. Darling shops!

☐Tony Fasciano may have beat Police Chief DeBassio in the 50-yard sprint, but the day following the great race the chief wopped Fasciano by 11 strokes on the golf course. The chief and Ginny DeBassio are the proud owners of a toy collie/shepherd named "Dutchess."

☐NEW NEIGHBORS! Mine. Robin and John Suhrbier and their two sons, 11 year-old Michael and 8 year-old Patrick, moved in next door just last week! John is the Engineering Manager for LTEX in Westwood; and Robin was formerly a partner in an advertising agency in Madison, Connecticut. Michael is a pretty good skier and has been competing in track and field events. He'll be entering the 6th Grade at Deer Hill this fall. Pat, who is a budding young pianist, will be entering the 3rd Grade at Osgood. Kinky, the family dog, was recently voted the Second Most Funniest Dog in a dog show in Madison.

☐Congratulations to Billy Baird who recently was named "Star of The Week" at the Cohasset Swim Club!

☐Japanese AFS students were and might be still in town this week. One of the gals at a Mid-Summer Stroll refreshment stand reported a cute story. A very attractive Japanese gal came up to the stand and ordered: "A Rarge Remonaide."

☐Speaking of Japan, Ann Baird (former school committee woman) was back from Japan visiting friends this week. She and George, who is with Hay Associates, an international consulting firm, will be leaving Japan for New York in November of this year. George has been named manager of the N.Y. office of Hay Associates in New York.

She loves living in Tokyo, said Japanese women don't have the problem of pulling men away from football games on T.V., "Their problem is pulling them away from their computers."

Japanese women are very interested in the women's liberation movement in America, and Ann has been helpful in supplying them with the appropriate literature. When Ann returns to Japan this month she will be working with a publisher in putting out an encyclopedia of Japan in English.

☐Just a note, in case anybody thinks we're making fun of the gal who ordered the "Rarge Remonaide," it should be noted here that Ann Baird has been saying suspicious things to the Japanese in Japanese for the past couple of years.

Last year Noel and Nancy Ripley got some smiles in Germany with their (Noel's) German.

☐Gretchen Lincoln of Cohasset, has received the Friendly Ice Cream Company's Traditions of Excellence Award. The award is presented in recognition of high achievement in all phases of customer service.

Lincoln is employed at the Friendly Restaurant in South Weymouth.

☐Girls and horses who went off to horse camp in Spencer, last Saturday were: Erin Powell and Gloree Bea; Heather Ripley and Cimmarron; Amy Mitman and Aquis Esta; Beth Livingston and Bunny; Kerry McGovern and Mistala; Laure McKenna and Lady Guinevere; Jennifer Kirby and Apple Jack; and Jennifer Ellingwood and her horse whose name escaped my horse reporter.

C.C.C. students build a catamaran

By Donna Cogliano

Students of the Community Center's sailboat building class launched their homemade Catamaran in the harbor last weekend. It did float, and the accompanying photograph proves it.

Paul Douglas, of 35 Stevens Lane, will know if the 16-foot Catamaran continues to float, because now he owns it. The sailboat was constructed by a class of six adults in the Community Center's bowling alley and raffled off to a class member at the boat's christening.

Jeff Livingstone of Quincy instructed this summer's sailboat building class and estimated that 20 hours or eight classes were spent building the boat. He said, $300 was spent in materials for the boat and each student paid $60 to take the class.

Livingston, a professional boat builder estimated that construction of the Catamaran usually calls for a minimum of $1,000 in labor expenses.

People don't take the course to become professional boat builders, said Livingstone, "they just want to be able to repair a neighbor's boat, etc." Although the class constructed the sailboat with power tools, Livingstone said the boat could have been completed with the use of only an electrical drill, skill saw and hand tools. Power tools are professionally faster, he said.

Livingstone explained his teaching experiences as the highlight of his week. One of the more interesting parts of the course was that class members would bring a friend or family member to view the sessions, he said.

The purpose of the Historic District Commission

The purpose of the town's Historic District Bylaw is to preserve and protect the distinctive architectural character of the Cohasset Common as a permanent legacy.

The Historic District Commission was formed to oversee implementation of the bylaw. Duties of the commission include receiving and reviewing applications for exterior construction or alterations of any building within the Historic District. The bylaw was approved by 1978 town meeting.

Three Historic District Commissioners told the Mariner last week that their committee acts expeditiously on applications, though 14 days notice must be given before a public hearing and 10 days notice to alert abutters if a public hearing is not needed. Plus, the commission must post a notice for two days prior to the regular commission meeting.

Commissioners maintained that on the average, applications are reviewed and completed within 25 days.

Two years ago an off-white paint was approved for the Murphy home. The commission's approval was given after 17 days of deliberation. Commissioner Peter Wood said, "It's not an accurate statement to say the committee is not acting in a timely fashion."

He said, "We're not acting as obstructionist — that is simply not the case as evidenced by the track record of the committee." During the past years the commission has approved solar panels and several color changes of trim and shutters and roof shingles for buildings in the Historic District. The Stevenson home has had three window changes approved by the commission during recent years.

Commission secretary Charles Wheelwright said, each application must be acted on within 60 days.

In regard to the proposed Common benches which were not approved by the commission, member Barbara Weisenfluh said, "It was a super idea to put park benches on the Common...we're in favor of this." The commissioners asked for revised plans for the park benches which would be bolted down. They also didn't like the particular style of the benches and would favor a flat bench with no back, said members. They want to be sure the benches won't attract vandals.

Of the 28 buildings within the Historic District, 18 are white and 10 are non-white. There are two yellow homes, one beige, two cream colored and one stone church. Wheelwright said the commission's responsibility is to, "Preserve the character and flavor of the Common."

Do it again

The great success of Saturday's Midsummer Stroll was a heartening development on several fronts.

...It was heartening because it spares us from having to scold the selectmen for some-thing-or-other for an entire week.

...Heartening because everybody had fun and nobody got hurt.

...Heartening because it's always nice to see a major part of the populace part from their parlors to partake of a party on a particularly nice day. Good for the community spirit too.

...Heartening because in the weirdest softball game since Doubleday fashioned rounders into baseball, the Merchants' Nine and the Strawberry Parfait jointly creamed the rules.

...Heartening because in doing so, they raised $80 to help defray the expense of three Cohasset girls playing in the softball nationals in New Mexico.

...Heartening because Karen Ekberg, the first Miss Cohasset, is truly deserving of the crown even though she had to top a lot of other beautiful girls to win it. We agree with the observation that Cohasset may have more beauty per capita than anyplace else on the Eastern Seaboard.

(Incidentally, someone suggested that next year's Mid Summer Stroll should have a Mr. Cohasset Contest as well. Should that be the case, we nominate Ron Goodwin, even if he is bashful.)

...The Stroll was also heartening because David Wadsworth freed two citizens jailed by mistake in the gown museum for 15 minutes.

...Heartening because the said jailbirds are said not to be bringing suit against whoever locked them up.

From this vantage, the Midsummer Stroll was a good and healthy event for Cohasset and for all who participated. Special thanks go to Ellen Morrissey and to Tinka McLean (and unsung others) who organized the day's events in less than a month's time.

We hope that Midsummer Stroll becomes a perennial flower in Cohasset's summer.

Town is short 1.09 selectmen

Letters

To the Editor:

Contrary to the Mariner's recent editorial on the five man board of selectmen, no constitutional change is necessary in order for the Town of Cohasset to expand its board of selectmen from three to five members.

The General Laws mandate Towns to have an odd number of selectmen. One member is too few.

The five-member board the petitioners seek requires only a town bylaw amendment.

HISTORY

The desire for a five-member board of selectmen was first felt in 1974, when writers and supporters of the then defeated Town Charter suggested the same.

In 1979 it was tried again. It failed.

Now in 1982 a group of citizens are trying for a third time. You will note the years between the attempts to expand the board of selectmen from three to five members are shortening. In any case, this is not a momentary disillusionment or disatisfaction.

Over the past eight years Town Meeting has been usurping the powers of the three-man board of selectmen with more and more regularity.

The call by petitioners for the Aug. 30, 1982 Special Town Meeting is a case in point. A group of 500 plus individuals were upset that a local resident was not chosen to be interviewed by selectmen for fire chief.

The three final candidates were chosen by a special selection committee who were in turn appointed by the troika*...who were in turn directed to establish the special selection committee through the vote of Town Meeting.

In this particular instance selectmen initiated the search committee article, perhaps in anticipation that if they did not do so, it would be done for them, as in the past.

When a member of the board of selectmen was recently asked by the press for the rationale behind the special selection committee, he responded that residents had no confidence in their board of selectmen.

In a small town we are necessarily going to have selectmen who are closely related to the issues which come before town government. A five-member board would take some of that heat off the selectman or selectmen in question. His fellow board members could absorb it. No human sacrifices would be necessary.

On a three-member board the minority vote is a minority opinion only. It can use all the rhetoric and logic it has at its disposal...but that member can only have an opinion. Its vote can never count. Its negotiation efforts are negligible when two selectmen have already agreed.

On a five-member board all votes are vital. The fifth vote becomes very important. In some cases it is the swing vote. In other instances it can become the vote that demands compromise. In every instance it is vied for. There are no unimportant votes on a five-man board.

The numerical composition of a five-man board promotes discussion, debate, compromise, negotiation. And sometimes, a better decision is made. But more importantly, we as voters can better participate as listeners and readers. The issues are publically before us.

The aim of the petition signers is to create an expanded board of selectmen which will be directly responsible for their sub-committees, their appointments — the men and women they choose to run town government under their direction.

Why, indeed should Town Meeting create a special subcommittee to interview applicants for the selectmen, and then not permit selectmen to consider "other" than the three applicants the committee has selected to be finalists for the position?

As chief financial officers of the Town, the selectmen are responsible for the entire town government budget: school committee budgets (if fraudulent or excessive spending should be discovered) and the town budget itself. In towns without charters, selectme do indeed have a heavy workload.

How heavy? Can it be determined by formula?

The Town budget is approximately 45 percent of the total budget; the school budget being approximately 55 percent. Consider this simple equasion:

$$\frac{\text{X Selectmen}}{15\%} \quad X \quad \frac{\text{5 School Committee Men}}{55\%}$$

X equals 4.09 selectmen

We are presently 1.09 selectmen short

*TROIKA — 3-member appointing autnority established by by-law consisting of Chairman Board of Selectmen, Moderator, and Advisory Committee Chairman.

Mid Summer Stroll a great day

To the Editor:

This past weekend, we were fortunate to have wonderful weather conditions in conjunction with the merchants Mid Summer Stroll Festival.

The events were well attended by all age groups and spurred those on with enthusiasm who had prepared special projects for that day.

The 10 a.m. kick-off softball game of the Merchants vs. the Cohasset Police Assoc. (Strawberry Parfait team) got us all up and running, particularly with the Merchants holding them off till the second to the last inning (did we really do that?) Thanks to Jack Tirrell of the Village Sports Shop, we had a well organized, fun game. Thanks Jack!

Rogers Music provided the Village with rhythm until the horse drawn firewagon ride arrived. We want to thank Brother and Pat Kenneally of E. Bridgewater, along with Chief and Ed, their two white horses for arranging such a picturesque setting.

Jackie Silva and Irwin Cone went to great efforts to prepare some delicious hot boiled lobsters and chowder. Thanks fellas! The fresh corn and watermelon booths attended by Christy Arnold and Josh Hassan were the perfect addition to Irwin's chowder and Jack's lobsters.

Max and Sinz Poonder of The Bread Shop and Dot and Frank of Curtis Compact were very generous with their electricity. The band and everyone who enjoyed the block dance, thank you, folks!

John Morgan deserves a big round of applause for the fantastic job of Master of Ceremonies during the Crowning of Miss Cohasset and her court. I'd like to thank all of the applicants for Miss Cohasset. It was very difficult to judge because each of the contestants had individual qualities that were outstanding.

Thank you Paul from The Village Greenery for the fantastic bouquets. Silk floral crowns were provided courtesy of the Tides Inn.

To seem it up, we all had a great time, and special thanks is due these individuals for without them, it would have been totally impossible.

Thank you, Tinka McLean, The Linen Chest, you have a gifted way with people. Thanks Lannie Stover Hassan, who worked so hard she was ill that day and couldn't enjoy her efforts. Thank you Tina Watson, who picked up the ball that was so often dropped. Laurie Pattison, you make a great chowder hostess. Louie Watson, you and your Mercedes Convertible were the icing on the cake, driving away with Miss Cohasset and her court. Thank you, Hope Sealey, In Stitches, Thanks. Phil Smith and Stevie Wigmore.

Thank you, all the Merchants, restaurants and businesses for your generous contributions to the drawing.

Thanks to the Highway Department, the Selectment and Chief DeBassio and the Cohasset Police Officers. You all made it a great day — lets do it again — enjoy.

Ellen McAuliffe Morrissey
Treasurer, Village and Harbor Assoc.

Sorting out the historic commissions

To the Editor:

There appears to be a certain amount of confusion in the eyes of Cohasset residents concerning two different Town-appointed Commissions recently established to advise and/or regulate matters relating to local historical preservation.

The two separte Commissions are: one, The Cohasset Historical Commission and two, The Cohasset Common Historic District Commission. The two bodies serve different functions, were established at different times, are defined by different Town By-Laws and derive their powers

Karla Lucas makes the catch and throws to second base in a benefit softball game for herself and two teammates. Lucas, Stacy Thompson and Gia Barresi traveled to New Mexico Sunday for the National Tournament which their Weymouth softball team qualified for by winning the New Englands.

School Committee briefs...

METCO COORDINATOR NAMED

The school committee appointed Eleanor White Monday as METCO coordinator in the Cohasset Schools. The appointment was recommended by Stephen Hart and School Supt. Eugene Crowell.

Six candidates were interviewed by Hart, the assistant to the school superintendent for state, federal and special programs. Crowell said, "I believe she will be a fine addition to the Cohasset School System."

CONFERENCE TRAVEL APPROVED

The school committee unanimously approved $500 in travel expenses for John Leary at Monday night's meeting. Leary will attend the National Association of College Admission Counseling in Minneapolis.

MASTER'S PROGRAM APPROVED

The committee accepted courses taken by Joan Cassiani toward her Master's Degree Program. the committee said they would approve of the courses from Boston College or any university of her choice.

BATES BACK FULL-TIME

Math teacher Dorothy Bates has been reinstated to a full-time position. In doing so, the board rescinded their recent vote to place Bates in a 3/5 teaching position.

Bates is now a full-time teacher at the junior-senior High School and earns $24,744 yearly.

Bates, 74, retrieved her job, which she had held for over 20 years, because of requirements set by the state's retirement board. The board's ruling, according to school Committee Chairman Diana Kornet, states that an individual may continue to work at any age if he or she passes the physical examination. Bates passed the exam.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said that all parties involved had a misunderstanding of the law which had been amended in 1977. The parties involved thought it was necessary to request a four to five year waiver, he said.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

The school committee met in executive session Monday night to discuss building security. The board planned to meet in closed session for about five minutes at the end of the meeting. Committee Chairman Diana Kornet said the Committee would not be returning to open session.

7½% NON-UNION RAISES

The school committee voted 7½ percent raises for non-union personnel Monday. The board's vote was 3-1 with member John Langmaid III absent and Martha Gjesteby opposed.

Gjesteby said she voted "no" because she wanted level funding for the salaries of administrators.

School Committee member Joe Nedrow approved the raise saying the cost of living isn't any different for union rather than non-union people. Union personnel received a 7½ percent increase for this year.

Non-union personnel receiving raises are aides, bus drivers, the school superintendent and the business manager.

Sorting out historic commissions...

from different Statues in the General Laws of the Commonwealth (the Historical Commission's Enabling Act in Chapter 40, Section 8D; the District Commission derives from Chapter 40C).

The Cohasset Historical Commission, established in 1974, is primarily an advisory and research organization, and its jurisdiction covers the entire town.

The Historical Commission is mandated to compile a Survy of the Historical Assets of Cohasset, has advised on and helped to insure the preservation of various historically significant buildings within the town, has been active in the establishment of a Town Historical Archive to save Cohasset's early public records and recently was instrumental in restoring the Town Clock at Cohasset Common.

Additionally, the Historical Commission has undertaken several projects of various types all related to the preservation of Cohasset's historical "flavor." The Historical Commission advises town agencies and private citizens alike, and is interested in helping anyone who may be looking for information about the history of the Town. This and does not rule on specific matters concerning property restrictions at Cohasset Common.

Operating separately, and in a carefully defined area around Cohasset's Town Common, is the Common Historic District Commission. The District Commission is a regulatory agency empowered to rule upon matters of change withing its limited jurisdiction, and this is the agency which Historic District residents must satisfy.

To sum up, there has been a tendancy on the part of many residents to mistake the Town's Historical Commission for its Historic District Commission, The two agencies are very different, and though both pursue the goal of historical preservation in Cohasset, do so in widely differing manners of operation. Only the names are similar.

Nuclear weapons & peace preservation

To the Editor:

Congressman Studds has congratulated Cohasset for endorsing a mutually verifiable freeze on nuclear weapons at the Town Meeting.

How many of those who voted for it have read "Nuclear Weapons and the Preservation of Peace," by four distingueshed Germans, in the summer issue of the magazine Foreign Affairs? It's the answer to the "No First Use" treatise in the Spring issue, by that quartet of innocents Bundy, Kennan, McNamara and Smith.

Perhaps the geographical location of Germany encourages a certain clarity of thought on the matter. The mindless mobs that demonstrate cannot of course be credited either with clarity of thought or being well informed.

How many of those who voted for it have read "Disinformation: Or, Why the CIA Cannot Verify an Arms — Control Agreement" in the July '82 issue of Commentary Magazine? It explains pretty well that "mutually verifiable" is a pipe dream.

This material is in the Cohasset library. So also, of course, is much material about the horrors of nuclear war, the perfidy of our elected leaders relative to the self-appointed leaders elsewhere, etc. I don't need have it pointed out to me.

Very truly yours,
R. M. Campbell
Old Pasture Road

Speak out for a strong military

To the Editor:

Gerry Studds' letter to the Mariner regarding the nuclear weapons freeze is not in the best interests of the United States, despite its seeming popularity. Peace propaganda after all was quite popular in England in the 1930's, despite a massive build-up of armaments in Nazi Germany.

The same massive build-up can be seen today in Russia and in all the Communist nations.

John Silber, president of B.U. recently said regarding the huge Soviet offensive armaments, that the survival of the United States may be at stake, and, in fact, is the most critical problem facing our nation today.

And Arkady Shevchenko, former protege of Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko, when he defected to the U.S. said that it is the Soviet Union that poses a real threat in regard to a nuclear war — not the U.S.

Moreover, he urged the American people to speak out for a strong military defense and for internal security.

Thanks, on behalf of the animals

To the Editor:

As President of Standish Humane Society, I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the people who so generously contributed to our recent Barn Sale — food, furniture, toys, books, etc.

I also know that it would not have been such a success without the cooperation of the Cohasset Mariner and other area newspapers who devoted space to our requests for contributions and our notices of the Sale itself.

The money raised will be used to further our humane efforts in Plymouth County. It will help us meet the challenges posed by the economic uncertainties of the eighties. More people let young animals out loose and more unwanted pups and kittens are born - and abandoned. And to make things even more difficult, government funds for the care of animals in need are drying up. That leaves the fate of thousands of animals in this area squarely in our hands.

In order to meet these challenges, we must depend on sustained and increased support from concerned individuals - the general public. This support was clearly evident during our recent fund-raiser.

On behalf of our animals, a heartfelt thanks.

All Stars win N. River tournament

The Cohasset 11 and 12 year old All Star Team defeated Duxbury 5-2 last Thursday to clinch first place in this year's North River All Star Tournament.

The victory improved Cohasset's Tournament Record to 9-3, one full game ahead of second place Hanson who finished at 8-4.

Other teams in the tournament, in addition to Hanson and Duxbury, included Plympton, Halifax, Carver and Kingston. Cohasset defeated each team in the tournament at least once. Cohasset's only three losses were by a total of four runs.

Good pitching, excellent team speed and outstanding defense were responsible for the Cohasset Tournament win. A line drive hitting attack, featured the Cohasset offense.

The lack of the long ball threat (Cohasset hit three home runs in the tournament, whereas the home run champion from Duxbury hit ten himself), did not prevent Cohasset from averaging better than ten runs per game. The Cohasset pitching and defense held the opponents to an average of four runs per game.

Members of the 18-player squad were: Peter Sandblom, Todd Fitzpatrick, Mike Anderson, Jason Marsac, Jim Maguire, David Shultz, Sean Fitzsimmons, David Shumaker, Donald Mulligan, Craig Mulcahy, Jimmy Gallagher, Curtis Erickson, Peter Buckley, Glen Froio, Danny Pompeo, Steven Myers, Steve Carrol and Adam Whitman.

The coaches were Jim Gallagher and David Bernstein.

while winners from the drawing were announced.

Master of Ceremonies John Morgan opened the envelope and crowned winner Karen Ekberg with a yellow floral piece. The three members of the court wore pink floral arrangements.

Court members were: Ellen Hanlon, of 215 South Main St., a 1980 CHS graduate and senior at Fisher Junior College; Nina Atkinson, of 59 Highland Ave., a junior at CHS; and Susan Johnston, a sophomore at CHS.

Ekberg is a senior honor student at Cohasset High School and has completed several seasons on the track and gymnastics teams. She was captain for two years of the gymnastics squad and also participated in the drama club.

During the summer Ekberg works at the South Shore Music Circus. In her spare time she enjoys waterskiing and sailing. She is planning to attend college next year and study business administration.

Around Town

☐According to sources, Pam Ellis and Lisa Cuff got rave reviews for their performance in "Little Me," at the Scituate High School Summer Theater last week.

☐The funniest story coming out of the Mid-Summer Stroll was regarding the two people who got locked in the Gown Museum...and equally funny the two spectators who had their noses pressed against the window watching them. This all happened, according to sources, while Mitzi Gaynor's jump suit was being sold. Anybody who might have had a key was up at Town Hall at the Celebrity Auction.

☐Larry Fone has a "super" flea market shelf at Cookworks. He failed to elaborate. Best bet is to stop in and see for yourself!

☐Clark Chatterton says the Johnny Mathis sports benefit is sold out. Clark got to play golf with Johnny this week. Must be tough having a job that requires you to do that.

☐Saw Burt Pratt at the Log Tuesday morning! He said Peter Pratt is on his way to Greece, a new job. We'll hopefully have more details in next week's Around Town if we can catch Peter.

Earn $3,000 weekly by stuffing envelopes

By Claire McDonough

I bought one of "those" newspapers. You know the ones I mean. You see them in your supermarket, and they have teasers that proclaim "Scientist on Brint of Curing Cancer" right next to a banner about "The Incredible Story of the Man Who Came Back as a Mynah Bird."

This one promised the inside dope on a "Faith Healer (who) Cures By Phone" and "How to Predict Your Own Future."

Why did I part with forty cents for the possession of this masterpiece? Well, who wouldn't? I mean, there was this great big banner telling me that I could "Lose Up to 5 Pounds a Day Easily." I wasn't too crazy about the syntax, but I'm nobody's fool. I could figure without using my fingers that at that rate I could be absolutely gorgeous within a week.

I positioned the paper under a frozen pizza at the checkout stand, and draped my body (still not minus the multiples of five) so artfully that a casual observer (not the name of the paper) would be unlikely to recognize my purchase.

Upon arriving home I dismissed my children's unprecedented offer to help with the groceries by snapping, "For heaven's sake, go clean your room," and disposed of my purchses in record time. Then I took my copy of "America's Fastest Growing Weekly" to the one place where I could be realtively sure I would be undisturbed and started reading. Fascinating.

The paper features a psychic who will answer my written questions with advice relative to financial, romantic or career problems; the "best of celebrity gossip" and two whole pages of total strangers who would like me to write to them.

In addition, this issue also offers advice on ways to get out of paying bills — tell them volcanic ash from Mt. St. Helen clogged your computer-driven check writing machine — place your own obituary in a local paper and mail clippings to your creditors; a warning that Johnny Carson may sway the next presidential election, a bit on the possibility that cloning of human beings may soon make it possible for us to grow slaves, a tasteful photograph of a suicide leap, and some household tips that depressed me deeply because they all involved easier ways to clean things that I never would consider cleaning in the first place — inside television sets, for example.

I was brought back to the present by a plaintive, "Ma, how much longer are you going to be in there?"

"No longer than it takes you to clean your room," I snarled, returning to my find.

If the body proper of this newspaper was, to put it mildly, arresting, the classified ads were something else again. For example, I can earn $3,000 weekly just by stuffing envelopes. On the other hand, why bother? For a mere $15, Psychic Moneymakers (beware cheap imitations) will burn a candle for me with a "sure fire millionaire spell." I can learn to master witchcraft for $25, but if I'm pressed for time, $5 will buy me a voodoo spell by Dr. Lamc.

I can also write away for a Mexican Divorce (are you paying attention, Honey?), a job in Australia, ordination to the priesthood, Mastercharge regardless of my present credit standing, a college degree with no study involved, or unusual (to say the least) items. There's also an intriguing little ad that says I can "Earn Big Money Writing" — surely not for the Mariner. (Wot? Ed.)

What about the diet, you say? Who cares. I'll use the money I get from Psychic Moneymakers to buy a bunch of spells from Dr. Lanc to make me thin. Following my divorce I shall take my Mastercard to Australia where I will open my church and make big money writing. Who needs a diet?

Lower interest rate a good sign, says Conway

Further drops in both the prime interest rate as well as the mortgage interest rate is good news for our area, said Congressional candidate Jack Conway.

The prime is now 15 percent, lowest in 21 months or since November, 1980. The mortgage interest rate is now 15½ to 15¾ percent which is the lowest since December 28, 1980.

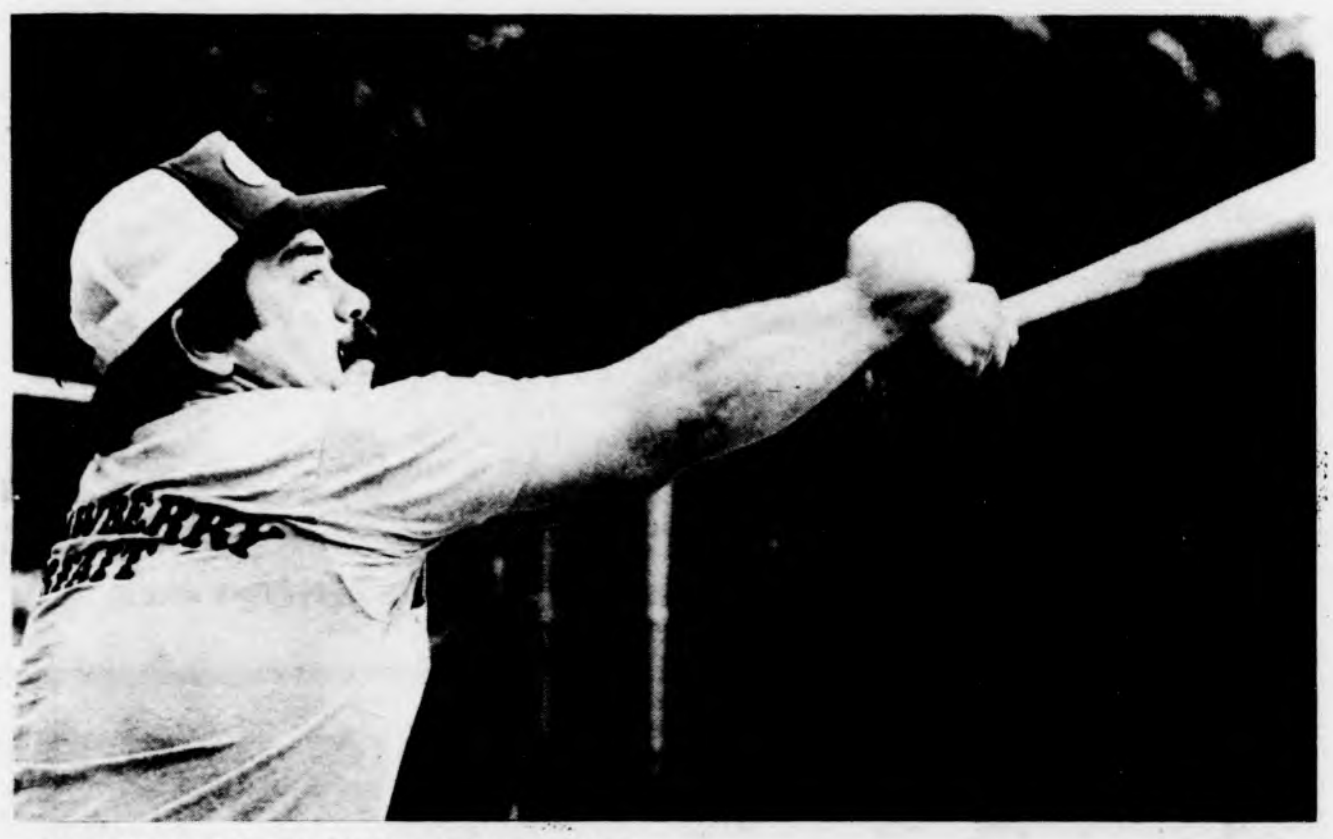
For home buyers it means average annual interest cost will mean about $1000 a year savings on interest against the percentage six weeks ago and this means that the average working family needs about $4000 less income in order to qualify for a moderate home mortgage of about $45,000.

"Inflation has been holding course at about a 5.5 percent annualized rate down from 12.6 percent in the fall of 1980 so we are enjoying the first real drop in rates since Ronald Reagan was elected," said Conway, President of a Real Estate and Mortgage Banking Company.

REJECTS DOLE TAX PACKAGE

In another matter, Conway opposes the recently passed Senate tax bill.

Conway said conservative House members would be able to work to cut more waste from the federal budget before raising taxes.



He said, "We must work to see that spending cuts are made in the Administrative budgets of Federal programs. It is hard to believe we need one of every seven working people employed by the government. Cuts should not be made in services to people when the bureaucrats in Washington do not share the burden."

Here is a copy of a telegram to President Reagan about his opposition to the Dole Tax Package.

"The people of Massachusetts are opposed to the recently passed tax bill. As a Congressional candidate it will be difficult to defend many sections of this legislation. The 10 percent withholding tax on earned interest is contrary to our efforts to encourage thrift.

"Please work with conservative members of the House to cut spending before we raise taxes."

Big swing...

New outdoor book return box at the Pratt

A new outdoor book return box appeared on the porch of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library this week, gift of the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

The library trustees asked the Friends for the box earlier this spring. Now that the library is closed two days a week, more people asked for such a facility.

Before the budget was cut due to Proposition 2½, the library was open seven days a week.

The trustees also are concerned about the problem of overdue books. The library staff reported that 3,200 overdue notices were mailed last year, and that several hundred loans are still outstanding.

The trustees hope the outdoor book box, open 24 hours a day, will help people return these loans. Staff has been directed to deny library service to anyone who has failed to respond to an overdue notice. Residents are urged to search their property for library books, magazines and records and put them in the book box.

The book box cost $925, and donations to the Friends are needed to replenish their treasury for other additions to the library.

On family — Aunt Tib had pretty gritty strength

By Lois Martin

What I really want to write about is family. But I'd need a three-volume starter set if I ever get going good about 'family.'

Haven't we laughed, though, over the years as we've heard tell about this aunt or that cousin, the things they used to do, the in-house family feuds and the incomparable family ties.

There is nothing more complex, more contrary, more confounding, nor more comforting, than one's family.

And I'm reminded of it afresh what with the company you've been having this summer, your people whom I've met. Someone in my family must have spread a rumor that I boarded up the bedrooms, cause nobody's been near. And I'm getting close to regretting that.

PATCHES

Over and over people say, as if to reassure themselves, "You can pick your friends, but you can't pick your family." Then you hear a soft soaps inspirational song like "He ain't heavy, he's my brother."

Well that used to be one of my favorites because I had only boys. Probably it made me cry because they used to fight all the time and I was heartbroken because not only did I believe they'd ever stop fighting I never dreamed they'd speak well of one another, let alone lug each other around. I was wrong.

Anyway, back to family and a few of my old fossils I want to dig out of my background. I've told you about Aunt Essie and Uncle Carroll, I nearly immortalized Aunt Milly, a favorite character, a woman ahead of her time, purebred individual, tough cookie, unique, bright, my kind of relative.

I don't believe I mentioned Tib, Aunt Tib . I can't for the life of me remember her proper name. She was really my great aunt, Gram's little sister, the youngest in her family. She was married to Bert. They had a big farm country lodging place in... you got it, Brooksville (South), Maine.

Bert raised about everything, including mink. They had a large main house and lots of interesting cottages that dotted the field down toward the water. When I think of Bert and Tib I think new mown hay, fresh vegetables and hot summer smells of all sorts.

I really didn't visit them much. Aunt Tib died when I was young and they were someone we visited as we could during the year, maybe three to five times.

Anyway Aunt Tib was in a wheelchair, always, forever.

I really believed she was born in one. But I guess it was arthritis that put her there early and finally. Bert would lift her around. She was little and stayed headquartered pretty much in that huge kitchen, by the table, across from the woodbox, near the window, where the parrot's cage was also in charge of the view.

That was Aunt Milly's parrot who outlived his mistress with a foul temper and tongue but an inside understanding of the Tapley family's seagoing heritage, which was enough to fill a number of strong rum bottles of folk lore that was founded in West (watch your directions when you talk Brooksville) Brooksville.

Tib wore a housedress and an apron. Not that she'd be up and about but she'd be peeling a lot. She and Hortense, who helped and lived down the road. I never saw anyone peel as much as Aunt Tib. That's what she did in my time and mind of before age seven. She sat in the chair and she peeled.

I had great regard for Aunt Tib. There was the talk as we drove away of her courage and that of Bert, added to his patience, the faithfulness of Hortense, who could be counted on to work as Aunt Tib peeled.

And I guess I naively overlooked some salt in drafting an image of Aunt Tib. I thought of her as, not mellow, but someone if not cowering in her chair, almost part of it, another wheel, one that peeled and did so in acceptance of her condition in that chair.

I was a fool or I was fooled.

For those littlest years of my life I stood by her as we reviewed how I'd grown and who I looked like (no decision) and who I acted like (Aunt Lote) and what I'd be and who made my pinafore dress (Aunt Ruth, of red dotted Swiss).

But I knew not of her knotty character, her spirit which outstripped the chair, her sassy hellfire determination to have her say in life if she couldn't have her way with it.

Oh, I should have known. She was Milly's sister.

My education was improved when I was about seven or eight, I guess.

Visiting with her on what must have been her off day, when her guard was down because her health was and pain was up.

It was the lovely summer day all right and there were the vegetables to be peeled and I sat by as the old clock ticked away one of the visits. I watched what I viewed as a dear little old lady, who sat humbled and imprisoned by pain and a chair. Her white hair cut shorter than her sister's pug would be if it were let out. Tib's hands gnarled in her lap as she leaned forward and looked down the driveway to see an unfamiliar car headed up.

"!$?)&[$□%!!, Bert," said my dear little old aunt from her wheel chair. "Who's that coming up the drive?"

Well, I've never got over it. I sat there stunned, said nothing (as if there were no limit to miracles) and felt I'd just been let in on a family secret. Aunt Tib swore better than anyone I'd heard.

Aunt Tib may have been crippled by arthritis. She may have had to live a life of being lugged and had little that would generate enthusiasm about getting going in the morning.

But she was a woman who lived a lot of years in that chair and survived because of some pretty gritty strength. Aunt Tib, I wish I'd known you better. You and Milly were sisters indeed. One just peeled more than the other.

By Joan Pinkham

When the John Winslows and other Pilgrim families left Plymouth in search of forage for their cattle, they found Marshfield's salt marshes ideal. That being way back when, in 1632, the members of the First Congregational Church, established 350 years ago, have cause to celebrate. One of many ways they have chosen to do so in their year-long observance is publication of a fine cookbook. Committee members write in their introduction: "It is our hope that at least one copy will survive so that those who plan for the 400th anniversary will know what we liked to eat in the 80's." With that in mind, Chairman Nancy Bennett and her committee consisting of Barbara Graham, Barbara Stetson, Margie Wiggins, Elsie Wood and Helen Burgess, offer a wide variety of recipes, many of them traditional New England such as clam chowder, baked beans, onion custard, gingerbread, tapioca pudding and the rhubarb jam, always a sell-out at the annual church fair. Here is Jeanne Sinnott's recipe for

TOMATO PIE

2 c. flour
1 tsp. salt
2 or 3 tsp. baking powder
3 T shortening
2/3 c. milk

Mix together and roll out for 10'' pie plate (I use glass). Slice and peel large tomatoes thickly and arrange in pie plate. Mix together:
1 c. mayonnaise
1 c. grated cheddar cheese
1/2 tsp. basil leaves
1/2 tsp. chives

Pour on top and bake for 35 min. at 400 degrees. Let set for 10 min. before serving. Serves 6 to 8.

Readers have been known to ask whether or not I get tired of grinding out this column week after week. I'm quick to point out the pleasures it generates in the way of little bonuses such as invitations to try out a new restaurant and getting to know clever, lovely gals behind such successful enterprises as our "Serendipity." Hearing from readers who are absorbed in the many facets of cooking is a never-ending source of delight, as are these cookbooks offered as gifts, asking only to be reviewed. This latest project took four months to prepare once members and friends of the Marshfield church had donated their favorite recipes. Then came the job of typing, pulling out duplicates, collating and proof reading — not easy when you have three hundred recipes to assemble for publication. Careful though they were, the committee points out one little error on page 65 in Barbara Dam's Christmas Stollen where "2 c. flour" should read: "approximately 7 c. flour." Elsie Wood's grandmother is the one to thank for her recipe for

BUTTER KUCHEN

1 c. sugar
1/4 lb. margarine
1 egg
2 c. milk
3 c. flour
6 tsp. baking powder
Dash of salt
1 tsp. almond or lemon flavoring
1 c. raisins

Topping: 1/4 lb. margarine, 3/4 c. flour, 3/4 c. sugar and 1 tsp. cinnamon. Put 1/2 batter in large pan. Add 1/2 c. topping. Cover with rest of batter, then rest of topping. Bake at 350 degrees about 30 min.

Nancy Bennett's husband might well wonder if he isn't caught in a trap — when he isn't eating his wife's good cooking, he's putting up new shelves for her collection of cookbooks which numbers close to three hundred, now almost as many as her mother has. Now her newly married daughter is following in their footsteps, starting her own collection. Give Nancy a call at 834-4168 if you wish to add this cookbook to yours. Copies may also be purchased after Sunday church services, at the Ocean St. church office Thursday and Fridays from 9 to 12 noon, or the upcoming anniversary dinner. Meanwhile, here is Ginny Hart's suggestion for

THOSE WHO PREFER ROAST BEEF PINK

Set oven at 500 degrees. Roast for 5 min. per pound. Shut off oven and leave for 2 hours. DO NOT OPEN OVEN DOOR FOR ANY REASON. Result: Pink, juicy roast beef!

LIGHTHOUSE RESTAURANT

Romantic Refuge

Fay's Gourmet 2 Water St., Hull (925-9899).

Irma Fay runs this tiny Hull restaurant like a private fiefdom, doing all her own cooking, baking, meat cutting, and even prep work. Her zucchini bread, rack of lamb with baby vegetables, and strawberry shortcake served with real buttermilk biscuits have made Fay's Gourmet one of the top dining establishments south of Boston. Desserts are flambeed with panache in the dining room, with its ship's bar and tables set with candles and imported china. "There's no microwave here, and what we can't get fresh, we don't serve," say the proprietors. Open Tues—Sat 7—10 p.m., Sun 5—10 p.m. Full bar; reservations accepted. AE,MC,V,$$

When Tennessee-born Irma Fay married her husband, Jerry, she got more than a spouse — she got a restaurant as well. Her husband planned to sell a tavern that had been in the family for decades, but Irma proposed to turn it into a year-round restaurant. Today, she is the proud proprietor of Hull's foremost dining establishment: Fay's Gourmet.

In a world of assembly-line kitchens, Irma remains true to the owner-chef concept of cooking, doing all her own prep work, meat cutting, baking, bread making, and line work, insisting that she "doesn't want other chefs cooking for her." She does allow her husband to run the front of the restaurant, with seating for 40 and tables set with imported china and tablecloths. A self-trained chef, Irma borrows "a little idea" from her mother, her sisters, and her aunts to create such inspirations as tomatoes cooked in champagne and fresh zucchini souffle. Whatever she serves, you can rest assured of its freshness. "We do our marketing first," says Irma. "Then we decide on our specials."

Thank You!

(The above write-up appeared in the July, 1982 issue of BOSTON Magazine as part of its Fourth Annual Edition of Where to Eat in the Greater Boston Area — a guide to the Best of Every Kind of Restaurant that you will ever want to find in and around the city, by the editors of BOSTON Magazine.)*

Yes, Thank You, to our many valued dining guests who made this recognition by such a prestigious publication as Boston Magazine possible.

We extend a cordial invitation to those who have not yet enjoyed the "dining experience" we offer to call us for dinner reservations at 925-9899.

Sincerely, Irma and Jerry Fay

Medi Mart to take over former A & P store

To open before Thanksgiving

By Donna Cogliano

Medi Mart is coming to Cohasset, and will occupy the former A&P Store in Cushing Plaza before Thanksgiving.

Joseph Quinn of Cushing Plaza management confirmed Friday that Medi Mart would be the new tenant of the vacant A&P. Cushing Plaza has negotiated a long-term lease of 30 years with the drug store chain.

On Friday, Medi Mart was to file for a building permit at the building inspector's office, said Quinn. After an anticipated $500,000 in renovations are completed, Medi Mart's objective is to open by Nov. 15, he said.

The drug store, owned by Stop & Shop, will occupy most of the A&P building taking up an area of 1,300 square feet. Cushing Plaza is negotiating with specialty food operators — possibly McDonalds — as the tenant for the remaining 500 square feet.

Medi Mart will include general merchandise as well as health and beauty aids. A wide variety items will be sold ranging from camp stoves to shampoo.

In choosing Medi Mart Quinn said, "We feel there is a service to provide in the Cohasset-Scituate area." Medi Mart would satisfy the market and needs of Cohasset, he said.

Roche Brothers and CVS among others were considered along with Medi Mart as new tenants for Cushing Plaza. With 26 tenants in the Plaza Quinn said, we're constantly trying to improve the quality of business in the Plaza. He spoke of Medi Mart, Johnny Appleseed's the 3A Medical Center, Cohasset Travel and the Family Counseling Service as significant improvements to the Plaza.

Since new ownership took over a year and a half ago, nearly $1.2 million has been set aside for renovations in the Plaza, Quinn said.

Two weeks ago, an auction was held at the old A&P building to clear leftover equipment materials. Workers were also seen that week clearing and sprucing up inside the old A&P.

School officials surprised

New drug policy draws media spotlight

School officials were stunned last week with the amount of media attention given their newly adopted drug and alcohol policy guide.

The guide was adopted unanimously last week by the school committee and is considered to be one of the few comprehensive school drug policies in the state.

Television and radio stations as well as newspapers and wire services spread the news of Cohasset's drug and alcohol policy guide. The school committee approved what was the fourth draft of the guide last week. The guide had been under review by students, parents and the school committee for more than a year.

School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet said the guide is sort of old news locally. Many townspeople had been following the progress of the guide during past months.

Both School Superintendent Eugene Crowell and Kornet were disturbed that one local daily newspaper described the guide as allowing students to be frisked by teachers and administrators. Both said the word "frisk" is not mentioned in any part of the guide. Administrators may search lockers or students if an incident arises, the guide states.

"We have no intentions of lining kids up and making a prison out of this place," said Crowell. And furthermore, he said, teachers will not be acting as policemen.

Crowell spoke of the recent media attention, "It hasn't done us a service but it keeps us on our toes, to make sure that the childrens' rights are protected."

The drug and alcohol guide is receiving a final proofing by town counsel this week. "Town Counsel will make sure we're not infringing on anyone's rights," Kornet said.

Crowell said only a few Massachusetts schools have policies similar to Cohasset's and maybe that's "because of the very attention we're getting."

This euphonious gentleman was in Cohasset last week and in his spare time played a little softball. Can you give us his name? (Answer on page 7)

Studds vs. Conway: a choice not an echo

By David A. Mittell, Jr.

In almost every way Jack Conway is, in Barry Goldwater's words, "a choice, not an echo" with respect to Gerry Studds.

Where Studds is intense and articulate, Conway is relaxed and outgoing. It is an oversimplification, but to some extent true, to say that the election for U.S. Congressman is a race between a gregarious Irishman and a reserved "W.A.S.P."

Studds, a Democrat, is being challenged by South Shore real estate ubiquitary Jack Conway, also of Cohasset, and a Republican.

The Mariner interviewed both men last week as each tried to compete with such persistent rivals as the weatherman, "Walk-man," "Pac-man," and Ralph Houk for a corner of the electorate's brain.

Following his defeat in 1970 in his first try for Congress, Studds undertook the study of Portuguese, an effort which probably helped get him elected in 1972. One doubts that Conway will bother to learn Portuguese, for he goes out of his way to scorn Studds' fondness for meeting his constituents in "libraries." ("Give me an auditorium!") But one feels that Conway could walk into an auditorium full of Cape Verdeans and "speak the language" without speaking the language.

The real difference, however, between Studds and Conway is not in style or personality, it is in substance. In three important areas they appear to be as different as they can be: economic policy, foreign, policy, and the role of a Congressman.

ECONOMIC POLICY

Jack Conway would like to like "Reagonomics." He believes that government spending and aggregate taxation are too high. He has first-hand knowledge of HUD and other government horror shows in which "for every lonely saint there are 19 'no-shows.'" Conway even goes along with the Federal Reserve's high interest rates, rates which have had a deleterious effect on his own industry.

Conway differs with President Reagan in two ways: First, while he supports the "overdue" modernization of the armed forces in a "carefully planned ten-year program," he believes the President's attempt to do the job in one quick shot is militarily, economically, and politically foolish.

Secondly, although Conway is sympathetic to the goals of Reaganomics, he does not believe in large budget deficits in peacetime. He says that he would balance the budget before any massive reduction in

Cohasset's week...

Bells wins again

Lowry Bell's Gammons Road tennis court can stay and the state's supreme court says so. Last week the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court refused to hear an appeal of a court decision in favor of Bell. The appeal was filed July 20 by Peter Mazza.

The Supreme Court's ruling reaffirms last month's Appeals Court decision in which the Superior Court determined it was okay for Bell to build a tennis court next to his Gammons Road home. Under the town bylaw, the court said the tennis court fence had to be set back only 15 feet from the road.

Bell told the Mariner last week he was relieved with the Supreme Court's refusal to hear the appeal. "I'm glad this is over with," he said.

School registration

The Cohasset Public Schools will hold registration for all new students entering the system from 9 a.m. to 12 noon daily from Aug. 23 to Aug. 31.

Residents are urged to phone for an appointment to assist administrators in making the registration as smooth as possible.

Call the Joseph Osgood School (Grades K-3), at 383-6117; the Deer Hill School (Grades 4-6), at 383-6115; or the High School Guidance (Grades 7-12) at 383-6102.

Secret ballots at TM

According to Moderator William Weeks, two warrant articles are being considered for a secret ballot at the special town meeting August 30.

Both the fire chief selection and proposed five-member board of selectmen may be put to a secret ballot vote. Town Accountant Bill Signorelli said that in his judgement, according to the town bylaw, the moderator can order a secret ballot if the advisory committee makes such a recommendation.

Last Thursday a former Hull Selectman Reno Constantinides spoke to the advisory committee regarding a five-member board of selectmen. Hull made the transition from a three-member board to a five-member board in 1975.

The committee went on record last week as opposed to expanding the list of fire chief finalists from three to eight.

The committee is scheduled to meet Tuesday, Aug. 24 to complete its recommendations for the special town meeting.

Other issues for voters on the 10-article warrant include: a $50,000 appropriation for high school auditorium repairs and brick work; establishing tow zones in town; and money for police negotiated contracts and for matrons.

The warrant was to be mailed to voters this week.

Pond Street condos

Developer Frederick Thayer moved one step closer last week to having his 39-unit condominium complex cleared by the board of health. Planning board approval becomes valid once the sewage treatment plans are approved by the health board.

The 100 Pond Street condominium development must meet the following health board requirements to win the approval it needs: an above-surface, open sandbed plant; bringing in additional soil to make the ground capable of accepting 11,160 gallons of effluent per day; chlorinating the water in the system; raising the sandbeds one foot on which the effluent will be distributed; and installation of observation wells on the sites.

The zoning board granted approval of the proposed condos in June.

Unemployment rates

Scituate and Cohasset's unemployment rates are on the rise.

After dipping to 6.1 and 3.2 percent respectively in March, the state Division of Employment Security has recorded Scituate at 7.4 percent in June and Cohasset at 3.9 percent.

Hingham's is recorded at 7 percent.

The national rate was 9.5 percent in July, according to U.S. Labor Department figures. Federal figures are a month ahead of the state calculations.

A year ago, Cohasset had a 2.8 percent unemployment rate during June and Scituate had a 5.4 percent unemployment rate.

Seven months ago, Scituate's unemployment rate was 5.4 percent.

Cushing Plaza...

The former Fayva Shoe Store is still vacant and Quinn doesn't have any negotiations in the works, he said. Cushing Plaza Pharmacy has moved to new quarters on Route 3A and another shoe store is gone as well.

But Quinn expects to have several new tenants for the Plaza in upcoming months.

Ballooned at the Log

William Ripley

☐William Ripley (former superintendent of Cohasset Schools) celebrated his 80th birthday at the Log last Thursday. Mariner photographer Gregg Derr had to rise and shine pretty early to catch the picture.

Bill was ballooned by an attractive lady who was wearing a tux, but Bill said it looked more like a Minnie Mouse suit. She also recited a poem. Bill's sister sent a card from California which was entitled "From one antique to another," and he was getting a lot of kisses from the ladies and a lot of handshakes from the gentlemen, all morning. Bob and Betty Ripley and kids provided a cake. "The kids will deal with the cake, later," Bill said.

Approved by Historic District Commission

A grey house for the Common

A white home located directly across from the Cohasset Common on North Main Street will soon turn to a shade of gray.

In what was described as a major decision, the Historic District Commission approved a color change last week for the home of John and Carol Martin.

The commission has allowed the Martins to repaint their 43 North Main St. home to grey with dark brown shutters. The board viewed the proposed colors Thursday and agreed they were lovely.

"I think the colors are very attractive. It is a very big change," said Commission Chairman Peter Wood, "Is it in keeping with the common?"

Some members of the commission said their decision would set precedent for other color change requests. But Wood maintained that the commission should review each application separtely. Member Tom Atkinson said, "The question here is whether to let others change from white." Wood said there were no color exclusions in the bylaw but that the color should be in keeping with the character of the Common.

The purpose of the town's Historic District Bylaw is to preserve and protect the distinctive architectural charcter of the Cohasset Common as a permanent legency.

The Historic District Commission was formed to oversee implementation of the bylaw, and duties of the commission include receiving and reviewing applications for exterior construction or alterations of any building within the Historic District. The bylaw was approved by 1978 town meeting. There are some 28 buildings in the Common District.

John Martin told the commission last week that he wanted to establish colors so he could proceed with a six-year project of restoring the exterior of his home. The paint on the white home with green trim is peeling and chipping reported Martin. "This house has really been in poor repair," he said. The last paint job was a spray painting job.

The home had not been white originally. "We're not pushing for the historical significance of the colors, Wood said, these colors are more pleasing tc Carol (Martin's wife). Historically gray is a colonial color while brown is from the Victorian period.

Former Commission member Noel Ripley said, he would like to see the Common remain white. He mentioned that the church used to be pea green and siad the Common looks a lot better with white buildings.

Commission member Walter Paulding said the town's bylaw was set up as a liberal bylaw and was not intended to restrict homes to the color white. "As long as the applicants were reasonable they would be allowed to change color," he said.

Member Charles Wheelwright said that the bylaw was possibly misinterpreted by the townspeople. The bylaw speaks of preserving character but how do you define character, he asked.

Commission member Betsy Stevenson urged the board to vote a decision Thursday at their meeting, "I felt the Martins have been held up a while...we're coming up to 60 days."

The commission voted 4-2 to permit the color change. Wood did not vote since the four "Yes" votes were already cast. Four votes were needed for approval. The fence will remain white.

A public hearing on the Martins color change request was held two weeks ago. Commission members postponed making a decision until Thursday so that more members could be present. Only five members were present at the hearing. Those in favor of the color change were: Wheelwright, Atkinson, Stevenson, and Paulding. Rowland Williams and Barbara Weisenfluh voted against the color change.

In other action Thursday evening the commission decided that a public hearing would not be necessary to review an application of a new Common resident. The Young family will be moving to the Common later this month and they have requested that a small white fence be permitted for their dog.

The public hearing has been waived and the commission must notify all abutters within the next 10 days.

School enrichment program should be expanded, parents say

By Jane Lane

Despite its success during the past three years, there are those who feel the enrichment program at the Deer Hill School should be rid of its "elitist" tag.

Some of the parents of children participating in the fifth and sixth grade program believe that the varied subjects offered to the intellectually-gifted students should be expanded to include the entire student population.

Some parents contend that courses in architecture, journalism and computers, are of interest to many young students, not just those deemed "extremely bright" by their educators.

One parent, Chartis Langmaid, whose son Jamie was a sixth grade student in the program last year, feels that the program should be expanded. If that objective cannot be achieved, Mrs. Langmaid suggests that "at minimal" the enrichment program should exist for the benefit of the entire school, not just the 40 or 50 participants.

Karin Bartow, whose daughter Felecia was involved in the program last year, agrees that most students could participate in the varied curriculum offered in this three year-old project.

"It was a wonderful experience for our daughter," Mrs. Bartow explains, "yet I am not convinced that the curriculum couldn't be presented in some school-wide manner."

Mrs. Bartow emphasized that she is not critical of the program, but offered the comment as indication of her interest in the educational project. She suggested, for example, that other students could help produce the school newspaper which could be directed and edited by enrichment students. She commended the fact that students outside the enrichment class participated in the Brocton Art Museum art/poetry program.

"I think highly of Mrs. Wondolowski. She offers the children a lot. She makes them think more imaginatively — but that is what all kids should do. I only wish she could share her program and curriculum with the other classes," she added.

According to Deer Hill principal Kenneth Ekberg, who was the impetus in the drive to organize some type of program for the gifted students, mini-courses such as journalism, architecture and editing, were among the most popular this past year.

The program was headed by Dorothy Wondolowski, who previously taught social studies at the high school. Mrs. Wondolowski was hired as a half-time instructor for the program which begins at noon two days per week. At that time the students are excused from regular classroom study and join this specialized class for "above average" achievers.

The goal of the program is to stimulate critical thinking, creativity and research abilities, Ekberg said. A series of mini-courses and selective subjects were included in this year's program.

Among the most popular, according to Ekberg, were the school newspaper project, the computer course and an art course in conjunction with the Brockton Art Museum.

Yet, both Mrs. Bartow and Mrs. Langmaid feel strongly that such offerings should be available to all students, not just an "elite" few.

"We are not dealing with your fantastically-gifted musician or artist. There are no genius' in this group, although they are very bright," Mrs. Langmaid said. "I think it would be in the best interest of the program to make it more relevent to all students. If the program does not benefit all students, you are going to alienate the other "less bright' kids, or perhaps the other kids in the enrichment program will hold back. If more children benefited from the program, there would be more support for it."

Mrs. Langmaid, whose son was a sixth grade participant in the program last year, noted there was little support for the program from other classroom instructors or the principal.

"Some enthusiasm, support and committment is required to make these young students take the program more seriously," she explained.

Mrs. Langmaid says that her 12 year-old son is extremely susceptible to "peer pressure." When outside extra work was required by the students, very often the work would not be completed. And if the other students did not pass in assignments, "my son would not be inclined to do so," she says.

Publishing one edition of a school newspaper "was like pulling teeth," Mrs. Langmaid explains.

"I think this was systematic of the problem this year," she says. "The children did not feel they had to do the assignments in order to stay in the program. To me, that indicates an attitude of 'see how much we can get away with,' which is normal for this age group."

Mrs. Langmaid maintains there was little positive feedback from his son's friends, teachers and administrators concerning the program.

"The kids leave the classroom and they come back and the teacher barely looks up to notice. It would be nice if once in a while they could ask the student what he had done, or require him to tell the class what he accomplished in the program. There are a few teachers who care, but they are the exception," Mrs. Langmaid says.

She maintains it is symptomatic of the community in general that little enthusiasm is garnered for an intellectual endeavor.

"With the amount of financial backing the program receives, I would have to say it has reached an extremely good number of kids. But I feel that some kids don't get what they could from it," she notes.

Currently the program receives $7690 in funding, $7000 of which is salary paid to Mrs. Wondolowski. Each winter, the program is among several which must be reviewed by the school committee for budget consideration.

Principal Ekberg feels strongly that it is a program which should continue, despite the budgetary constraints of Prop. 2½.

"I am a staunch advocate of developing programs for the gifted student," he says. "One could not argue the fact that there isn't a population in this school which is deserving of this program."

Ekberg said there are no immediate plans to expand the program, although he would like to see a fulltime instructor at some point, and inclusion of fourth graders.

"There are educational and financial considerations. But I hope the merits of this program will support that type of expansion," he adds.

Kathy St. Onge, whose daughter Heather participated for two years in the project, said she felt "privileged" that her daughter was selected. Yet, she concurs that the advantages of smaller classrooms, varied curriculum and "on-hands instruction" should be made available to all students.

"I thought the program was wonderfful. Heather thoroughly enjoyed it. Once during a study of solar heating, for example, Heather toured a solar home under construction in Scituate. She learned the why's and how's of solar heating much more than she would have retained if she had just read something about it," Mrs. St. Onge explains.

"Yet, I think it's just a fact of life. The kids at the top are looked after and the special needs children are taken care of. But the child in the middle often gets left out," she adds.

Not so, argues principal Ekberg. At the Deer Hill School there are numerous programs designed for the "average achiever" in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades, he says.

Ekberg explains that at Deer Hill, the "average achiever" is in fact a very high achiever who scores well on all standardized testing. And for this majority of the school population, courses such as the Poet-in-Residence, instrumental and choral music, an outdoor education program, an Artist-Of-The-Month and field trips are offered.

"There is also a great deal happening for the average kids," he concludes.

Studds vs. Conway: a choice not an echo...

taxes.

Gerry Studds, on the other hand, has no mixed feelings about Reaganomics. He thinks it stinks. He thinks Arthur Laffer (the intellectual godfather of Reaganomics) should be spelled "laugher," not Laffer.

To Studds it is quite simple: There has been no "reduction in government spending." There has been, rather, a massive transfer of spending from the domestic sector to the military sector, and a massive increase in military spending over and above what has been taken out of the domestic sector.

"The effect of this on interest rates, on the economy, on education, and on the poorest members of society was absolutely predictable and preventable," Studds says, It is a disaster!"

The two candidates' differences on economic policy would probably be greater than they are if Conway did not feel bound to oppose the budget deficits, a position which to some extent temporarily aligns him with Studds.

Conway is at heart a tax-cutter, a government-limiter, and a believer in free enterprise as the only true generator of prosperity. Studds, although he plays some lip service to the above, is at heart a man who believes government belongs in the marketplace in order to protect the weak from the strong.

FOREIGN POLICY

The two men probably differ on foreign policy even more than they do on economic policy. Conway believes Studds is part of a generation of protestors that Conway thinks grew too fond of radicalism and too used to taking "the other side than the American side."

He saves his strongest scorn to describe Studds' support of the Sandinista government in Nicaragua and his concomitant opposition to the established government in El Salvador. Conway says he understands that the former Samoza regime in Nicaragua was not a good government, "...but the Sandinista government is worse, and I think there's a real threat of Marxist subversion in Central America. Congressman Studds, who supported North Vietnam against South Vietnam, can't understand this."

"Nonsense!" says Studds. "Of course I don't favor Marxist governments. The question is how best to avoid bringing about Marxist governments, and I have believed Reagan's policies would bring about precisely what he has stated he wants to avoid."

"Studds may have been the right man in 1972," says Conway, "but I'm the right man in 1982. I'm pro-flag, pro-military, and I'll support the president's position whenever possible. Studds opposes the president's position and asks questions later."

THE ROLE OF A CONGRESSMAN

As he travels around the district, Conway's opening thrust is usually an exhortation to elect a Congressman who will be more concerned with the well-being of his constituents than with the subtleties of national and international politics. He accuses Studds of neglecting his district in the pursuit of grandiose preoccupations.

Conway speaks of residents of the district who have described futile calls to their Congressman about what to them are significant issues. "The other day it was about a toxic waste dump in Plymouth...three times they said they called Studds without an answer."

Studds maintains that calls are answered and points to "over 650 public meetings with constituents" since he took office. He alludes to his remarks about the cruelties of Reaganomics and says, "Take any constituent. What could possibly be of more immediate concern to him than national policies that leave him unemployed, his children denied access to education, or than international policies that leave him and his family threatened with being annihilated by nuclear war?"

Accordingly, Studds refuses to be drawn into comments on what he sees as issues requiring the attention of local or state officials. Whereas Conway commits himself to such projects as the completion of Route 44 between Middleborough and Plymouth, and the relocation of Route 228 "around the edge" of Wompatuck State Park in Hingham, Studds declines comment.

"It's not that those issues aren't important, or that I wouldn't get involved if someone called," he says. "It is that I have a job here in Washington, and for me to gratuitously comment on someone else's responsibility would be to neglect my own."

That is not Conway's attitude. To Conway the immediate concerns of his would-be constituents should come first and national and international issues, while demanding his attention, ought to come second. As he moves around the district he will hammer away at what he believes is Studds' inaccessability and grandiosity.

To which Studds says, "I recall that Bill Weeks campaigned that way..." and pausing with the timing of a comedian, rejoins, "...once!"

Once or not, this is an interesting campaign between two honorable men who differ profoundly or nearly all the issues of the day.

☐Bruce Edmonds of 76 Pond St. is in San Antonio, Texas for a reunion with his three daughters and six grandchildren: Bonnie Ritter of San Antonio, Sheila Long of Carson City, Nevada, and Joan Lawrence of Golden, Colorado. From there he will go to Golden, Colorado, for some fishing with his son-in-law, Paul Lawrence, who is the son of Leonard and Adele Lawrence of 18 Spring St., Cohasset.

☐Lovely beach days...Sunday was a perfect one, beach expert Jack Doherty assured me.

☐Many of us are preparing for that one last trip before school starts, during which time we will be visiting parents, friends, old school chums.

☐Andrea Davis (Mrs. Lenny) and her daughter Carol plan to visit daughter/sister Katie Clapp in Hawaii for two weeks this month, and then it's on to California to visit daughter Monica "Lee" Lee and Gary Lee and grandson.

☐Karin, Felecia and Christopher Bartow are back from a grand tour (2,600 miles) to Michigan. They visited Karin's sister Elsa and her family. Part of the time the Bartows camped out in West Branch, Michigan on the Rifle River, where they found fossil stones.

According to Karin, the Sleeping Bear Dunes on Lake Michigan, are a sight to behold. The glacier-formed sand dunes are 850 feet above sea level, and Karin and her kids climbed them, wouldn't you just know it.

☐Beth Goff is going stir-crazy. Convalescing from a recent hospital stay, she needs interesting books to read, good magazines, perhaps an outing for ice cream. Call before you drop in. She offered the information that there are now 60 houses for sale in Cohasset, as opposed to March when there were 27 for sale.

☐A certain town government board has given Clark Chatterton a new nickname: "Rocky II."

☐Observed Doris Golden giving the Cohasset Post Office a difficult time last week. If you have a post office box, only mail with your box number on it can reach you. Any mail addressed to you without your box number is returned. Doris says this is a real hardship...people who try to reach her through her telephone address aren't having any luck. Why the post office must do this is complicated. Have always thought the post office and telephone company should work together a little more. Although I am assured we have the best "mail" system in the world. Pitney Bowes is presently working on a computer system for our mail.

☐From Laurine Hoy comes the news that Jonathan Joy will marry Lynn Lewandowski of East Hampton, Mass. on September 11. Both Jonathan and Lynn are recent graduates of U. Mass. Jonathan is working as a management trainee at the Marriott Hotel Corp., and Lynn's major was research.

☐Jordan Hoy has enlisted in the U.S. Army and will be going to boot camp in Oklahoma on Aug. 26. He will miss the wedding, but it can't be helped. Once you've signed on you belong to them (the Army).

☐When I checked in with Helen Ketchum she was posing as an artists' model for her son, Scott. Was she dressed, I asked. "Yes, in klutzy clothes." Inbetween modeling she's writing a novel of the Ante-Bellum South. "It's serious and long. No, I have no idea when it will be done."

☐Got a glimpse of former U.S. Naval Lieutenant and present Cohasset Patrolman Robert Jackson guiding the "Vivian Frances" into port under the watchful guidance of his father-in-law, Earl Higgins...who was a second class B-M2 in World War II. Seems Earl doesn't have much faith in Bob's ability to handle the V.F. by himself. Maybe next summer, Bob.

Everything sweet is not for sale. Jessica and Sarah Eaton-Bruce share a tender moment at the Strawberry Parfait. (Derr photo)

☐Joe and Jeane Hogan (Joe is the son of Elizabeth Hogan of Cohasset; Jeanne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Anderson of Cohasset) became the parents of a new son from Korea just last week. Michael Hogan is one year-old and, according to his sister, he smiles a lot.

The Hogans are moving from Baltimore to Wyoming, where Joe will be taking on a professorship at the University of Wyoming. They will be visiting in Cohasset before they start their long trek West.

The flat tire ruined dinner...

Super Mom

By Patricia Desmond

The world was in an evil mood.

Super Mom knew the world was feeling vile that particular day because every time she thought about her children, she sneezed. She knew in her mind of mind's that that meant things weren't going well for the country — and that must mean things weren't going well for the world.

So there she was on a day of grey clouds and dim forebodings, moving along Route 3, heading for an appointment with a fast food chain.

Mit, the three-and-a-half-year-old, was safely buckled into his seat belt. And July, the Elder, was busy pouting in the back seat. She wanted Chinese food or tacos — none of this chicken o'niblets for her.

The whole time she sped along the roadway, she cursed the members of the appeals board who had decided her town wasn't capable of digesting a fast food chain. She hoped their grandchildren and their grandchildren's grandchildren would refuse to eat Thanksgiving dinner in a community that was so unAmerican.

After all, what's more American than a Big Mic, she thought as the motor raced toward supper.

That's when it happened. Right after she put the curse on them. Her right rear tire exploded with a baldness she found jerking.

"I want fries and a book and a coke and cookies," Mit intoned, not realizing he was leaving out some important part of the order.

"Be quiet," she yelled, trying to pull the car out of the direction it chose by itself.

"I don't see why he gets to pick where we go," July fussed.

"Shut up," her voice seemed louder.

"Shut up is a bad word," Mit reproached.

EEEEeeeeiiiieeee," she put the last thought in. She realized right away her mistake had been cursing the appeals board — negativity is its own reward.

Knowing how she had brought on her flat tire didn't help. The next exit was only a few hundred yards away.

Cars screeched by. But at least she and the children were tucked safely into the breakdown lane.

Just then in the distance she could see a car moving fast through her rear view mirror. It too was in the breakdown lane, passing slower moving cars that hugged the fast lane.

"Let's go to the Big Mic," Mit said, realizing they stopped ahead of schedule.

July knew enough to be quiet.

Super Mom leaned over toward Mit. If the car hit she would at least cushion him. It moved into the next lane with several inches to spare.

Somehow she knew she should not attempt to change the flat there. She remembered a friend warning her never to ride on a flat tire.

"You would be unable to control the car and worse, you's destroy the wheel rim," her very mechanical friend explained long ago.

She had taken to that advice as a sacred trust heretofore.

But something deep inside told her the advice should be ignored this time.

Mit was still prattling. July was still quiet.

Super Mom took a deep breath — two deep breaths — three — arming herself for some further disaster.

She turned the key, clutch to the floor, putting the shift into first. Slowly she searched for the friction point, deep breathing all the while.

The car inched choppily ahead, another car followed in the breakdown lane, moving up fast.

She took her foot off the clutch with a smooth, worried motion. It chopped forward again, gaining jerky speed. The speedometer said 15.

July leaned forward, watching.

"Are we going to eat now," Mit asked.

"Can't you see we have problems," Judy said harshly.

"What problems," he queried.

"Bad problems," July explained fully.

The car behind slowed fast, veering out of the lane just before it might have made contact.

Super Mom's car headed down the exit ramp. Toward safety. Bump by bump it rolled down the hill.

At the bottom, she parked on a soft shoulder.

"Now you kids get out and stay over under the trees, away from the car while I try to fix it," she said trying to remember the last time she changed a flat.

"Oh, it's a flat tire," July said. "I knew something was wrong when you screamed."

"Take care of your brother," Super Mom didn't feel like discussing things. She opened the trunk. Inside was her totally deflated joke spare, developed by Detroit to make things more difficult for emerging women who buy American made compact cars.

She felt like crying as she looked over the still unused directions for the inflation device. But she carried on as best she could under the circumstances.

A half hour later, the can of air still waiting by the joke spare, the lugs still on but the rear jacked up, a young man stopped.

"Need some help," the lad asked.

"Yes, this is hopeless," Super Mom said pointing to the deflated spare and the air can. As far as she was concerned the factory could have kept both of them along with her sanity.

"Well, I'll see what I can do," he picked up the air and tried to stick it into the tire. It worked as well as a square wheel.

Fifteen minutes later, the lad, who was truly Sir Gallahad in disguise, drove the hungry family to the nearest gas station.

The moral of this story is: Detroit doesn't pick on women when it makes things that don't work.

And the answer is...

Tax trend

The recent distribution of the 1983 "cherry sheets" — the Commonwealth's little notices to communities as to what they can expect in the coming year in both state aid and state assessments — is worthy of a moment's pause.

The news is that Cohasset's receipts are up and its charges down by a combined total of $39,356.34. Such seeming good fare is not unheard of in an election year — nor is a whopping tax whammy in years directly following state elections. But we are optimistic that the good news in this year's cherry sheet figures represents a strong counter-trend to many years of constant escalation in the cost of government.

For one thing the state budget is in balance, and we therefore (probably) do not have to look forward to paying for this year's cherry sweetness with next year's tax hike — as has so often happened in the past.

More importantly, our statesmen at long last seem to have gotten the message that we the people want the cost of government curtailed. Former Governor Dukakis, who once said that the people of Massachusetts were "too smart" to pass Proposition 2½ is himself smart enough to be singing a different tune presently.

Gov. King, who fatuously promised a $500,000,000 "roll-back" in property taxes during the first year of his term, has replaced his then empty rhetoric with a rather solid commitment to tax limitation after his bumpy on-the-job training.

The Republican candidates for governor (regrettably almost forgotten) are mean-sounding tax-slashers — if not born so then born-again so. For the uninitiated their names are Card, Lakian, and Sears, and one of them could well end up governor in the wake of the Dukakis-King tag team match in the Democratic primary.

Small will be the relief taxpayers notice as a result of the new cherry sheets, and of other breaks such as Proposition 2½ and tax cuts at the Federal level. Their significance is that after a score of years when government's aggregate "take" from its citizens could be counted on to rise every single year, a real reversal has taken place. The real "relief" will be in the society of 20 years from now.

The way things were going homeowners would have been buying their houses in taxes every five to ten years. Neither our children nor we as senior citizens would have been able to afford homes under such circumstances.

The way things were going Massachusetts was losing its competitive edge (i.e. jobs) to other states, regions, and countries.

The way things were going waste and inefficiency in government were consuming government and were destroying the public's appetite even for the necessary and humane functions of government — public schools for instance.

The way things were going a smaller and smaller productive sector of society was supporting a larger and larger combined public sector and public assistance sector. When the latter two become a majority of society (as in Britain) any retrenchment in government becomes arduously difficult, if not impossible.

For these reasons more than for the modest good news in their contents, we are mighty glad for the 1983 cherry sheet figures.

A letter to the Advisors

Letters

Dear Mrs. Cotton and Committee Members:

Thank you so much for allowing us to present our rationale for a five-member board of selectmen last Thursday.

In all sincerity, petitioners view this article for the expansion of the board as evolution, not revolution.

We chose this particular time to submit the article because (1) another petitioner group had already called for the special town meeting; (2) we felt strongly that we wanted this article to influence the 1983 Town Elections; (3) we did not feel this particular bylaw amendment was such a drastic change in the structure of town government that it couldn't be considered by a Special Town Meeting.

In addition, we don't remember the Advisory Board bringing up this last point (point 3) when a group of petitioners asked for and received the support of the Advisory Board on an article asking for a reduction of the school committee from six to five members several years ago. The Advisory Board, in fact, recommended that change at a Special Town Meeting.

This government was set up on the theory that good government depends less upon good men than upon good laws. Government should not be unduly dependent on the ability of men to remain free of error, but it should concentrate rather on the surrounding structure that allows those officials to make better decisions.

We feel a board constructed of five men and women will be a better structure.

Thank you for your courtesies to Dr. Reno Constantinides, also. We particularly wished you to hear some of his thoughts, which mirror our own, on the subject of the Town of Hull's rationale for having expanded its own board of selectmen to five members. Even more importantly, we wanted you to hear, first-hand, some of the benefits the Town of Hull realized by that action:

(1) Over a seven-year period seven new faces appeared on the board of selectmen. This was felt to be politically healthy.

(2) Qualified candidates ran for the board; the first year the article was in effect approximately 10 candidates ran for two seats.

(3) Creative decisions were made; the MBTA subsidy as well as other subsidies were removed when the five-man board discovered private contractors could handle transportation more cheaply and more efficiently.

(4) Selectmen worked on improving licensing procedure, etc.

(5) Town-leased land and contracts were re-evaluated.

(6) Selectmen have many discretionary powers and special interest groups abound. The five-man board acted as a buffer to these groups.

(7) Priorities were set.

At your meeting last week, Dr. Constantinides said: "Things happen on a small board that you never find out about. It's a very convenient way of doing business," (convenient to special interest groups, private engineering firms).

He also pointed out that a larger board makes it difficult to make political appointments on a political basis. "There are certain standards of openess required of public live... a five-man board tends to promote openness."

If you remember, petitioners gave the example of Cohasset's own three-member Troika, a special appointing authority. The Troika's only function is to make appointments. Several years ago, in spite of having been warned many times, it was discovered that the Troika was not posting its meetings (not meeting in public) and in fact refused to deliberate on qualifications of individuals applying for appointed board in public. A member of the board of selectmen serves on the Troika.

When you asked petitioners last week what sparked this petition, we were at a loss for words. Certainly there have been catalysts.

As one of your members pointed out, Hull's problems are certainly not Cohasset's. But I would like to remind the Advisory Board that both Hull and Cohasset and thousands of other Massachusetts towns operate under the Massachusetts General Laws. And that with regard to the psychology of small groups, we all operate pretty much in the same manner...a few degrees above the level of gorillas.

Again, thank you for your time. Your questions were good ones.

Yours truly,
Tanna Kaperowicz

Former Hull selectman comments on 5 members

To the Editor:

May I respond to your editorial about expanding the Cohasset Board of Selectmen to five members. As a former selectman serving seven years on a 3 man board and five on a 5 man board, I can honestly say that the work was accomplished much faster on a 3 man board (and with less hours at meetings). The number of hours jumped from an average of 2 to 2½ hours to 5 to 8 hours per meeting.

Some members wanted plenty of publicity and never stopped talking. During my last year on the board, one selectman never stopped talking and kept repeating himself all night long. Decisions were constantly delayed.

Yes, with a 3 man board, we sometimes made fast decisions on normal matters but if proved to be incorrect, we then voted again.

With a 3 man board, the absenteeism was very slight. But I noticed that the absenteeism jumped with a 5 man board. Many times we only had three members present and one member, although not working, always came in late, delaying the meeting. Everyone thought the other persons were coming.

Decisions were delayed for weeks at a time with a five man board. The thought was to have the entire board vote and that took time (some had to go home and ask their wives).

Actually a 3-5-7-man board does not lessen the workload. What makes a board of selectmen function efficiently? Having an executive secretary who has been given the duties and powers to make ordinary decisions. More time is wasted at meetings hashing items that should have been resolved before the meeting.

If enough citizens are disgusted with the actions of any official, an election can resolve the situation.

The problem arises when a popular person has the ability to get enough votes to be re-elected time after time, it prevents some people from being elected. The next step is to enlargen the board and have a chance to also serve. Is that a real good reason for expansion?

Recently in Hull the voters twice turned down an article to expand the light board from 3 to 5 members. Why? They have seen that the 5 man board of selectmen has not been satisfactory and hasn't worked out as proclaimed by the voters in 1975.

A recent news story about a meeting of the Cohasset Advisory Committee which had a former selectman from Hull give his views as to why a 5 man board was better. How would he know? He only served on a 5 man board.

A great problem arises when one member believes that he knows everything and argues all night. Perhaps the Cohasset Advisory Committe should listen to some of the tapes of the selectmen's meetings in the past three years. They would then recommend to stay at a 3 man board.

Yes, that committee member was right that Hull was in a financial bind for many years. Without a treatment plant, Hull could not attract any large development. When the treatment plant was ready to be opened in 1978, Mother Nature was good to us by destroying the inside of the plant, delaying everything for three more years. Then certain officials fought every proposed development except a casino. These actions finally brought on that giant lawsuit against the town and eleven municipal officers.

Praise for Rotarians

To the Citizens of Cohasset:

As Superintendent of the Cohasset Schools, I would like to publicly thank the hard working and dedicated efforts of the Town's Rotarians for their continued support of the schools.

Under the able leadership of their President, Fred Johansen, the Club mounted a scholarship drive this year which provided some $9,000 of help to deserving seniors who are going on to college.

For a Club of under 50 members, this represents a

The origin of Cohasset Common

By David Wadsworth

In the mid-17th century, Cohasset was an unoccupied part of the town of Hingham. For some years, the farmers of the Hingham settlement had been coming to the deserted shores of Cohasset to harvest salt hay from tidal marshlands.

There had been talk among Hingham's landowners about dividing up Cohasset's vacant upland area and parcelling it out among themselves. Finally, in 1672, Hinghamites hired Lieutenant Joshua Fisher, Surveyor from Dedham, to survey and draw a map of the newly divided lands.

Each Hingham landowner was to receive a specified share of the Cohasset uplands. When Fisher drew his map, he left certain areas undivided and under common ownership of all Hingham residents.

Strips were left in several places for highways; the coastal marshlands remained undivided for harvesting of hay, and an area extending from present day Little Harbor to the Cove at Cohasset Harbor remained under common ownership. That undivided common land area shows clearly on Fisher's map and is labelled "The Plain." Of the undivided Common Lands, each Hingham resident (landowners only) held title to an undivided fractional share. In effect, the Common Land belonged to all the people.

Todays's Cohasset Town Common is the remaining part of the undivided lands shown on Fisher's 1672 map. Over a period of two subsequent centuries, parts of the Common Lands were encroached upon by local residents.

The area between today's Common and the edge of Cohasset Harbor was extensively encroached upon as Cohasseters continued to develop residential neighborhoods on public land. Finally, to sort the whole matter out, the Townspeople voted to convey the encroached land to the "sqatters," but prohibited further efforts to encroach. Thus the approximate boundaries of the modern Town Common took shape.

Among New England Town Commons, Cohasset's ranks as one of the best. Surrounded by tree-shaped walks and buildings of various architectural styles, the Common reflects Cohasset's growth as a New England coastal village. Here one can find early houses of Federal or Georgean style juxtaposed with 19th century Greek Revival design, and even a high-Victorian mansion. The First Parish Meeting House, dating from 1747, is one of the most photographed of early New England Churches.

The Common itself serves as a community facility; a site for impromptu athletics, a place for a quiet walk, an art show, a village festival, and an amphitheater for a summer afternoon's carillon concert.

Like Boston's Common, Cohasset's is owned by the townspeople under rights of an ancient law, and it exists for all of us to enjoy. Of the rows of white houses surrounding the Common, they were not all white in the past. It is common knowledge that early New Englanders painted their dwellings with many varied colors, some of them decidedly brighter than the subdued "Colonial" shades now found on commercial paint examples. White was a color reserved for the wealthy; it was expensive and hard to obtain. Local paints utilized pigments readily available, and sometimes surprising results were obtained.

The white color of New England houses is a tradition, but a more recent tradition than many may think. Old photographs in the Cohasset Historical Society's archives show North Main Street at the Common lined with homes distinctly not painted white. One does get the impression that the early New Englanders were a more colorful breed of people than is sometimes realized.

But aside from the question of traditional paint colors, Cohasset's Town Common seems to be fulfilling its time-honored and historic purpose of being there for citizens to use and to take pleasure in. We are fortunate to have an old New England Common, unspoiled and visually delightful.

Our Common is the envy of many visitors from less fortunate towns and is an enhancement to the quality of life we have which makes Cohasset a unique community in which to live.

Of Pilgrims & Indians and housework

By Claire McDonough

Forget all the reasons you've ever heard for the King Philip Wars. It had nothing to do with broken promises, land rights, treaties or hunting grounds. Housework was where it was at.

Have you been to Plimoth Plantation? Did you see the overdressed Pilgrim women keeping a cookfire going all day in the August heat, working their gardens and tending their children with the sweat pouring down their faces? Did you notice their cramped quarters and the amount of time they spent sewing, preparing food and medicine and doing backbreaking chores?

Then did you wander over to the Wampanoag summer camp? Did you notice the nice, airy tents — with no fire unless someone was actually cooking something? Did you see the squaws sitting around on the grass decorating their belongings with porcupine quills? Did you speak to one of them? Did she tell you that she likes coming to the summer camp, because she just has to prepare the fish that the men catch, and otherwise once she's swept out the teepee she's pretty much free to swim, sing, and enjoy the nice cool woods?

Can't you just hear one of them saying to the other, "Say, Morning Rain, how come it took you so long to get down to the lake today?"

"It wasn't my idea, Running Fawn. Ever since Massasoit signed that treaty with the white-eyes, Big Bear's been coming back to the teepee with dumb ideas. This morning he wanted me to cook him cereal, eggs, and three kinds of meat, cornbread. As if that weren't enough, then he told me to wash the dishes. I told him we don't have any dishes and he said I should get some."

"I know what you mean. Falling Bull is just as bad. After he went to that party at Governor Bradford's house, he told me he was humiliated because his buckskins had ring around the fringe. Even Little Beaver has a bee in his war bonnet. He wants me to make him a hat like the Standish kids have. What's a mother to do?"

Morning Rain narrowed her eyes. "It's the cooking that bothers me. Big Bear thinks he's deprived if he doesn't get five kinds of dessert with every meal. Does he think I'm some kind of a Pilgrimette? The cleanup alone is formidable. Why can't he and the papooses just eat fish, succotash and berries like the Great Spirit intended?"

"If you aske me, it's going to take a few Indian Wars to straighten old White Eyes out. Why don't we tell the men that our very way of life is endangered if we don't drive the foreigners from our shores?"

"Gee, I kind of hate to go that far. Could we just talk it over?"

"Well, I'm reasonable. I'll give them one more chance. What do you say we have a powwow when the braves come back from that big shindig the Pilgrims invited them to. What did they call it?"

"I think they said it was called 'Thanksgiving.'"

Neither the superintendent's office nor school committee members had received any complaints on the guide as of last Friday. Kornet said the only phone calls she received were from the media. Crowell said, "I have not received one negative phone call."

He had received some supportive phone calls, and Kornet said an older woman was pleased with the new guide, "Good for you," she told the school committee chairman.

The guide was developed in response to a survey given townspeople.

The superintendent is planning to mail the guide out with materials from the principals Aug. 23. If the guide is not ready at that time it will be sent out at a later date, he said.

Coastal League nears end of season

Girls 15, 16, 17 years old

Coach Garth Nelson of Hanover finds his team is young and the competition stiff as his squad has built a 1-3-1 record.

However, his team did qualify for "Sportsfest" this weekend at UMass-Amherst, the forerunner to the Bay State Games in 1983.

All-star soccer teams from all over the state will compete in several sports. Nelson's teams qualified by winning three games over other county teams.

Nelson said his team consists of two good goalies in Deirdre Burke of Scituate and Sandy Washburn of Duxbury and excellent defenders in Donna Ring, Kim High and Julie Dodd, all of Duxbury.

Offensively, his team has been aided by leftwinger Sara Seavey of Cohasset, Doreen Mooney of Scituate, a center midfielder Debbie Sullivan of Scituate, a center forward-striker and Karen Loy of Plymouth.

After competing this weekend in Amherst, Nelson's team will conclude the summer season with a game against Greater Boston, Aug. 29, at 3:30 p.m. at the Hanover Jr. High.

Girls under 14 years old

Coach Sean O'Malley's team record is 2-3-1 after falling 5-3 to Middlesex County Sunday. Scoring for Scituate were Ellen Poirier of Scituate, Missy Gregory of Plymouth and Becky Morrison of Hanover, a three-goal hattrick.

O'Malley said his team has played better the last two games after losing to Essex County, 6-0. "Overall, we are doing pretty well. Players have started to get to know each other."

Sunday, O'Malley's team will play Essex at Hanover Jr. High at 6 p.m. and will face South Shore away at Bridgewater State at 6 p.m. Aug. 29.

Boys under 14 years old

For the third consecutive week, Scituate Selectman Constantine Constantinides' team has played to a tie. Sunday, a sound defensive game plan and several near misses caused a 0-0 tie with Norfolk County.

Six starters were missing from the Coastal League lineup.

"We had several attempts but couldn't penetrate. But our defense was superb. Everyone played well," said Constantinides. The team's record is 1-2-3.

CACG gives MGM casino film a bad review

By Beth Harling

The president of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., has given a critical review to an MGM-Grand financed film which was recently screened in Hull by the pro-casino group V.O.I.C.E.

Carol Oteri, of Hull, said, "I wish they'd show it in Scituate, Weymouth, Hingham and Cohasset. C.A.C.G.'s contributions would double when area residents found out what these people are up to.

"And what they are up to is giving the facts a Hollywood re-write and blaming all of Hull's problems on its neighbors. I heard that the film has won a prize. The category must have been 'Best Fiction'."

The anit-casino activist characterized those appearing in the production as "contradicting themselves at every turn." She cited their "wildly inflated estimates of expected revenues which would flow to the state from casinos." She said. "Somehow, those actors expect us to believe that the thundering herds of people spending those huge sums wouldn't even be noticed. Anyone living in the path of this human and vehicular avalanche would have a different view.

"Similarly, one bit player, in an effort to silence concerns about the impact of a casino on the town of Hull itself, kept a straight face as he announced that the Hall Estate is 'practically removed from the town of Hull.' That is exactly why neighboring towns have grounds for their opposition. What is more, one of the stars of the epic has stated publicly on more than one occasion that there is no guarantee that the Hall Estate would actually be the casino site or the MGM-Grand would actually be the operator. Hull residents who plan to remain here would hardly shout 'Bravo' if the casino site suddenly became not so removed from the town of Hull. And we can't forget the growing numbers of Hullonians who don't want a casino anywhere."

Oteri remarked, "Someone appearing in the film claimed that 'there are never any complaints from adjacent towns about the traffic in the summertime.' Where has he been? We all complain about it. Why make it hopelessly worse?"

She expressed particular amusement about the film's transportation claims. She said. "Their statement that there is no bus transportation to and from Hull is simply not true. And they are still trying to float the jetfoil as the answer to every objection about traffic. For obvious reasons, they have given up trying to name anywhere where it is actually in operation. Will they ever let that idea sink from its own weight instead of buoying it up with hot air? Boston Harbor is not a movie set."

On the subject of crime Oteri stated her disbelief of one cast member's theory that any casino operator is not going to come here and let crime take over." She pointed out that Attorney General Bellotti and U.S. Attorney for Massachusetts Weld actively oppose casinos on the grounds that they are breeding spots for uncontrollable crime.

Saying that she was "proud to live in Hull," Oteri complained that she was offended that the film is "just one more carefully edited representation of the 'Past Glory-Present Slum' theme expounded by proponents of casinos in Hull." She explained, "Care was taken to show many cropped closeups of pro-casino town officials, almost always obscuring their comfortable homes, some with private swimming pools. However, houses that remain damaged from the Blizzard were shown as examples of our surroundings.

"Why didn't they include shots of our attractive Kenberma shopping area? Any town would be proud of it. Hull has many neat and charming neighborhoods and people in this town are tired of the image that pro-casino forces constantly project. We have that comfortable, lived in look but we are hardly a slum."

Concluding her X-rating for the film Oteri said, "One thing I have to agree with them on is that if we had a casino we could put more policeman and fireman to work. We'd have to. We'd have more crime and more arson. The people of Hull are not 'extras' to be used for the coming attractions of casinos in every corner of this state. It is time to drop the final curtain on the world of make believe depicted by casino promoters."

Openings at Community Center nursery school

The Cohasset Community Center Nursery School has announced that a few openings are still available in their pre-kindergarten program for two mornings a week (Tuesday and Thursday).

Applications are available at the Community Center weekdays from 9 to 1, or by calling the director, Mrs. Sandra Putnam at 383-0036 or 545-3002.

The pre-kindergarten program focuses attention on the development of fine and gross motor skills and visual perception skills, as well as a balanced program of activities in art, music, language development and socialization.

Staff members at the Community Center are trained and experienced professionals in the field of Early Childhood Education.

Pre-kindergarteners will return in September to a freshly painted and refurbished facility! There will be a parent orientation night Thursday, Sept. 9 at 8 p.m., and parents will be invited to visit the classrooms at that time.

The Community Center Nursery School has been in operation since 1952. Children need not be Cohasset residents to attend the nursery school. For further information regarding the nursery school program, call the director at the above numbers, or Janice Batts at 383-0142.

Marriage

Crossen—Osbourne

Donna Osbourne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Osbourne of Margin Street, and Joseph Crossen, son of Mrs. Alba Crossen and the late Ralph Crossen, also of Cohasset, were married July 24 at the Second Congregational Church. The Rev. John Benbow performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by her niece, Kathleen Kelly of Palm Beach, Florida, and bridesmaids Dorothy Kelly, a niece also of Palm Beach, Jane Williams of Atlanta, Georgia, Carol Zyrkowsky of Saugus, and Lili Richmond of Cohasset. Pattyann Tolini, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl.

Attending the groom as best man was his brother, Ralph Crossen of Alexandria, Virginia, and Joseph Previte of Hull, John Lanata, Robert Coletti and John Richmond, all of Cohasset.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Bryant College and is a flight attendant for Eastern Air Lines. The groom is president of J. Crossen Sales, a real estate development and sales company.

A reception was held at the Barker Tavern and the couple will live in Cohasset following a wedding trip throughout Europe.

C.C.C. nursery to participate in screening program

Staff members of the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School will participate with the Cohasset Public Schools in a program designed to screen and remediate learning disorders of children at an early age. They will also screen for talented or gifted children.

Sandra Putnam, nursery school director, has been working directly with Stephen Hart, special needs coordinator for the Cohasset Public Schools, to obtain a federal grant for the implementation of the "Early Prevention of School Failure" program at the kindergarten and pre-kindergarten levels. They recently attended a workshop at the Andover headquarters of "The Network," a branch of the U.S. Office of Education Division of Replication National Diffusion Network.

The Early Prevention of School Failure (EPSF) Program is a nationally validated program which has been adopted by districts in 46 states and five foreign countries, and includes screening in the areas of language, auditory, visual, fine and gross motor functioning to identify the educational needs of individual students, and educational follow-through in the classroom based on the screening results.

Mrs. Putnam feels that the initiation of this innovative program will be "a real step forward in the cooperative efforts of both public and private early childhood educators to provide the very best programs we can for young children."

"Working together, we can offer continuity between the nursery school and kindergarten levels, giving young children a firm foundation in readiness. It is an exciting opportunity, and we look forward to participating in the EPSF program."

Teachers wishing further information may call Mrs. Putnam at 383-0036 or 545-3002.

Mirrors are highly versatile wall accessories that can seemingly double a room's dimensions. Today's high-quality mirrors are constructed by the "float glass" method. Molten glass is poured onto a pool of molten metal creating a perfectly smooth, flat surface. The back-side of the mirror is then sprayed with silver finish to provide a reflection. The silver backing is sealed with copper film. Lower quality mirrors sometimes show distortions in the surface of the glass. Check the thickness of a mirror as well. While a 3/16-inch thickness is fine for smaller mirrors, those that are larger than 34x36 inches should be made of at least 1/4-inch thick glass.
Mirrors are among the least expensive and most effective space stretching ideas. Mirror one wall of a room and immediately you have doubled its size. Do you need repairs on your mirror, screens? BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE is here when you want to talk and we know you'll like our prices. We're located at 763 Country Way in N.Scituate and our phone is545-3624. We're open Mon - Wed 8 - 6, Thurs & Fri 8 - 8:30, Sat 7 - 5 and welcome Master Card and Visa.
Decorating Tip:
Quality mirrors usually have beveled edges, the most desirable of which are curved and/or etched.

Business is rising at the Bread Shop

Business is booming at The Bread Shop. One week after opening day, the bakery can barely keep up with the customers' demand.

The shop's proprietor Sine Pounder of Atlantic Avenue is pleased with the initial success of her small business. On opening day there was a line of customers out the door of the shop. "We sold out by noon," she said.

Because the Bread Shop was sold out of goods at the end of the first three days, Pounder has increased the production rate of Cohasset's only bakery.

The Bread Shop is located on Elm Street beside the Cohasset Savings Bank. Pounder, a former school teacher, had never done any commercial baking until last week. "We're going to focus on the things we do well," she said. The Bread Shop produces specialty breads, and you won't find any hamburger rolls or cupcakes there.

Pounder arrives at The Bread Shop at five o'clock each morning to get breads oven-ready by seven o'clock. The shop opens at nine and closes at 5:30 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday.

The shop's best seller is the almond ring. Other breads include coffee rings, cinnamon breads and rolls, Portuguese bread, whole wheat honey rolls, swedish rye, cardomom bread, honey nut rolls and pretzels.

Pounder is planning special foods for the various holidays and she hopes to include a Portuguese sweet bread soon.

Besides her "helpful" children Evan, 16, and Kirsten, 13, she has four assistant cooks: Kathy Corbett, Jackie Plante, Nina Atikinson and Mark Murphy. Sine's husband Max who is an architect designed the layout of the shop.

Pounder's friends convinced her to seriously enter the bread business. "People were saying — your bread is good. Why don't you start your own business?" She said she consulted several experts for advice before making the final decision.

When the Mariner visited the Bread Shop Friday, one woman approached Pounder saying, "Is this your store? It's wonderful. It's a lovely place."

from the kitchen

By Bucky Yardume
Guest Chef

Joan Pinkham, who gleans gustatorial gems for this corner as The Mariner's food editor, is on respite from the 'hot stove' league. Without presuming to intrude on the turf of an expert, but in the spirit of camraderie and to let the 'cook' out of the kitchen, here are a few suggestions and observations til Joan's return to the galley.

SHISH KEBAB

This time of year, folks broil everything and anything — hot dogs, burgers, steaks, chicken, ribs, fish. Shish kebab, the favorite of Near Eastern peoples, involves lamb. That isn't to say you can't broil steak kebabs. But the legit fare is lamb. Shish means skewer, kebab, roast, and shish kebab dates to days when native hunters brought home the 'bacon,' hacked it into hunks, stuck them on their swords and roasted the meat over open fires. Since those primitive days, the art has been refined. The lamb is seasoned in sherry, onion and oregano, preferably marinated overnight, with or without garlic, as you prefer. The real key, though, is to skin the lamb leg free of all fat. ALL! Ingredients:

1 leg lamb (5-6 lbs.)
1/2 lb. onions
1 T salt
1/2 tsp. pepper
1/3 cup sherry
2 T oil
1 tsp. oregano
(garlic if desired)

After removing all fat and gristle, bone the leg and cut into 1 inch squares. Again skin off remaining fat and gristle. Mix meat with sliced onions, seasonings and other ingredients and let marinate in the refrigerator overnight. Skewer and broil til crispy on all sides.

There are two schools of thought on the dish. One, the most common, is to skewer alternately with the meat, tomatoes, peppers, onion slices and mushrooms and broil the combination to add juices and flavor form the vegetables. The other is to skewer and broil the vegetables separately because they cook much faster so if cooked skewered with the meat they wind up burned to a crisp and taste more like the charcoal than vegetables. That's compounded because lamb should be well done.

THE VERSATILE HOT DOG

Folks prepare hot dogs in about 'any way imaginable — broiled, grilled, roasted, fried. Now they even come with cheese built in. There also are pigs in a blanket — dogs wrapped in bacon. Some even like 'em boiled or steamed. Yuk! However, to each his own. There are those, of course, who won't touch them because of the preservatives.

YOGHURT, A.K.A. MADZOON

Manufacturers probably won't appreciate it, but you can do it yourself, make your own madzoon or yoghurt. Incidentally, there was a bitter law suit over the copyright name — madzoon vs. yoghurt — a lot of years ago. Madzoon is Armenian, yoghurt Turkish. Other Near Eastern people call it khoumis or laban. All credit it with longevity, freedom from aches and pains, even virility, which is asking a lot of anything.

To make your own you need some madzoon or yoghurt for openers. When mixed with milk, bacteria grow and multiply, souring the milk, acting like yeast.

To prepare, boil 1 quart of milk til it's ready to spill over the pan. Cool to lukewarm. Put a tablespoon of madzoon/yoghurt in some of the warm milk. When dissolved, pour into the rest of the warm milk. Mix and pour into cups to set. Use crockery or glass containers, not metal. Cover in heavy towel to retain heat and keep in a warm place. In 8 hours it's ready. Remove toweling and refrigerate. It will keep 3 days. Keep some of the starter for the next batch. Without question, it's easier to buy it prepared in the market. But some prefer anything homemade. The markets really don't have much to worry about.

CULINARY CUTUPS

Just about every race has its own version of bread. Armenians are no exception and have several varieties. One is Lavash — a very thin, circular bread that looks like a giant matzah, around 30 inches across. Like everybody, they also like egg salad, and one way to prepare an egg salad sandwich was to wet the lavash to make it flexible, roll it around the egg salad and let the kids brown bag it to school. In California, some of the other kids upon seeing the youngsters munching on the rolled 'sandwiches' observed, "Hey, look! They're eating their napkins."

'Yankee' features Garden Club cookbook

Yankee Magazine's "Cookbook of the Month," for the August 1982 issue is "Cohasset Entertains," published by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset.

Mrs. William Haynes is president of the club and Mrs. Phillip Shockman is vice president and both are understandably pleased with the selection.

Here is what the magazine had to say about the cookbook and Cohasset.

"'Cohasset Entertains' is published by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, a lovely old town on the coast south of Boston.

All the wonderful seafood recipes you'd expect are in the 200-page book, including old favorites like Lobster Stew and South Shore Fish Chowder and such main-course specialities as Crabmeat Pie and Shrimp Casserole (both of which are not only delicious but can be prepared ahead of time.) The book is divided into five sections: four cover the changing seasons of the year, with appropriate menu suggestions and seasonal favorites; and the fifth section is an imaginative selection of recipes for gift foods, including much-sought recipes for chutneys, pates, cordials and fancy breads and candies. (Be sure to try the Cream Cheese Braids!)

All proceeds from sales of the cookbook are used to restore the gardens at the historic Lothrop House in Cohasset, plus other community beautification projects. To order a copy, send $8 plus $2 for postage and handling (state tax is included in the price) to 'Cohasset Entertains,' Community Garden Club of Cohasset, Box 502, Cohasset, MA 02025."

Fewer women are playing that game

By Lois Martin

It was the reenactment of one of the oldest games known to society. A classic, really. And in watching the scene from inside herself, with the unimpassioned interest of someone who won't be playing that anymore, she was made keenly aware that there are rules to the game, high points, a sense of timing and a denouement.

It was a summer afternoon on what was a busy but kind of a side street most of the year.

That changes when the crowd for Marshfield Fair starts to gather. Around the first of August the rides arrive and the horses are seen exercising in the small field on the Main Street side of the Fairgrounds.

PATCHES

With the horses and the rides come the people who must have been to a lot of fairs in their lives. They appear and are spotted as being fair people whether that's fair or not. They're used to being out in the weather. They may start and end the day in the old-fashioned kind of sleeveless undershirt and sometimes they wear the bandana around the head to keep some sweat above the brow.

And if I tell they're not always spoken of with high regard, you won't be surprised, nor will they. On the contrary, most of the fair people, those early arriving men, are seen and mentioned with disdain. They are the August visitors. They've seen some tough times and those show on them.

Last Thursday there were four or five of those men on the South River Street side of the fair, inside the gate, probably bringing in some piece or other of equipment.

They were unhurried. They had time to kill, bored moments to fill, and a woman was walking down the street.

In the game, timing is everything. Impact and pleasure. The impact is intended to be on her. The pleasure is to be theirs, to feel somehow and to have demonstrated real skill in setting her up, getting her goat or more, instilling intimidation. Real fear would be better. But to send her scurrying by is important.

They pretended not to notice her, the only thing on their bored horizon, until she was almost, not quite, outside earshot. Then they shuttled among themselves a comment about her as a start to the game, the first ball thrown so to speak, the kick off.

She historically works hard to pay them no notice. That has been her role, a simple one, let the color rise to her little cheeks, hasten her pace, furrow her brow in some degree of worry and get on by as soon as possible. Don't look at them. Don't seem to invite their comments.

They need no invitation. Their own pace of the contest quickens as she gets closer. Now within clear earshot they make open remarks, adding laughter to each one. Remember, the goal is two fold. Her misery is only part of it. The more important part for the men is to compete to be the largest, most powerful male among them, the quickest tongue, the one who can leer best and make her avert her eyes quickly if she looks that way. The winner is the one that gets the biggest reaction from her.

If she, for example, is unwilling to play the old rules and looks squarely at the lot of them for say 10 full brazen seconds, they won't meet her eyes. They'll look away. She isn't playing really the way she's supposed to.

As she is within five to 10 feet, on the sidewalk, they move toward the fence, saving their finest most successful remarks for then. They move together in one combined, unshaven, smutty swagger toward her. She then, according to rules, is to try to keep herself from running but look like it's all she'd like in the world if she didn't fear tripping and falling and somehow feeling a greater fool than they've created in those few moments.

The peak, you recognize, the crescendo comes within those five feet. She's on the sidewalk, not wanting to give in and walk in the road to give them more pleasure in their intimidation. Their taunts are at the height as is their laughter and as are their smiles.

The game is to end within perhaps 60 seconds of its beginning with her hastily retreating from their laughter. In this case a week or so ago, as the peak was approached a familiar man in a car offered the woman a ride to her office. She thanked him and got in but heard one of the team of opponents say, "She'll do anything to get away from us."

That did it. The prey suppressed an urge to say "You jerks. You have no power in this world save the chance to make someone afraid or embarrassed or miserable."

They can harm. They can cause fear. But they don't have the old power anymore. Fewer and fewer women are playing that game. They look straight in the eyes of the would-be intimidator. And when he looks away, today, she wins. Women just aren't averting their eyes like they used to.

Volunteers make the recreation programs go

By John Worley
Cohasset Recreation Director

This fall the Cohasset Recreation Department plans to offer a variety of programs for all aged residents. Some programs will be offered via the departmental budget, and others will be offered through the Revolving Account Fund on a 100 percent participant supported basis.

The Fiscal Year's Recreation Budget, (Fiscal Year 1983), totals only $34,181. This money not only includes the director's salary, but all monies needed for repair maintainence, purchasing, administrative costs, utility costs, as well as salary money to conduct programs for a 12 month period. Hence, one can readily see that funding of the department is extremely low.

Various alternative funding methods will be employed again, as they have in the past. Last Fiscal Year's budget was only $34,351 yet we were able to offer over 30 programs, many special events and activities.

Utilizing large numbers of volunteers to coach teams, referee games, or assist instructors is one method of supplementing budget expenditures. Last year many adults and youth volunteered their time in this regard. No pay, less than ideal working conditions, and lousy hours, (ie: weekends and evenings), did not face these people. Hopefully, the satisfaction of doing a job well and providing a service that could not otherwise be afforded was reward for their efforts. Certainly, the Recreation Commission, director, and program participants take their hats off to these people, as should the community-at-large.

The use of the Revolving Account Fund even with its limitation of $5,000 that can be revolved each fiscal year, compounded with the problem of not being able to pay salaries, (90-100 percent of the cost of most programs), from it or purchase equipment, still offers alternative measures in providing recreational programming.

Working closely with the Town Accountant has clearly defined areas of use of the fund and allowed for programs to be conducted on a 'Contracted Services' basis if specific instructors meet the guidelines of a professional provider of a specific service. Last year a number of adult programs of a specialized nature were conducted through this fund, as well as some children's programs.

From time to time the Recreation Department will register a program on a basis where participants pay the actual vendor directly. In this manner the Department acts as an organizer and co-ordinator only.

Last year, for example, the skating program held at Cohasset Winter Garden, for children and adults, was conducted in this manner. Essentially, we were able to provide, at no cost to the tax payer, both figure and hockey skating lessons, at a group rate price, to 245 residents.

The Recreation Department advertised, organized, and registered the program; however, fees were paid directly to the vendor. Other specialized programs such as the White Water Rafting Trips, ski weekends and day trips, and windsurfing lessons are conducted in the same manner affording us to add new dimensions to programming that otherwise would not be affordable for either the recreation department or many participants. A few special events, such as our annual magic show, are also conducted in this summer.

While all these alternative methods of conducting activities allows for more latitude and diversity in programming, the key element is still the volunteer who is willing to offer services and often expertice in a specific area. To top the talents of residents will remain a parmont goal; everyone has something to offer, usually a lot more than they think. To waste these talents through lack of involvement would be a shame.

There are currently a number of young people serving as volunteer aides to the summer playground staff. Their help, particularily with the four and five year-old groups, is tremendous. In return for their work, we hope that we will provide the volunteer with training in leadership and working with children. The greatest reward, however, is the satisfaction they will feel from working with, and helping others.

Our next need for volunteers will present itself during early September, as about 24 soccer coaches will be needed to handle the fall soccer league of about 280 youngsters. Jim Gallagher will be the volunteer program co-ordinator again this season. Let's keep up the good work!

Her zucchini bread, rack of lamb with baby vegetables, and strawberry shortcake served with real buttermilk biscuits have made Fay's Gourmet one of the top dining establishments south of Boston. Desserts are flambeed with panache in the dining room, with its ship's bar and tables set with candles and imported china. "There's no microwave here, and what we can't get fresh, we don't serve," say the proprietors. Open Tues—Sat 7—10 p.m., Sun 5—10 p.m. Full bar; reservations accepted. AE,MC,V,$$

When Tennessee-born Irma Fay married her husband, Jerry, she got more than a spouse — she got a restaurant as well. Her husband planned to sell a tavern that had been in the family for decades, but Irma proposed to turn it into a year-round restaurant. Today, she is the proud proprietor of Hull's foremost dining establishment: Fay's Gourmet.

In a world of assembly-line kitchens, Irma remains true to the owner-chef concept of cooking, doing all her own prep work, meat cutting, baking, bread making, and line work, insisting that she "doesn't want other chefs cooking for her." She does allow her husband to run the front of the restaurant, with seating for 40 and tables set with imported china and tablecloths. A self-trained chef, Irma borrows "a little idea" from her mother, her sisters, and her aunts to create such inspirations as tomatoes cooked in champagne and fresh zucchini souffle. Whatever she serves, you can rest assured of its freshness. "We do our marketing first," says Irma. "Then we decide on our specials."

Thank You!

(The above write-up appeared in the July, 1982 issue of BOSTON Magazine as part of its Fourth Annual Edition of Where to Eat in the Greater Boston Area — a guide to the Best of Every Kind of Restaurant that you will ever want to find in and around the city, by the editors of BOSTON Magazine.)

Yes, Thank You, to our many valued dining guests who made this recognition by such a prestigious publication as Boston Magazine possible.

We extend a cordial invitation to those who have not yet enjoyed the "dining experience" we offer to call us for dinner reservations at 925-9899.

Sincerely, Irma and Jerry Fay

A new life for Sam the goat

By Marlisa Clapp

I have been in 4-H since I was five years of age. We've had pet goats since I was three. At nine I was old enough to show goats at fairs. At this time I got my very own Saanen, pure white, goat named Samantha.

I loved Sam very much. She was a good friend to me. But when I became allergic to goats, it meant Sam would have to go.

Loving Sam so much made me very sad to part with her. While trying to find a home for Sam we thought about the Heifer Project. Heifer Project International helps people that need food. They don't give people food, but instead give animals and teach them how to get their own food.

Dan West, an Indian farmer, started Heifer Project to help poor people get better food.

In the 1930's Dan volunteered as a relief worker during the Spanish Civil War. He gave powdered milk to hungry families. Soon the supplies were gone and people's pride was hurt by having to rely on handouts.

"Why not give a living heifer instead," West said. "Give people the means to help themselves, and to help their neighbors as well as by sharing the offspring of the heifer."

In 1944 eighteen heifers were sent to needy families making Dan's dream come true. The Heifer Project is more than just dairy heifers. It sends dairy goats, sheep, hogs, beef cattle, and poultry as well as honey bees and sometimes draft animals.

The animals go to Africa, Asia, the Carribean, Latin America, and Ireland. Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Georgia, Kentucky, Maine, North Dakota, Tennessee, and West Virginia are states which get heifer gifts. Animals go to the states usually without training people's assistance, but when they go to Africa etc. usually people go with them to teach the people how to milk and feed the animals properly. To make sure all animals are healthy vets sometimes go to places where Heifer Projects are.

Sam went to Arkansas and may end up in Kansas. Though it was hard to part with Sam, I know she is helping people that are not as fortunate as you and I.

If you have any animals you need a new home for, please consider Heifer Project. They only take the kinds of animals mentioned in this story.

Donations can also help the Heifer Project. For example, fifty cents buys a day old chick, ten dollars buys a beginning flock, fifteen dollars buys a pair of rabbits which give one hundred pounds of meat and fur each year. The larger animals are used for milk and not for meat.

I think Heifer Project is terrific. For more information call Heifer Project at 1-746-7141 or write them at 16 Leyden St., Plymouth, Mass. 02360.

Derby clothing sale

While sorting out those summer clothes before school starts, remember the Derby Clothing Sale is not far off.

All those outgrown items can be neatly stashed in large trash bags and become a bargain for some smart shoppers.

As well as clothing, the sale features sporting goods, housewares, toys, books and records and furniture, and arrangements can be made for pickup of items by calling 335-3394.

This fall the Derby Academy Parents' Association is scheduling the Clothing Sale for Oct. 15 and 16 at the school's gym located on Burditt Avenue in Hingham.
